And when the yere was out/ the host of the Syriens came agaynst hym: and they came to Juda and Jerusalem/ and destroyed all the Lordes of the people frō amonge the people and sent all the spoyle of them vnto the kynge to Damasco. And though the armie of Syria came with a smalle companye of men/ yet the Lorde delyuered a very great hoste into their handes, because they had forsaken the Lorde God of their fathers. And therto they serued Joas accordynge.

And as sone as they were departed from hym/ though they left hym in great diseases: yet hys awne seruauntes conspired agaynst him for the bloude of the chyldrē of Jehoiada the preste, & slue him on his beed. And when he was deed, they buryed hym in the cytye of Dauid: but not in the sepulchres of the kinges And these are they & conspired agaynst hym: Zabad the sonne of Samaath an Ammonite and Jehosabad the sonne of Simrith a Moabite. And hys sonnes and the summe of the taxe that came to hym/ and the foundacō of the house of God/ are writtē in the storie of the booke of kynges. And Amaziah hys sonne raygned in his steade.

¶ The.xxv. Chapter.

Amaziah was.xxv. yere olde when he begāne to raygne & he raygned xxix. yere in Jerusalē. Hys mother name was Jehoiadan of Jerusalē. And he did that pleased the Lorde: but not with the hoale hert. And as sone as he was setled in the kyngedome, he slue thē & killed the kynge hys father. But he slue not their chyldren as it is wrytten in the law/ euen in the boke of Moses to whome the Lorde commaunded sayinge:* the fathers shall not dye for the childrens causes, nor the chyldren for the fathers, but euery man shall dye for hys awne synne. And Amaziah gathered Juda to gether & made capitaynes ouer thousandes & ouer hundredes in the houses of their fathers throrowout all Juda and Beniamin. And he numbred them from twētye yere & aboue, & founde thē thre hundred thousande lustie mē able to go to battell/ and that couthe handle speare and shylde. And he hyred therto an hundred thousande fyghtynge men out of Joas. Israel/ for an hundred talentes of syluer.

But there came a man of God to him and sayde: kynge/ let not the armye of Israel go with the: for the Lorde is not with Israel nether with any of the house of Ephraim. Or elles yf thou neades wylt/ then go & do it/ & make thy selfe stronge to battell: & thou shalt se/ how God shall make the fall before thine enemyes. For God hath power to helpe or to cast doune. And Amaziah sayde agayne to the man of God/ what shall we do then, for the hundred talentes which I haue geuen vnto the hoste of Israel? And the man of God sayde: the Lorde is able to geue the moche moare then that.

And then Amaziah seuered the armie that was come to hym out of Ephraim/ to go whome agayne. Wherfore they were exceadynge wrothe with Juda/ & returned to their awne whome in great angre.

4.Reg.xiij.b host & went to Saltdale.* Where he slue of the childre of Seir ten thousande. And other ten thousande the chyldre of Juda toke alyue/ and carted them vnto the toppe of a rocke & cast them downe from the toppe of the rocke that they al to burst: but the men of the armie which Amaziah had turned backe & wolde not let go with his people to battell, ranne vpon the cities of Juda from Samaria vnto Bethhoron & slue thre thousande of them and wanne moche spoyle.

And it chaunced/ after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomits/ & had brought the Gods of the children of Seir, he set them vp to be his Gods & bowed hym selfe before them & burned ensence vnto them. Wherfore the Lorde was wroth with Amaziah & sent to him a prophete/ & sayde to him: why seketh thou the Gods of the people which were not able to deliuer their awne people out of thyne hande? And as the prophete spake to him he sayde to the prophete: haue men made the of the kynges councell? ceasse/ leste thou be beaten. And the prophete ceased & sayde: I am sure that God hath taken councell to destroye the, because thou hast done this/ & obeyest not my councell.

Then Amaziah kyng of Juda toke aduise & sent to Joas the sonne of Jehoahaz the sonne of Jehu kynge of Israel & sayde: come/ & let vs se ether other. And Joas kynge of Israel sent agayne to Amaziah king of Juda sayinge:
4.Reg.xiij.c a thistell in Libanon sent to a Cedar tree of Libanon sayinge: *geue thy daughter to my sonne to wife. But there came the wilde beastes of Libanon & troade downe the thistell. Thou thinkest: se/ I haue beaten the Edomits/ therfore thyne hert aryseth to glorifye thy selfe. Now byde at home: what neadeth the to prouoke to euell/ that thou perishe and Juda with the.

But Amaziah rested not: for it came of God/ that he delyuer them into the handes of their enemyes: & that because they had sought the Gods of the Edomites. And Joas kynge of Israel came vp: & they saw ether other/ both he & Amaziah kynge of Juda at Bethshames in Juda. And Juda was put to the worse before Israel/ & fled euery man to hys tent. And Joas kynge of Israel toke Amaziah kynge of Juda the sonne of Jehoas the sonne of* Ohoziah at Bethshames: & brought hym to Jerusalem, & tare the walle of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim vnto the corner gate, foure hundred cubytes longe. And he toke all the golde & syluer & all the Iuelles that were founde in the house of God wyth Obed Edom & the treasure of the kynges house and hostages/ and returned to Samaria.

The rest of the actes of Amaziah fyrst & last are writte in the boke of the kinges of Juda and Israel. And after that tyme that Amaziah dyd turne awaye from the Lorde/ they conspired treason agaynst hym in Jerusalem: and he fled to Lachis. Then all the people of Juda toke
4.Reg.xiij.c Oziah which was .xvi. yere olde, & made hym kynge in the rowme of hys father Amaziah. And he buylt Eloth and brought it agayne to Juda after the kyng was layde to rest with his fathers. Sixtene yere olde was Oziah whe he began to raygne, & he raygned .lii. yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Jecaliah of Jerusalem. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde/ in all poyntes as dyd hys father Amaziah. And he sought God whyle Zacharias the teacher to fe God lyued: and as longe as he sought the Lorde/ God made hym prosperе.

And he went to battell agaynst the Philistines & brake downe the walles of Geth/ & the walles of Jabneh & the walles of Asdod/ and buylt cities aboute Asdod & amonge the B Philistines. And God holpe him agaynst the Philistines & agaynst the Arabiens that dwelt in Gurbaal/ & agaynst the Meunites. And the Ammonites gaue tribute to Oziah/ and hys name spred abroade euen to Egipte: for he played the man & exceaded. Moreouer Oziah buylt towres in Jerusalem ouer the corner gate/ & ouer the valeye gate/ and ouer other corners/ and made them stronge. And he buylt towres in the wildernesse & digged many wells

Joatham. For he had moche catell/ bothe in the baley and also in the playne: and plowmen and vynedzessers in the mountaynes and in Charmel/ for he loued husbandrye.

And Dziah had an host of eyghtynge men that went out to warre in the armye & were tolde & numbred by Jeiel the scrybe & Maaseiah an officer/ vnder the hande of Hananiah one of ỹ kynges Lordes. And ỹ hoale nũbre of the auncyent heedes of the men of myght were. ij. thousande & syxe hundred and vnder the handes of thẽ was the armie of the hoste/ thre hundred & seuẽ thousand / & fyue hũdred that made warre wyth myght & strenght / to helpe the kynge agaynst hys enemyes. And ¶ Dziah prouyded thẽ thorow oute all ỹ hoste shildes/ speares/ helmetes/ habergynnes/ bowes & slynges for stones. And he made engynes in Jerusalem by the crafte of artificers to be on ỹ towres & corners/ to shote arowes & great stones wᵗ all. And hys name spreade farre abroade/ for he was wonderlye holpe/ vntyll he was become myghtye.

And in his greatnesse hys hert arose/ ỹ he was marred: & transgressed agaynst ỹ Lorde his God. For he went in to the temple of the Lorde to burne cense vpon the aulter of incense. But Asariah the preste went in after him with foure skore prestes of the Lorde ỹ were bolde men. And they stepte to Dziah ỹ kynge & sayde to him: it pertayneth not to the Dziah to burne cense vnto the Lorde/ but to the prestes the chyldren of Aaron that are cõsecrate for to burne incense. Come out of the D sanctuarye, for thou hast trespaced / and it shalbe no worshepe to ỹ before ỹ Lorde God.

And Dziah was wroth & had cense in hys hande to offer/ and in his indignacõ agaynst the preste, * ỹ leprosye sprãge in his forehed before the prestes in the house of the Lorde/ euen besyde the incense aulter. And Asariah the chefe preste wᵗ all the other prestes loked vpon hym: & beholde he was a leper in his forehed/ & they hyed him thence. And therto he was fayne to go out/ because ỹ Lorde had plaged him. And Dziah the kynge cõtynued a lepre vnto the daye of his deethe & dwelt in an house at sybertye: how be it / he was cast out of the house of the Lorde. And Joatham his sonne had the gouernaunce of the kynges house and iudged the people of the lande.

The rest of the actes of Dziah both fyrst and last/ did Esaiah the prophete the sonne of Amos write. And when Dziah was layde to rest with his fathers/ they buryed him wᵗ his fathers in ỹ felde of the buriall of the kinges. For they sayde: he is a leper. And Joathã his sonne raygned in hys steade.

The.xxvij.Chapter.

Joatham was.xxv.yere olde when he begãne to raygne, and raygned xvi.yere in Jerusalẽ. Hys mothers name was Jerusah ỹ daughter of Sadoc. And he dyd that pleased ỹ Lorde in all poyntes as dyd hys father Dziah: saue/ that he came not to the temple of the Lorde/ and that the people dyd yet corrupt them selues. He built the hie gate of the tẽple of ỹ Lorde/ & on the walle Ophel he buylt moche. Moreouer he built cytyes in the mountaynes of Juda/ and in the wood coũtre he built castelles and towres.

And he fought with the kynge of ỹ childrẽ of Ammon/ and preuayled agaynst thẽ. And ¶ the chyldrẽ of Ammõ gaue him the same yere an hundred talẽtes of syluer/ & tẽ thousande quarters of whete & as moche barleye. So moche also did ỹ chyldrẽ of Ammon geue him the seconde yere and the thyrde too. And Joatham became myghtie/ because he directed hys waye before the Lorde hys God.

The rest of ỹ actes of Joatham & all hys D warres and hys wayes are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel & Juda. He was xxv.yere olde when he beganne to raygne/ & raygned xvi.yere in Jerusalẽ. And whẽ Joathã was layde to reste with hys fathers/ they buryed hym in the cytye of Dauid: and Ahaz his sonne raygned in his steade.

¶ The.xxviij.Chapter.

Ahaz was.xx.yere olde when he beganne to raygne and raygned.xvi. yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd not that pleased the Lorde/ as dyd hys father Dauid: but walked in ỹ wayes of the kynges of Israel/ and made therto Baals of metall. And he offered cense in the baleye of ỹ childrẽ of Hennon/ and burnt hys childrẽ in fyre after the abhominacyon of the nacyons which ỹ Lord cast out before ỹ chyldrẽ of Israel. And he offered burnt cense in hyllaulters and on moũtaynes & vnder euery grene tre. J ny.Reg.xvi.a.

Wherfore ỹ Lorde his God delyuered him into the hand of the kynge of the Syriens: whych bet him & caryed awaye a great multitude of his captiue in to Damascon. And therto he was delyuered into the hande of the kynge of Israel which slue of hys a myghtye slaughter. For Phaseh ỹ sonne of Romeliah slue in Juda an hundred & twẽtye thousand in one daye/ & all fyghtynge men: & that because they had forsaken ỹ Lorde God of their fathers. And Zechri a myghtye man in moũt Ephraim slue Maaseiah the kynges sonne/ & Ezricam the Lorde stuarde of houshold/ and Elcanah that was nexte to the kynge. And the B chyldren of Israel toke prysoners of theire brethren two hundred thousand wyues/sonnes & daughters, & herto caryed awaye moche spoyle of them/and brought it to Samaria.

But there was a prophete of the Lordes named Obed which went out to ye Host that came to Samaria & sayde to them: Se/because ye Lorde God of youre fathers was wroth wt Juda, he deliuered them into youre handes. And ye haue slayne them with cruelnesse yt reacheth vp to heauen. And now ye purpose to kepe vnder the chyldren of Juda and Jerusalem & to make them bondemen and bondwemen. What other thynge do ye (ye vnhappye) then offende ye Lorde youre God. But now heare me/& delyuer the captyues agayne which ye haue taken of youre brethren: for the great wrath of the Lorde is vpon you.

And certayne of the heedes of ye chyldren of Ephraim/as Azariah ye sonne of Johanan Barachiah ye sonne of Meshemeloth/Ezekiah the sonne of Selum & Amasa ye sonne of Hadalai stode vp agaynst them that came fro warre/ and sayde vnto them: ye shall not bringe in the captiues hyther. For where we haue offended the Lorde all readye/ye entende to adde more to oure synnes & trespace. For oure trespace is great all readye/ & there is fearce wrath vpō Israel. And vpon ye the men of armes lefte the captyues & the spoyle before the Lordes & all the congregacyon.

And there arose certayne apoynted therto by name/& toke the prysoners & clothed all ye were naked amōge them/of ye spoyle, & arayed them & shoed them & gaue them to eate & to drinke & anoynted them/ & caryed all that were feble of them vpon asses & brought them to Jericho ye citie of Paulme trees fast by their brethren: and then returned to Samaria agayne.

And at that same tyme kynge Ahaz sent vnto the kynges of Assur to haue helpe. And the Edomites came yet agayne & slue of Juda & caryed awaye some captyues. And the Philistins inuaded ye cities in ye lowe countrey and the south of Juda: and toke Bethshames/ Aialon, Gaderoth & Socoh with the townes longynge therto & Thimna with ye townes of the same. & Gimso with her townes, & dwelt therin. For the Lorde brought Juda lowe/ because of Ahaz kynge of Juda which made Juda naked & transgressed agaynst ye Lorde. And Thiglath palneser kynge of Assur came vpō him and besieged him but preuayled not agaynst him. For Ahaz toke awaye out of ye house of the Lorde & out of the kynges house & out of the Lordes houses/ & gaue vnto the kynge of Assur though it holpe him not. And herto in the very tyme of his tribulacion did kynge Ahaz trespace yet moare agaynst the Lorde. For he offered vnto the Gods of them of Damasco which bette him & sayd because the Gods of the Syriens healpe them, therfore will I offer to them/ that they maye helpe me also. But they were his destruccion & the destruccion of all Israel. And Ahaz gathered to gether the vessels of the house of God and brake them/ & shut vp the dores of the house of the Lorde, & made him aulters in all corners of Jerusalē. And in all ye cities of Juda cytye by cytie he made hyaulters to burne incense vnto other Gods/ & angred ye Lord God of his fathers. The rest of his actes & all his wayes bothe first & last are writtē in the boke of the kinges of Juda & Israel. And whē Ahaz was layde to rest wt his fathers/they buryed him in the cytye of Jerusalem: but brought hym not vnto ye sepulchres of the kinges of Juda.

And* Hezekiah his sōne raigned in his stede

* Or (as some wyll) Jehezekiah.

¶ Hezekiah restoreth vnto the temple of ye Lorde all the thynge ye had not bene regarded of hys predecessoures.

¶ The .xxix. Chapter.

HEzekiah begāne to raygne whē he was .xxv. yere olde/ & raygned .xxix. yere in Jerusalē. And his mothers name was Abiah the daughter of Zacharias. And he dyd that was right in the syght of the Lorde in all poyntes as did Dauid his father. He opened the dores of ye house of the Lorde in ye fyrst yere & fyrst moneth of his raigne/ & repaired them. And he brought in the prestes & the Leuites & geathered them to gether in to ye east strete: & sayde vnto them.

Heare me ye Leuites: purifye youre selues & halow the house of the Lorde God of youre fathers/ & bringe out ye fylthinesse out of the holy place. For oure fathers haue trespaced & done euell fauoredly in ye eyes of ye Lord oure God: & haue forsake him/and turned awaye theire faces fro ye habitacio of ye Lorde & turned to their backes. And beside ye they haue shut vp ye dores of ye porche & quenched ye lāpes & haue neither burned ince nor offered burntoffrynges in ye holy place vnto ye God of Israel.

Wherfore ye wrath of ye Lord fell on Juda & Jerusalē: & he shattered them & made them so thynne that men bisse at it, euē as ye se with youre eyes. For se/ oure fathers were ouerthrowē with the swerde & oure sonnes/oure daughters & oure wiues were caried awaye captiue for ye same cause. Now haue I in my hert to stryke a couenaunt wt the Lorde God of Israel: & his wrath may cease. Now therfore my sonnes be not negligent: for ye Lorde hath chosen you to stande before him/and for to ministre and burne offerynges to him.

Then ye Leuites arose: Mahath ye sonne of Amasai & Joel ye sonne of Azariah beynge of the children of ye Cahathites: & the sonnes of Merari, Kis the sonne of Abdi & Azariah the sonne of Jehaleel: & of ye Gersonites, Joah the sonne ȳ sonne of Simma ȳ Eden ȳ sonne of Ioah: ȳ of ȳ sonnes of Elizaphan, Simri ȳ Iesiel: ȳ of the sonnes of Asaph/ Zacharias ȳ Mathanias: ȳ of the sonnes of Heman/ Iehiel ȳ Semei: ȳ of ȳ sonnȝ of Iedithun/ Semaias ȳ Oziel. And they geathered their brethrē ȳ purifyed thē selues/ ȳ then wēt at ȳ cōmaūdemēt of the kyng by the worde of the Lord/ for to clense the house of the Lorde. And the preastȝ wēt into ȳ house of ȳ Lorde to clense it/ ȳ brought out all the vnclennesse that they founde in ȳ tēple of ȳ Lord/ ȳ in ȳ courte of the house of the Lorde. And the Leuites toke it ȳ caried it out in to the broke Cedrō. They begāne the fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth to purifye/ ȳ came the eight daye to the porche of the Lord: so ȳ they had purged the house of the Lorde in eight dayes and the .xvi. daye of the fyrst moneth they made an ende.

And then they wēt in to Hezekiah ȳ kyng ȳ sayde: we haue clensed all the house of the Lord/ ȳ the aulter of burntoffrynȝ wyth all his vessels/ ȳ ȳ shewbreede table with all his apparell: ȳ therto all the vessels which kyng Ahaz dyd cast a syde when he raygned ȳ trāsgressed/ them we haue repayred ȳ sanctifyed: ȳ se/ they are before the aulter of the Lorde.

* Or/ Iehyze. And* Hezekiah the kyng rose erlye ȳ geathered the Lordes of the cytye ȳ went vp to the house of the Lorde. And there were brought seuē oxen/ seuē rammes/ seuē lambes ȳ seuē kyddes to be a synneoffrynge for the kyngdom/ for the sanctuarye ȳ for Iuda. And he cōmaunded the preastes ȳ sonnes of Aaron to offer them on the aulter of the Lorde.

And they slue ȳ oxē: ȳ ȳ preastȝ receaued ȳ bloude ȳ sprynkled it on ȳ aulter: and they slue the rammes ȳ sprynkled the bloude vpō the aulter: ȳ they slue the lambes ȳ sprynkled ȳ bloud vpō ȳ aulter. And then they brought forth the kydes of ȳ synneoffryng before ȳ kyng ȳ ȳ cōgregaciō which put their hādes vpon thē. And the preastes slue thē ȳ offered the bloude of thē vpō the aulter, to make satisfaccion for all Israel: for the kynge sayde: ȳ the burntoffryng ȳ ȳ synneoffryng shulde serue for all Israel. And they set the Leuites in the house of the Lord wt cymbales/ psalteries ȳ harpes accordyng to ȳ cōmaundemēt of Dauid ȳ of Gad the kynges sear of visiōs ȳ of Nathan the prophete. For so was the cōmaundemēt of the Lorde thorow the hāde of his prophetes. And so the Leuites stode with the instrumentes of Dauid/ and the preastes wt trompettes. And Hezekiah cōmaunded to offer the burntoffryng vpon the aulter. And whē the burntoffryng begaune/ ȳ songe of ȳ Lorde begaune/ ȳ the trompettes with the instrumentes of Dauid kyng of Israel. And all ȳ cōgregacion bowed thē selues/ and the syngers sange/ ȳ the trōpettes blew/ ȳ cōtinued vntyll ȳ burntoffryng was fynesshed.

And whē they had made an ende of ȳ burntoffryng/ ȳ kyng ȳ all ȳ were wt him kneled downe ȳ bowed thē selues ȳ gaue prayse ȳ thanckes. And Hezekiah the kyng ȳ ȳ lordȝ bade ȳ Leuites to prayse ȳ Lord wt ȳ wordȝ of Dauid ȳ of Asaph ȳ sear of visions. And the Leuites praysed ȳ they reioyced agayne/ and the other stowped ȳ bowed them selues. ¶

And Hezekiah answered ȳ sayd: now ȳ ye haue fylled youre hādes to ȳ Lord/ go to and bryng in ȳ sacrefyces ȳ thankoffrynȝ in to ȳ house of ȳ Lord. And ȳ cōgregaciō brought in the sacrefyces ȳ thankoffrynges/ ȳ all ȳ were wyllyng brought burntoffrynges. And ȳ nūbre of ȳ burntoffrynges which ȳ cōgregacion brought in was .lxx. oxē ȳ an hūdred rāmes ȳ two hūdred lambes: ȳ all for burntoffrynges to the Lord. And besyde ȳ they dedicated sixe hūdred oxē ȳ thre thousand shepe.

But the preastes were to few/ ȳ were not able to flaye all ȳ burntoffrynges. Wherfore their brethrē the Leuites holpe them tyll the worke was ended/ ȳ vntill the preastes were sanctifyed. For the Leuitȝ were purer herted to sanctifie thē selues then the preastes. And therto ȳ burntoffrynges were manye wt the fatte of the peaceoffrynges ȳ the drynckoffrynges ȳ belonged to the burntoffryngȝ. And so the seruyce pertaynynge to the house of ȳ Lord wēt forward. And Hezekiah reioyced ȳ all the people/ ȳ God had made ȳ folcke so readye: for the thynge was sodenly done.

¶ The .xxx. Chapter.

And Hezekiah sent to all Israel ȳ Iuda: ȳ therto wrote letters to Ephraim ȳ Manasseh, ȳ they shulde come to the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem/ to offer passouer vnto the Lorde God of Israel. And the kyng helde a counceil with his Lordes and all the cōgregacyon at Ierusalem to kepe the feast of passouer in ȳ seconde moneth. For they coulde not kepe it at ȳ time: for there were not preastes inowe sanctifyed/ nether was ȳ people geathered to geather to Ierusalē. And ȳ thyng pleased the kyng ȳ all the cōgregacion. And they decreed ȳ it shulde be proclaymed thorow out all Israel frō Berlsabe to Dan/ ȳ they shulde come ȳ holde ȳ feast of passouer vnto ȳ Lord God of Israel at Ierusalem: for they had not often done it/ as it is writtē how they shuld.

And the messengers wēt with letters of ȳ hand of the kyng ȳ of his Lordes thorow out all Israell and Iuda/ at the cōmaundement of the kyng which sayde: chyldren of Israel/ turne agayne vnto the Lord God of Abrahā/ Isaac and Israel, and so wyll he turne to the remnaunt of you that are escaped out of the A handes of the kynge of Assur. And be ye not lyke youre fathers and youre brethrē which trespaced agaynst ꝑ Lorde of youre fathers/whych therfore gaue them vp that they are B wasted as ye se. Wherfore be not styffenec-ked lyke vnto youre fathers/but yelde youre selues vnto ꝑ Lord/& come to his holy place which he hath sanctified for euer/ and serue

the Lorde youre God/ that hys wrath maye turne frō you. For yf ye turne vnto ꝑ Lorde/then youre brethrē & youre childrē shall fynde cōpassion in the presence of thē that holde thē captyue/ that they maye come agayne vnto this lande: for the Lorde youre God is full of mercye and compassyō, & wyll not turne hys face from you/yf ye turne agayne to him.

And the postes went from cytie to cytye thorou oute the lande of Ephraim and Manasseh & euē vnto Zabulō. But they laughed them to shorne & mocked thē. Neuertheles yet dyuerse of Aser/ Manasseh and of Zabu lon meakened thē selues & came to Jerusalem. And therto the hād of God was in Juda/to make thē of one accorde to do the cōmaundement of the kyng & the capitaynes/ whych was accordyng to ꝑ worde of the Lord. And so there assembled to Jerusalē moch people & a myghtie great congregacion, to holde the feast of swete breade in the seconde moneth.

And they arose and put awaye ꝑ aulters
C ꝑ were in Jerusalem. And therto all the incense they dyd awaye & cast thē into ꝑ broke Cedron. And they slue passeouer ꝑ fourtene daye of the second moneth. And the preastes & Leuites sanctifyed thē selues for shame/& brought in ꝑ burntofferynges into ꝑ house of the Lorde. And they stode in their stādyng after their maner accordynge to the lawe of Moses ꝑ mā of God. And ꝑ preastes sprynkled the bloude receauynge it of the handes of ꝑ Leuites. And because there were many in the cōgregacion ꝑ were not sanctifyed: and therfore dyd ꝑ Leuites sley passeouer for all ꝑ were not cleane to sanctifye thē to ꝑ Lord.

There was very moche people oute of Ephraim, Manasseh, Issakar and Zabulon ꝑ were not cleane/ and therfore dyd eate passeouer otherwyse then wrytynge specifyeth.
But Hezekiah prayed for thē & sayd: ꝑ good Lorde be mercyfull to all ꝑ sett their hertes to seke the God ꝑ is the Lorde God of their fathers/though they do it not accordynge to D the clennesse of the holy place. And the Lord heard Hezekiah & healed the people. And so the childrē of Israel that were founde at Jerusalem held the feast of swete breade seuē dayes with great gladnesse/ and the Leuites and the preastes praysed the Lorde daye by daye with lowde instrumentes.

And Hezekiah spake hertely vnto ꝑ Leui-tes that had good vnderstādyng of the Lord.
And they dyd eate that feast seuē dayes long & offered peaceofferynges & thanked ꝑ Lord God of their fathers. And the hoale assemble toke councell to kepe seuē dayes moo: & they held those seuē dayes wt gladnesse. For Hezekiah kyng of Juda gaue for heaueoffrynges to ꝑ cōgregacīō a thousand oxen & seuē thou sand shepe. And ꝑ Lords gaue to ꝑ cōgrega-cyon for heaueoffrynges a thousand oxen & ten thousand shepe. And the preastes sanctifyed them selues/that they were mowe.

And all the cōgregacion of Juda with the preastes & Leuites / & all the congregacyon that came out of Israel and the straungers/both that came out of the lande of Israel and ꝑ dwelt in Juda/ reioysed: & there was great ioye in Jerusalē. For sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of David kyng of Israel it happened not so in Jerusalē. And the preastes & the Leuites arose & blessed the people/ and their voyce was hearde / & their prayer went vp vnto his holy dwellyng place heauen.

C After Hezekiah had called agayne the people vnto ꝑ worge of the Lorde he ordeyned the preastes vnto whō he cōmaundeth to gene tythes.

C The .xxxi. Chapter.

And whē they had finesshed all this:
then all Israel that were founde in the cyties of Juda / went oute and brake the Images & cut downe the A groues/and all to brake the hyaulters and ꝑ other aulters thorow out all Juda & Beniamin/ Ephraim and Manasseh/ vntyll they had made an ende of thē. And afterwarde all the children of Israel returned euery man to his possessyon in their awne cyties.

And Hezekiah set ꝑ preastes and the Le-uites in their order to waye by course/ euery mā accordīng to his office whither preaste or Leuite: for ꝑ burntoffrings & peaceofferings/& to mynistre & to thanke and to prayse in the gates of the lodge of the Lord. And the kyng gaue a porcyon of his substaunce for burntoffrynges at morynyng & euē/ & for burntofferynges on ꝑ Sabothdayes & new monys & other solempne feasts/accordyng* as it is wrytten in the lawe of the Lorde. And he bade ꝑ people ꝑ dwelt in Jerusalē to gene ꝑ parte * Num.xxviij & of the preastes & Leuites / ꝑ they myght be B mayntened in the lawe of the Lorde. And as sone as the worde came abroade the children of Israel brought aboundāce of fyrst frutes of corne/wyne/oyle & honye / & of all maner of frutes of ꝑ feld: & the tythes of all maner of thyngs brought they in plēteously. And ꝑ children of Israel and Juda that dwelte in ꝑ cytes of Juda, they also brought in ꝑ tythes of oxen & shepe / & tythes of dedycate thyngs which

which were dedicated to the Lord their God/ and put thē on heapes. In the thirde moneth they begaune to laye the heapes/ & kynesshed them the seuenth.

And whē Hezekiah and the Lordes came & saw the heapes/ they blessed the Lorde and his people Israel. And Hezekiah questioned with the preastes & the Leuites concernyng the heapes. And Azariah the chefe preaste of the house of Sadock answered him and sayde lense they beganne to bryng the heaue offerynges into the house of the Lorde/ we haue eaten and had ynough/ and yet lefte aboundaunce/ for the Lorde hath blessed his people and therof is this heape lefte. And Hezekiah bade dresse vp the store houses aboute the house of the Lorde. And so they dyd/ and caryed in the heaue offerynges and the tythes and the dedycat gyftes euen of fydelyte.

Ouer which Chonaniah the Leuite had the rule with Semei his brother next to hī. And Iehiel/ Asariah/ Nahath/ Asael, Jerimoth Iosabad/ Eliel/ Ismachiah/ Mahath and Bananiah were ouer seare ordeyned by Chonaniah and Semei his brother, at the appoyntement of Hezekiah the kyng/ and Asariah the ruler of the house of God. And Chore the sonne of Jemna the Leuite porter of the Est dore had the ouerlyght of the frewyll offerynges of God/ to geue heaue offrynges vnto the Lorde and was ouer thynges most holy. And vnder him were Eden/ Miniamin/ Jesua / Semeiah/ Amariah and Sechemiah in the cytes of the preastes of their fydelyte/ to geue to their brethren their porcyons/ as well to the small as to the great.

And to the males also that were reckened from thre yere and aboue amonge all that wēt in to the house of the Lord daye by daye/ to do seruyce and to wayte by course. And to the preastes that were reckened in the housholdes of their fathers from twentie yere & aboue / to wayte when their courses came. And to them that were reckened thorow out all their babes/ wyues / sonnes and daughters thorow out all the congregacion. For to the fydelytie of thē dyd men comitt their sanctified gyftes. And therto amonge the children of Aaron the preastes were men named by name in the feldes of the suburbes of all their cytes/ cytie by cytie/ for to geue porcions to all the males of the preastes / and to all that were reckened amonge the Leuites.

And of this maner dyd Hezekiah thorow out all Juda. and dyd that was good/ ryghte and truthe/ before the Lorde his God. And in all the worckes that he beganne in the seruyce of the house of God/ to seke his God after the lawe and commaundement/ that dyd he with all his herte/ and prospered.

Sennaherib/ which shulde haue besieged Jerusalē is stryken of the Aungell. Hezekiah dyeth after whō succeadeth Manaseh.

The xxxij. Chapter.

After these deades & truthe / Sennaherib kyng of Assur came & entred in to Juda & pytched agaynst the stroge cytes & thought to drawe thē to him. And when Hezekiah sawe that Sennaherib was come and that he was purposed to fyght agaynst Jerusalē: he toke councell with his capitaynes & men of might/ to stoppe the water of the fountaynes that were without the cytie: & they were content to helpe hym. And so there gathered moche people to gether & stopte all the welles & the broke that ranne thorow the myddes of the lande/ entendynge that the kyngs of Assur shulde not fynde moche water when they came. And he wēt to lustelye & built vp the walle where it was brokē/ and made towres aboue vpon/ & yet another wall without/ and repayred Melo the cytye of Dauid/ and made many dartes & shildes.

And he sett Capitaynes of warre ouer the people & gathered thē to gether into the large strete of the gate of the citie & spake lentelye to them/ saying. Plucke vp youre hertes and be strong: Be not afrayed or in any wyse discouraged for dreade of the kyng of Assur / & of the great multitude that is with him: for there is one greater with vs then with him. With him is an arme of flesh: But with vs is the Lorde oure God for to helpe vs and to fyght oure batayles. And the people were well couraged with the wordes of Hezekiah kyng of Juda.

After that Sēnaherib kyng of Assur sent of his seruaunts to Jerusalē (he hym selfe lynge before Lachis & all his kyngdom with him) vnto Hezekiah kyng of Juda & vnto all Juda that were at Jerusalē sayīg. Thus sayth Sēnaherib kyng of Assur: where in do ye trust, that ye abyde be seged in Jerusalē? Hezekiah deceaueth you/ to delyuer you to deeth/ hōgre/ & thrust sayīg: the Lord oure God shall ryde vs out of the hāde of the kyng of Assur. Is it not that Hezekiah hath put downe his hyaulters & his other aulters/ & cōmaunded Juda and Jerusalem sayinge: before one aulter ye shall bowe youre selues & vpon that offer also.

Moreouer haue ye not hearde what I & my fathers haue done vnto the people of all landes: were the Gods of the people of other lands able to saue there lādes out of my hād: which of all the Gods of those nacyons that my fathers destroyed was it, that coulde delyuer his people out of myne hand / that youre God shuld be able to deliuer you out of myne hande: Wherfore now lett not Hezekiah deceaue you ether perswade you of thys facyon / nor yet beleue hym. For as no God amonge amonge so manye nacyons & kyngdomes/ was able to ryddehys people out of myne hãde & the hãdes of my fathers: euẽ so moche lesse shall youre God kepe you oute of myne hãde. And yet moare dyd his seruaũtꝭ speake agaynst the Lord God & agaynst his seruaũt Hezekiah. And therto he wrote a letter to raile on ỹ Lord God of Israel & spake therin sayĩg: as the Gods of the nacyons of other landes haue not delyuered their people out of myne hande / no moare shall the God of Hezekiah delyuer hys people out of myne hande. And they cryed wyth a lowde voyce in the Iewes speache vnto ỹ people of Jerusalem ỹ were on the walles / to feare them and to dysmaye them that they myght haue taken the cytye.

But Hezekiah the kyng and the prophete Isaiah sonne of Amoz prayed concernyng ỹ thynge & cryed vp to heauen. And the Lorde sent an angell & destroyed all the mẽ of warre and the Lordꝭ & capitaynes of the hoste of the kyng of Assur ỹ he turned his face with shame towarde his awne lande. And whẽ he was come in to the house of his God, he was there ouerthrowen vỹ the swerde euẽ by thẽ that issued oute of hys bowelles. And so the Lorde saued Hezekiah & the enhabyters at Jerusalem out of the handes of Sennaherib kynge of Assur & of all other / & mayntened thẽ on all sydes. In so moche that manye brought presentes vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem and precyouse gyftes to Hezekiah kyng of Juda. so that he was magnified in ỹ sight of all nacyons from thence forth.

¶ In those dayes Hezekiah was sycke vnto the deeth and besought the Lorde: which answered hym & shewed him a wonderfull myracle: But Hezekiah dyd not accordyng to the curtesye shewed hym / for his hert arose: and therfore came there wrath vpon hym & vpon Juda and Jerusalẽ. Not withstãdyng Hezekiah mekened him selfe for ỹ arysyng of hys herte bothe he and the enhabyters of Jerusalem. Wherfore the wrath of the Lord fell not vpon them in the dayes of Hezekiah.

And Hezekiah had exceadynge moche ryches & honoure. And he geathered hym treasure of syluer, gould, precyouse stones, spices, shildes & of all maner pleasaũt Juelles: & made store houses for the frutes of corne/ wyne & oyle: & stables for all maner of beastes, and foldes for shepe. And he made hym townes because he had catell of shepe & oxen great aboundance. For God had geuen hym substaunce exceadyng moche. And the same Hezekiah stopped the vpper water sprynges of Gihon & brought them downe to the west syde of ỹ cytie of Dauid. And Hezekiah prospered in all his worckes. But when the Imbassadoures of the Lordes of Babylon were sent to him to enquyre of the wonder ỹ chaũced in the land/ God lefte him: to tempte hym & all that was in his hert myght be knowen.

The rest of the dedes of Hezekiah and his goodnesse are writtẽ in the bisyon of Isaiah the prophete the sonne of Amoz in ỹ boke of ỹ kynges of Juda and Israel. And then Hezekiah layde him to rest with hys fathers / and they buryed him in the hyest sepulchre of the sonnes of Dauid: and Juda & the enhabiters of Jerusalẽ dyd him worshippe at his deeth. And Manasseh his sonne raigned i his steade.

¶ Manasseh is taken prysoner / and after he cometh oute he destroyeth the Idoles. He dyeth / and after him succeadeth Amon. After Amõ was kylled of his awne people Josiah his sonne raygneth for him.

¶ The .xxxiij. Chapter.

Manasseh was .xij. yere olde whẽ he was made kyng, & raigned lv yere in Jerusalẽ. And he dyd wickedlye in the syght of the Lord/ lyke vnto the abhominacions of the hethen which the Lorde cast out before the chyldren of Israel. For he wẽt to & buylt agayne the hyaulters which Hezekiah his father had brokẽ downe. And he rered vp aulters vnto Baals & made groues & bowed him selfe vnto all the host of heauẽ and serued them. And he buylt aulters in the house of the Lorde: Of which ỹ Lorde had sayde * in Jerusalẽ shall my name be for euer. And he made aulters vnto all the hoste of heauen in the two courtes of the house of the Lorde. And he burnt his chyldren in fyre in the valey of the sonnes of Hennon. And he obserued dysmalle dayes & occupyed wytchcraft & sorsery / and mayntened workers with spirites & fears of fortunes: & wrought moche euell in the syght of ỹ Lord, to angre him with all.

And he put the kerued Image of an Idole which he had made / in the house of God. Of which house God sayde to Dauid and to Salomon his sonne, in this house here in Jerusalẽ which I haue chosen out of all ỹ tribes/ * I wyll put my name for euer/ & no moare bryng ỹ feate of Israel frõ of the land which I haue ordeyned for youre fathers. If so be they shalbe dylygent to doo all I haue commaunded by Moses in all the lawe ordinaces and maners. But Manasseh made Juda and the enhabiters of Jerusalem to erre and to do worse then the heathẽ which the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Israel. And when the Lorde spake to Manasseh & to hys people, they attended not to him.

Wherfore the Lorde brought vpon them the Capitaynes of the hoste of the Kynge of Assur/

Assur/which toke Manasseh in an holde and bounde him w chaynes & caryed him to Babilon. And when he was in tribulacyon he besought the Lorde his God, & humbled himselfe exceadyngly before the God of hys fathers/& made intercessyon to hym: & he was entreated of him and hearde hys prayer and brought him agayne to Jerusalem into hys kyngdō. And then Manasseh knewe how & the Lorde was the very God.

After & he buylt a wall without the cytye of Dauid on & west syde of Gihon in & broke & so forth to fysh gate & roūde aboute Ophel & brought it vp of a very great heyght, & put capitaynes of warre in all the stronge cities of Juda. And he toke awaye straunge Gods & the Idole out of the house of God/ & all the aulters that he had buylt in the mount of the house of God & in Jerusalem / & cast thē out of the cytie. And he made an aulter vnto the Lord & sacrefyced theron peaceofferynges & thankofferynges/ & charged Juda to serue & Lord God of Israel. Neuertheles & people dyd offer styll in the hylaulters, how be it vnto the Lorde their God onlye.

D The rest of the actes of Manasseh and his prayer vnto his God/& the wordes of the seers of vysions & spake to him in the name of the Lorde God of Israel/are writtē amonge the deades of the kynges of Israel. And his prayer & how that he was hearde / & all hys synne & trespace/ & the places where he made hylaulters & set vp groues & kerued Images before he was mekened are writtē amōge & deades of the seers of vysions. And when Manasseh was layde to rest w his fathers they buryed him in his awne house: and Amon hys sonne raigned in his rowme. Amon was .xxij. yere olde/when he begānne to raigne / & raygned two yere in Jerusalē. And he dyd & displeased the Lord lyke vnto Manasseh his father/ for Amō sacrificed to all & kerued Images which Manasseh his father made/ & serued them, & mekened not hī selfe before the Lord as Manasseh his father had mekened himselfe: But Amon trespaced greatly. Wherfore his awne seruauntes conspired agaynst hym and slue him in his awne house. And the people of the land slue all & had conspired agaynst kynge Amon. And therto & people of the lāde made Josiah his sonne kyng in his rowme.

C Josiah destroyeth the Idoles & reformeth the temple: in which is founde the boke of the lawe. He sendeth to Holdah the prophetesse for councell.

The .xxxiiij. Chapter.

Josiah was made kynge when he was .viij. yere olde/ & he raigned in Jerusalē .xxxi. yere. And he dyd & pleased the Lord/ & walcked in the ways of Dauid his father bowing neyther to the ryght hande or to the lefte. In so moche & the eight yere of his raigne / whē he was yet a lad/ he begāne to seke after the God of Dauid his father. And in & twelueth yere he beganne to pourge Juda & Jerusalē of hyaulters/groues/kerued Images/and Images of metall: so & they brake downe the aulters of Baals euē in his presence / & the dooles that were vpon thē/ he caused to be destroyed. And the groues, kerued Images, and Images of metall he brake & made dust of thē & strawed it vpon the graues of thē that had offered to thē. And he burnt the bones of & preastes vpō the aulters/ & clensed Juda and Jerusalem. And euē so dyd he in the cytes of Manasseh/ Ephraim/ Simeō & of Nephthali therto. And in & wyldernesses of thē roūde about he plucked a sonder the aulters & the groues and did beate thē & stampe them to powder, and bete downe the dooles throrow out all the lande of Israel: & then returned to Jerusalē agayne.

In the .xviij. yere of his raigne whē he had purged & lād & & tēple, he sent Saphan the sonne of Azaliah/and Maasiah & gouernoure of the cytie and Joah & sonne of Joahaz the recorder / to repayre the house of the Lorde his God. And when they came to Helkiah the hye preaste/men deliuered thē & money that was brought in to & house of God/ which the Leuites that kept the entres had gathered of & hādes of Manasseh & Ephraim & of all & yet remayned in Israel & of all Juda & Bēiamin & of & enhabiters of Jerusalē. And they put it in the hādes of & workemen that had the ouersyght of the house of & Lord. which gaue it to & labourers that wroughte on the house of the Lord, to repayre & mende it/ & to masons and carpenters to bye hewed stone & timbre for to make couples & beames for & houses which & kinges of Judah had destroied: And & men wrought in & worcke of fidelite.

C And the ouer seers of thē to courage them forwarde/were Jahath & Obadiah Leuites of the childrē of Merari: and Secharia and Mesulam of the childrē of the Cahathites/ & as manye other of & Leuites as couldē skille of instrumētes of Musick. And ouer & bearers of burthens & ouer all that wrought/ in whatsoeuer workemanshype it were / were there scribes/officers & porters of & Leuites.

And as they brought out & money & was brought into the house/ Helkiah the preaste foūde the boke of the lawe of the Lord genē by Moses. And Helkiah answered and sayd to Saphan the scrybe: I haue founde & boke of the lawe in the house of the Lorde/ & gaue the boke to Saphan. And Saphan caryed the boke to the kyng/ and brought the kynge worde agayne/saying: all & was cōmitted to thy seruauntes, that do they. And they haue powred powred out the money that was founde in ỹ house of the Lorde and haue delyuered in to the hãdes of the ouer seers of ỹ worckemen. And then Saphan ỹ scribe shewed ỹ kyng/ saying: Helkiah the preaste hath geuen me a boke/ and he read it before the kyng.

And whẽ the kyng had hearde the wordes of the lawe/ he tare his clothes/ & cõmaũded Helkiah and Ahikam the sonne of Saphan and Abadon the sonne of Micah & the sayde Saphan the scribe & Asaia a seruaunt of the kynges/ saying: go & enquire of the Lord for me & for thẽ ỹ are lefte in Israel and Juda/ cõcernyng the wordꝭ of the boke ỹ is foũde. For great is the wrath of the Lord ỹ is fallẽ vpon vs/ because oure fathers kept not the worde of the Lord/ to do after all ỹ is writtẽ in this boke.

And Helkiah wt thẽ that pertayned to the kyng went to Holdah a prophetisse wyfe of Selum ỹ sonne of Thekohath the sonne of Hasarah keper of the wardrope (which prophetisse dweit in Jerusalẽ in ỹ secõde warde) & they comuned so wt her. And she sayde vnto thẽ: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel/ tell ye ỹ man ỹ sent you to me. Euẽ thus sayth ỹ Lorde: se/ I will bryng euell vpõ this place and vpon the enhabiters therof/ euen all the curses ỹ are writtẽ in the boke which they haue reade before the kyng of Juda/ because they haue forsakẽ me and haue offered vnto other Gods to angre me wt all maner worckꝭ of their hãdꝭ/ therfore is my wrath set on fyre aga ynst thys place & shall not be quenched.

And as for the kynge of Juda which sent you to enquire of the Lorde/ so shall ye saye vnto him: thus sayth the Lord God of Israel cõcernyng the wordꝭ which thou hast hearde Because thyne hert dyd melt and thou dydest meke thy selfe before God whẽ thou hardest his wordes agaynst this place and agaynst the enhabiters therof: & humbledest thy selfe before me/ and tarest thy clothes and wepest before me/ ỹ haue I hearde also sayth ỹ Lord. Beholde I wyll take ỹ to thy fathers & thou shalt be put in thy graue in peace/ and thyne eyes shall not se all the myschefe that I will bryng vpõ this place & vpõ ỹ enhabyters of ỹ same.* And they brought the kyng worde agayne. Then the kynge sent & gathered to gether all the elders of Juda and Jerusalẽ. And the kyng went vp in to the house of the Lorde/ & all the men of Juda and the enhabiters of Jerusalẽ & the Preastes & Leuites & all the people great and smalle: & reade all the wordes of the boke of the couenaũt that was founde in the house of the Lorde. And ỹ kyng stode at his standynge & made a couenaunt before the Lorde/ to folowe the Lord and to kepe his cõmaundementes/ his wytnesses and his statutes with all his herte and wt all his soule & to fulfyll the wordes of the appoyntmẽt wrytten in the sayde boke.

And he made to come forth all ỹ were foũde in Jerusalem and Beniamin/ & the enhabyters of Jerusalẽ promeled to kepe the couenaunt of ỹ God wtich was the God of their fathers. And Josiah put awaye all maner of abhominacyons out of all landes ỹ pertayned to the chyldrẽ of Israel/ and brought all ỹ were foũde in Israel to serue ỹ Lord their God. And they turned not a syde frõ after the Lord God of their fathers as lõg as he lyued.

¶ The.xxxv. Chapter.

And Josiah helde the feast of passe- ouer vnto the Lorde in Jerusalẽ/ and they slue passouer in the.xiiij. daye of the fyrst moneth. And he set the preastes in their offyces & ayded them in the seruyce of the house of the Lorde. And he sayde to the Leuites that taught thorow out all Israel and were sanctifyed vnto the Lorde: put the holy arcke in the house which Salomon ỹ sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel did builde/ ye neade not to beare it vpõ youre shoulders. Wherfore now serue the Lorde youre God & his people Israel. And prepare youre selues by youre auncient housholdes & companyes/ accordyng to the wrytynge of Dauid kynge of Israel/ and the wrytyng of Salomon his sonne. And stande in the holy place accordyng to ỹ deuysions of ỹ aunciẽt housholdes of youre brethrẽ the chyldren of of the people/ and after the deuysyon of the auncient housholdes of the Leuites/ & kyll passouer/ sanctifye & prepare youre brethrẽ that they may do accordynge to the worde of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

and the Leuites stripte the beastes. And they kept awaye the burntofferynges, to geue thē vnto the comen people as they were deuyded by auncīēt houses for to offer vnto ꝑ Lorde/ lyke as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. ¶ And so dyd they vnto the oxen to. And they dressed the passouer with fyre as ꝑ maner was. But the other halowed dedycat beastes they sodde in pottes/cauderns & pannes & deuyded thē quyckelye amōge all ꝑ comen people. And afterwarde they made readye for them selues & for the preastes and for the chyldren of Aaron/which were busied in offerynge of burntofferynges & the fatt vntyll nyght. And therfore the Leuites prepared for thē selues and for the preastes the sonnes of Aaron. And the syngers the chyldren of Asaph stode in their standyng accordyng to the cōmaundemēt of Dauid and Asaph/ Heman & Jduthun the kynges sear of visions: & ꝑ porters wayted at euery gate/and might not departe from their seruyce: But their brethrē the Leuites prepared for thē. And so all the seruyce of the Lorde went forwarde the sayde daye/ in offeryng passouer of burntofferynges vpō the aulter of the Lorde/accordyng to the cōmaundement of kynge Josiah.

And so the chyldren of Jsrael ꝑ coulde be founde / offered passouer the same tyme and kepte the feast of swete bredde seuen dayes. And ther was no passouer lyke to ꝑ / kepte in Jsrael frō ꝑ tyme of Samuel ꝑ prophete: neither dyd anye of the kynges of Jsrael holde soche a passouer feast as dyd Josiah and the preastes and Leuites & all Juda/ & as moche of Jsrael as coulde be had / & the enhabiters of Jerusalē. And this passouer was holdē in the.xviij.yere of the raygne of Josiah.

2.Reg.xxiij.f * After all this whē Josiah had finished the tēple/Necho kyng of Egypt came vp to fight agaynst Carcamis vpon Euphrates/and Josiah wēt out agaynst him. ¶ The.xxxvi.Chapter.

Nd the people of ꝑ lande toke Jehoahaz ꝑ sonne of Josiah & made him kyng for his father in Jerusalem. And Jehoahaz was xxiij.yere olde whē he begānne to raigne & he raigned thre monethes in Jerusalē. For the kyng of Egypt put him downe at Jerusalē & mulcted the lande in an hūdred talentes of syluer & a talent of goulde. And ꝑ kyng of Egypt made Eliakim his brother kyng vpō Juda & Jerusalē & turned his name vnto Jehoakim but Jehoahaz hys brother Necho toke & caryed him to Egypt. And Jehoakim was.xxv.yere olde whē he begānne to raigne, & he raigned xi.yere in Jerusalē: & he dyd ꝑ displeased the Lorde his God. Agaynst him came Nabucho donozor kyng of Babilon & bounde hym in fetters to carye him to Babilon. Therto the kyng Nabuchodonozor caryed of the vessels of the house of the Lorde to Babilon and put them in his temple at Babilon. The rest of ꝑ actes of Jehoakim & his Abhominacyens/ and that was layde to his charge/ are wrytē in the boke of the kynges of Jsrael: and Jehoacin hys sonne raigned in hys steade. Jehoacin was.viij.yere olde whē he beganne to raigne/ & he raigned thre monethes & ten dayes in Jerusalē: & dyd ꝑ dyspleased ꝑ Lord. And whē ꝑ yere was out/ kyng Nabuchodonozor sent and fet him to Babilon with ꝑ goodlye vessels of the house of ꝑ Lorde, & made Sedechiah his * brother kyng ouer Juda & Jerusalē.

And Sedechiah was.xxi.yere olde when he begānne to raigne, & raigned xi yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lorde his God/ & humbled not him selfe before Jeremiah the prophete at the mouth of ꝑ Lorde. And therto he rebelled agaynst Nabuchodonozor which had receaued on othe of hym by God/ & was to fyrse necked & to harde herted to turne vnto ꝑ Lord God of Jsrael. Therto all ꝑ rulers of ꝑ preastes with ꝑ people trespaced a pace after all maner of abhominacyons of the hethen & poluted the house of ꝑ Lorde which he had halowed in Jerusalem.

And ꝑ Lorde God of their fathers sent to thē by his messengers sendynge thē betyme: for he

for he had compassyon on hys people and on his dwellynge place. But they mocked the messengers of God and despised their wordes & mysused his prophetes, vntyll the wrath of the Lord so arose agaynst hys people that it was past remeadie. And so he brought vpō them the kyng of Caldeye & slue their young men with ꝑ swerde in their holy tēple / & nether spared younge man nor mayden / nether olde man / nether so moche as hym ꝑ stowped for age: But gaue all into his hande.

And all ꝑ vessels of ꝑ house of God bothe great and smalle / & the treasures of ꝑ house of God / & the treasures of the kynge and hys
D Lordes he caryed to Babilon euery whit. And they burnt the house of God & brake downe the walles of Jerusalem / and burnt all the palaces therof with fyre with all the goodly stoffe therof / and marred it. And he caryed awaye them that had escaped the swerde / to Babilon / where they were seruaūtes to him & his chyldren / vntil the kyngdom of Persia beganne to rule / to fulfyll the worde of the Lorde by the mouthe of Jeremiah / vntyll ꝑ lande had her pleasure of her Sabothes: for as longe as she layed desolate / she kepte Sabboth vntyll she had fulfylled .lxx. yeres.

¶ Cyrus sendeth agayne the people that was in captyuite / and restoreth them their holy vessels: And commaundeth them to buylde agayne the temple.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

A *Chro. Esdr.

IN the fyrst yere of* Cyrus kynge of Persia (that the worde of the Lorde spokē* by the mouth of Jeremy myght be fulfylled) the Lorde stered vp the spirete of Cyrus kynge of Persia / ꝑ he caused it be proclamed thorow out all his empyre, ye and by wrytinge also / saynge: Thus sayth Cyrus kyng of Persia: The Lorde God of heauē hath geuen me all the kyngdomes in the lande * and hath commaunded me to buylde him an house at Jerusalem in Juda. Whosoeuer now among you is of his people / the Lorde his God be with him / & let him go vp to Jerusalem in Juda / & buylde the house of the Lorde God of Israel. He is the God that is at Jerusalem. And whosoeuer remayneth yet in eny maner of place (where he is a straunger) let the men of his place helpe him with syluer & goulde / with good & catell, besyde ꝑ which they wyllyngly offer, for ꝑ house of God at Jerusalē. ¶ Esdr. .i. Esa. xliij. b.

¶ Then gat vp ꝑ pryncypall fathers of Juda and Benjamin / & the preastes and Leuites / & all they whose spirete God had rayled to go vp / and to buylde the house of ꝑ Lorde at Jerusalem. And all they that were aboute them / strengthened their hand with vessels of syluer and golde / with good & catell / and Jewels / besyde that which they gaue of their awne frewyll. And kynge Cyrus brought forth of the vessels of the house of the Lorde / which Nabuchodonozor had taken oute of Jerusalē / & put in the house of his God. But D Cyrus the kyng of Persia brought thē forth by Mithridates the treasurer / & numbred thē vnto Sesbazar the prynce of Juda. And this is the numbre of thē: thyrtie basens of gould / and a thousand basens of syluer / & nyne and twentie knyues / thyrtie cuppes of goulde / & of other syluer cuppes foure hundred & ten / and of other vessels a thousande. So that all ꝑ vessels both of goulde & syluer / were fyue thousand & foure hūdred. Sesbazar brought them all vp / with thē that came vp out of ꝑ captiuite of Babilon vnto Jerusalem.

And all & people shouted loude in prayssinge the Lorde/ because the foundacyon of & house of the Lord was layde. Many also of the olde preastes and Leuites and auncient fathers, which had sene & fyrst house: whē the foūdacīō of this house was layed before their eyes, wepte wyth a loude voyce. And many shouted with ioye / so that the noyse gaue a great sounde in so moch & the people coulde not knowe the ioyfull sounde for the noyse of the weppynge amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loude crye, so that the noyse was herde farre of.

C The buyldynge of the temple is hyndered/and let.

C The.iiij.Chapter.

WHEN the aduersaryes of Iuda A and Benjamin hearde/ & the chyldren of the captyuyte buylded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel, they came to Zorobabel and to & princypall fathers / and sayde vnto them: We will buylde with you: for we seke the Lorde youre God lyke as ye do. And we haue done sacrifyce vnto him sence the tyme that Asor Haden the kynge of Assur brought vs vp hyther. But Zorobabel and Iesua and the other auncient fathers of Israel answered them: It belongeth not to you/ but to vs to buylde the house vnto oure God: for we, oure selues wyll buylde alone vnto & Lorde oure God of Israel, * as Cyrus the kynge of Per- I. Then the folcke of the lande hynbered the people of Iuda / and made them afrayed to B buylde, and hyred counceilers agaynst them and hynbered their deuyce / as longe as Cyrus the kynge of Persia lyued / vntyll the raygne of Darius kyng of Persia. But whē Ahasuerus was kynge / in the begynnynge of hys raygne wrote they vnto hym a complaynte agaynst them of Iuda and Ierusalē.

And in the tyme of Artharerses, wrote Bisellam / Mithridates / Tabeel and the other of their councell vnto Artharerses the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of & letter was wrytten in the Syrians speach and was interpretated in the langage of the Syrians. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai & scrybe, wrote thys letter agaynst Ierusalem to Artharerses the kynge.

We Rehum & * chaunceler/ and Samsai the scrybe and other of the councel of Dina/ of Arphasath / of Tarplat / of Persia / of Arach/of Babilon/ of Susan / of Deha/ and of Elam/and other of the people / whom the greate and noble Asenaphar brought ouer/ and set in the cyties of Samaria / and other on this syde the water and * in Cenerth. And this is the summe of the letter that they sent vnto kynge Artharerses.

* Or/as some wyll/ president of the councell.

* Or/ peace & health.

Thy seruauntes the men on this syde the C water and in Cenerth. Be it knowne vnto & kynge/kynge/that the Jewes are come vp from the to vs vnto Jerusalem a cytie sedycyous and frowarde/and buylde the same/and laye the foundacion of the walles therof/and repayze them. Be it knowne now therfore vnto the kynge/ that yf this cytie be buylded and the walles made vp agayne/ then shall not they geue trybute/tolle/ and yearly custome/* & cuē vnto ꝧ kynges shall this hurt redownde. But now that we all are therby wherby destroyed the tēple, we wolde no longer se ꝧ kynges dishonoure. Therfore sent we out/ & caused the kyng to be certifyed therof: That it maye be soughte in the Chronycles of thy progenitours/ and so shalt thou fynde in the same Chronycles/& perceaue/that this citie is sedycious & noysome vnto kynges & lādz/ and ꝧ they cause other also to rebell of olde/ & for ꝧ same cause was this cytie destroyed. Therfore do we certifye ꝧ kyng that yf this cytie be buylded/and the walles therof made vp/ thou shalt kepe nothynge on this syde ꝧ water by the reason of it.

* Some reade. And the kinges tribute may incurre damage.

Then sent the kyng an answere vnto Rehum the chauncelor and Samsai the Scribe/& to the other of their councell ꝧ dwelt in Samaria/ & vnto the other beyonde ꝧ water. Peace & salutacion. The letter which ye sent vnto vs/hath bene opēly red before me/ and I haue cōmaunded to make search: and it is foūde/ ꝧ this cytie of olde hath made insurreccion agaynst kynges/& how ꝧ vprore & rebellion hath bene cōmitted therin. There haue bene myghtie kynges also at Jerusalē which haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water/& tolle/trybute & yearly custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after thys commaundemēt/ forbyd the same men/ that the cytie be not buylded/tyll I haue geuē cōmaundement. Take hede now that ye be not negligent here in/lest the kynge haue harme there thorow.

Now when kyng Artharerses letter was red before Rehum ꝧ chauncelor and Samsai the Scrybe and their councell/ they wēt vp in all the haste to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes/& forbad thē with vyolence and power. Then ceassed the worcke of the house of God at Jerusalē/& contynued so vnto the seconde yere of Darius kynge of Perlia.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

A iij. Esd. vi. c.

THen cõmaunded kyng Darius / ỳ search shulde be made in ỳ library of the kyng' treasure house which laye at Babilon.* So at Ecbathanis in a castell ỳ lyeth in the land of ỳ Medes there was foũde a boke, & in it was there an acte wrytten after this maner: In ỳ fyrst yere of kyng Cyrus, commaunded the same kyng Cyrus to buylde ỳ house of God at Jerusalẽ, in ỳ place where ỳ sacrifice is made/ & to laye the foundacion to beare thre shore cubyt' height & thre shore cubyters breedth & thre walles of roughe stones, & one wall of tymber, & ỳ expences shalbe geuẽ of ỳ kyngs house. And the goulde and syluer vessell of ỳ house of God (which Nabuchodonozor tooke out of the tẽple at Jerusalẽ, & brought vnto Babilon) shalbe restored agayne, that they maye be brought vnto the temple at Jerusalem to their place into the house of God.

* Some reade And there was foũde in a cofer (that was in the palace in the cõtre of Medes (a volume: and therin was wrytten for the memoriall &c.

B Get you farre frõ thẽ therfore thou Thathanai captayne beyonde ỳ water, & Sthar-buzanai/ & youre counceilers which are beyonde the water get ye awaye from thẽ. Let thẽ worche in the house of God that the captayne of the Jewes and their Elders maye buylde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shalbe done to the Elders of Juda for the buyldynge of ỳ house of God that there shall dyligently be taken of the kynges goodes, euẽ of the rentes beyonde the water and geuẽ vnto ỳ men, and ỳ they be not hyndred. And yf they haue nede of calues lambes, or goates, for ỳ burntofferynge vnto the God of heauẽ, wheate, salt/ wyne & oyle after the custome of the preastes at Jerusalẽ, there shalbe geuen thẽ daylie as is accordyng: & se that this be done with oute faute that they maye offre swete sauoures vnto the God of heauẽ, & praye for ỳ kyngs lyfe, & for his children. ¶ This cõmaundement haue I geuẽ. And what mã so euer he be that altereth these wordes / there shall a beame be takẽ frõ his house & set vp & he shalbe hãged theron, & his house shalbe prysed for ỳ deade.

C But the God that dwelleth in heauen destroye all kynges & people/ that put to their hande to alter & to breake downe the house of God at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded that this be dilygently done.

Then Thathanai ỳ captayne beyonde the water/ and Sthar-buzanai with their counceilers (to whom kyng Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And the Elders of the Jewes buylded, & they prospered thorow ỳ prophecienge of Aggeus the prophet and Zacharye the sonne of Addo: & they buylded/ & set vp the worcke/ accordynge to the cõmaundemẽt of the God of Israel/ & after the cõmaundemẽt of Cyrus/ Darius and Artharerses kynges of Persia. And they performed the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar ỳ was in ỳ syxte yere of the raigne of kyng Darius.

* And the chyldrẽ of Israel the preastes/ ỳ Leuites & the other chyldrẽ of the captyuite held the dedycacion of ỳ house of God wyth ioye, & offered at the dedycacion of the house of God/ an hũdred calues/ two hũdred lambes/ foure hundred goates: & for the symotferynge for all Israel twelue he goates / accordynge to the nombre of the trybes of Israel/ & set ỳ preastes in their courses/ & ỳ Leuites in their offyces to mynister vnto God which is at Jerusalẽ as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses.

Of the chyldrē of Pahath Moab Elioenai the sonne of Zaraiah, and wyth hym two hundred men. Of the chyldren of Zechaniah ꝧ sonne of Jahaziel and with him three hundred men. Of the chyldren of Adin Abed the sonne of Jonathan and with him fyfte men.
Of the chyldren of Elam, Jsaiah the sonne of Athaliah and with him seuentie men. Of the chyldren of Saphatia, Zabadiah ꝧ sonne of Michael, and with him foure score men.

Of the chyldrē of Joab, Obadiah ꝧ sonne of Jehiel / and wyth hym two hundred and eyghtene men. Of the chyldrē of Selomith/the sonne of Josphiah, and with him an hun dred and thre men.

Of the chyldren of Bebai / Zachary the sonne of Bebai/and with him eyght & twen-tye men. Of the chyldrē of Asgad / Johanan/the sonne of Hakatan and with him an hundred and ten men. Of the last chyldrē of Adonicam/and these were their names: Eliphe-let, Jehiel and Samaiah / and with thē three score men. Of the chyldrē of Begui / Uthai/and Zabud and with them seuētye men. And

I geathered thẽ to geather by the water that renneth towarde Ahaua, and there abode we thre dayes. And whẽ I loked amõge ẏ people and the preastes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Semeiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, Zachary & Mosollam ẏ rulers, and Joiarib and Elnathan the teachers, & those sent I vnto Edo ẏ chefest at Casphia, that they shulde fetch vs mynisters for the house of oure God, and I tolde thẽ what they shulde saye vnto Edo and to his brethren the Nethinims at Casphia.

And (accordynge to the good hande of oure God vpon vs) they broughte vs a wyse man from amonge the children of Moholi the sonne of Leui the sonne of Israel, euẽ Sarabia with his sonnes and brethrẽ, eyghtene And Hasabia, and with him Isaiah of ẏ children of Merari, with his brethren and their sonnes, twentie. And of the Nethinims, whõ Dauid & the Princes gaue to mynister vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twentye, all named by name.

And euen there at the water beside Ahaua, caused I a fastynge to be proclamed, ẏ we myghte humble oure selues before oure God to seke of him a ryghte waye for vs, & oure children and all oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to require of the kyng souldyers and horsmen, to helpe vs agaynst the enemye in the waye. For we had sayde vnto the kynge: The hande of oure God is vpõ all them that seke him in goodnes, and hys vyolence and wrath vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and soughte this at oure God, and he hearde vs.

And I toke out twelue of the chefe preastes Sarabia and Hasabia and ten of their brethren wyth them, and weyed them there the syluer and gould and vessels for ẏ heue offerynge vnto the house of oure God, which the kynge and the Lordes of hys councell & princes, and all Israel that were at hande, had geuẽ to the heueofferyng: & there weyed I them vnder their hande syxe hũdred & fyftie talentes of syluer, & in syluer vessel an hundred talentes, and in gould an hundred talentes, twentye cuppes of gould of a thousande drãmes, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as gould, & sayde vnto them: Ye are holy vnto the Lord, therfore are the vessels holy also, and so is the syluer & gould that is geuen of a good wyll vnto ẏ Lorde God of youre fathers: Watch ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chefe preastes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the chefes of the house of the Lorde. Then toke ẏ preastes and Leuites that weyed syluer & gould and vessell, to bryng it to Jerusalem vnto ẏ house of oure God. So we brake vp, from the water of Ahaua on the twelueth daye of the fyrst moneth, to go vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon vs, and deliuered vs from the hande of the enemyes & priuy waytinges by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, & abode there thre dayes. But on ẏ fourth daye was the syluer and gould and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Vrias the preast, and with him Eleazar the sonne of Phinehes, and with them Iosabad the sonne of Jesua, and Noadiah the sonne of Benoi ẏ Leuites, acordyng to ẏ nombre & weyght of euery one. And the weyght was all wrytten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captyuite, whych were come out of prison offered burntoffe= rynges vnto the God of Israel: twelue bullockes for all Israel, syxe & nynetye rãmes, seuen and seuentye lambes, & twelue goates for a synofferynge, all to the burntofferynge of the Lorde. And they deliuered the kynges commyssyon vnto the kynges officers, & to ẏ capytaynes on this syde ẏ water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

When all this was performed, the rulers came to me, and sayde: The people of Israel, and the preastes, and Leuites are not separated frõ the nacyons in the landes as touchyng their abhomynacyons namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Iebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptyans, and Amorites. * For they haue taken the daughters of the same and their sonnes, and haue myxte the holy sede with the nacyons in the landes: and the hand of the princes and rulers hath bene principall in this trespace.

* Whẽ I hearde thys, I rente my clothes and my rayment, and pluckt of the hearre of my heade and of my beerd, and sate mournyng. And there resorted vnto me all soch as feared the worde of the Lorde God of Israel because of the greate transgressyon. And I sate mournynge vntyll the euenynge sacrifyce. And aboute the euenynge sacrifyce I rose vp fro my heynynes, and rẽte my clothes & my rayment, and fell vpon my knees, & spred out my handes vnto the Lord my God, and sayde.

My God, I am ashamed, and darre not lifte vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for oure wyckednesses are growne ouer oure heede, & oure trespaces are waxen greate vnto ẏ heauen. Sence ẏ tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in greate trespace vnto this daye, * and a Fastynges, as the scripture maketh mẽcyon haue bene commen humiliacions & supplycacions done before God: other for some great tribulacyon suffered: comyng at bad or for asyn gular trespaũce & cruell forthynchynge of their kynges, as it is wrytten 1. Reg. viij. b. and. xxxij. d. 3. Esdr. ix. &c.

because of oure wyckednesses haue we and oure kynges bene delyuered into the hãde of the kynges of the nacyons/ in to the swerde/ in to captiuyte/in to spoyle/ and into confusion of face, as it is come to passe thys daye.

¶ But now is there a lytle and sodayne graciousnes come from the Lorde oure God / so that some of vs are escaped/ þ he maye geue vs a nayle in hys holy place / that oure God maye lyghte oure eyes / and geue vs a lytle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen/ & oure God hath not forsakẽ vs in oure bondage/and hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in the syghte of the kynges of Persia / þ he shulde geue vs lyfe/ and promote the house of oure God/ & to sett vp the desolacyon therof / & to geue vs an hedge in Juda and Jerusalem.

And now O oure God/what shall we saye after this: for we haue forsakẽ thy cõmaundemẽtes/which thou hast cõmaunded by thy seruauntes the Prophetes / and sayde : The lande vnto which yego to possesse it is an vncleane land thorow þ fylthines of the people of the landes / in their abhominacyõs wherwith they haue made it full of vnclennes on euery syde.* Therfore shall ye not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes / and their daughters shall ye not take vnto your sonns and seke not their peace and welth for euer/ that ye maye be stronge/and enioye the good in the lande / and that ye and youre chyldren maye haue þ inheritaũce of it for euermore.

And after all thys that is come vpon vs (because of oure euell dedes & greate trespace)thou oure God hast spared oure wyckednesses/and hast geuen vs a delyueraunce as it is come to passe this daye.

As for vs, we haue turned backe/ & haue let go thy commaundementes/to make contracte wt the people of these abhominactions. Wilt thou then be wroth at vs/tyll we be vterly consumed/ so that nothynge remayne/ and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O Lorde God of Israel thou art righteous, for we remaine yet escaped as it is this daye.Beholde in thy presence are we in oure trespace / for because of it is there no standyng before the.

¶ The .x. Chapter.

I fol. Esdre. viij. g.

And when Esdras prayed after this maner / & knowleged/ wepte/and laye before þ house of God / there resorted vnto hym oute of Israel a very greate cõgregacion of men and wemẽ/ and chyldren:for the people wepte very sore. And Sechanias the sonne of Jehiel one of þ chyldren of Elam/answered/ and sayde vnto Esdras:We haue trespaced agaynst þ Lord oure God / in that we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the lande. Now there is hope yet in Israel cõcernynge thys therfore let vs make a couenaunt now with oure God / that we shall put awaye all the wyues(and soch as are borne of them)accordynge to the councell of the Lorde/ & of them that feare the commaundemẽt of oure God/ that we maye do accordyng to the lawe. * Then rose Esdras, and toke an othe of þ vij. Esdre. ix. a. rulers/preastes and Leuites/ & of all Israel/ that they shulde do accordyng to this worde: B and they sware . And Esdras stode vp before the house of God / and went in to the chãber of Johanan the sonne of Eliasib . And when he came thither,he ate no bred/ nor dranke water : for he mourned be cause of the transgression of thẽ that had bene in captyuite.

And they caused a proclamacion be made thorow out Juda and Jerusalem/ vnto all þ chyldren which had bene in captyuyte / that they shulde geather thẽ selues to geather vnto Jerusalem: And that whosoeuer came not with in thre dayes accordynge to the deuyce of the rulers and Elders / all hys substaunce shulde be forfett/ and be put out from the cõgregacion of the captyue.

Then all the men of Juda and Ben Jamin geathered them selues to geather vnto Jerusalem in thre dayes / that is on the twentie daye of the nyenth moneth:and all the people sate in the strete before þ house of God / and trembled because of the matter / and for the rayne. And Esdras the preaste stode vp / and sayde vnto them:* Ye haue transgressed/that ye haue taken straunge wyues/ to make the trespace of Israel yet more:cõfesse now therfore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers / & do hys pleasure , and separate youre selues from the people of the land & frõ the straũge wyues. Then answered all the cõgregacion/ and sayde with a loude voyce: Lett it be done as thou hast sayde. But þ people are many/ & it is a rainye wether/ & they can not stande here without/nether is this a worcke of one daye or two/ for we are many that haue offended in this transgression . Lett vs appoynte oure rulers therfore in all the cõgregacion/ þ all they which haue takẽ straunge wyues in oure cyties, maye come at þ tyme appoynted/ & the elders of euery cytie & their Judges wyth them / tyll the wrath of oure God be turned awaye from vs for this offence.

In

AN ỹ moneth Nisan in the twẽtieth yeare of kynge Arthaxerles, when the wyne stode before hym/ I toke vp ỹ wyne/ & gaue it vnto ỹ king & I was heuy in his presence. Then sayd ỹ kyng vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke/ that is not the matter, but thou art heuy herted. Neuertheles I was sore afrayed & sayde vnto the kynge: God saue the kyng for euer/ shulde I not loke sadly? the citie of my fathers buryall lyeth waste & the gates therof are consumed with fyre. Then sayde ỹ kynge vnto me: what is thẽ thy requeste? then made I my prayer to ỹ God of heauẽ/ & sayde vnto the kynge: yf it please ỹ kynge/ & yf thy seruaũt be fauoured in thy sighte. I be seke ỹ sende me in to Juda vnto the cytye of my fathers buryall/ that I maye buylde it.

B And the kynge sayde vnto me/ & so dyd the quene ỹ sat by him: how longe shall thy iourney cõtinue/ & whẽ wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased ỹ kynge to sende me/ and I set him a tyme/ & sayde vnto ỹ kynge: yf it please the kynge/ let him geue me letters to ỹ capitaynes beyonde the water, ỹ they maye conueye me ouer/ till I come into Juda: & letters vnto Asaph the Lorde of the kynges wood, ỹ he maye geue me wood for beames to ỹ gates of the palace/ which are harde on the house & harde on the walles of the cytye/ and for the house that I shall entre in to. And the kynge gaue me accordynge to ỹ good hande of God vpon me: And when I came to the captaynes beyonde the water/ I gaue them the kynges letters. And the kynge sent captaynes and horsmen wyth me.

But when Sanaballat the Horonite and Tobiah the seruaũt of ỹ Ammonites hearde ỹ/ it greued thẽ sore/ ỹ there was come a mã which soughte the welth of the childrẽ of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalẽ/ and had C bene there thre dayes/ I gat me vp in ỹ night season/ & a fewe men wyth me: for I tolde no man what God had geuẽ me in my hert to do at Jerusalem: and there was not one beast wt me/ saue it that I rode vpon. And I rode by nyghte vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well/ and to the Dongeporte/ and considered the walles of Jerusalẽ that were brokẽ downe/ and the portes therof consumed with the fyre. And I wẽt ouer vnto the welporte/ and to the kynges condyte/ and there was no rowme for my beast/ that it coulde go vnder me. Then wẽte I on in the nyghte by ỹ broke syde/ & considered the wall/ and turned back and came home agayne to the valley porte.

And the rulers knewe not whither I wẽte or what I dyd: for hither to had I not tolde ỹ Jewes & the prestes/ the counceilers and the D rulers, & ỹ other ỹ labourred in ỹ worcke. And I sayde vnto them: ye se the mysery ỹ we are in/ how Jerusalẽ lyeth waste/ & how ỹ gates therof are brẽt with fyre/ come let vs buylde vp ỹ walles of Jerusalẽ/ ỹ we be no more a rebuke. And I tolde thẽ of the good hande of my God whych was vpõ me: and the kynges wordes that he had spokẽ vnto me. And they sayde: then let vs get vp/ & buylde: and their handes were strengthed to good.

But when Sanaballat ỹ Horonite/ and Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites/ and Gesem the Arabian herde it, they laughed vs to skorne & despised vs & sayde: what is this that ye do? Will ye fall away agayne from the kynge? Then answered I thẽ and sayde: the God of heauen he it is that causeth vs to prospere: & we be his seruauntes. Let vs get vp and buylde. As for you/ ye haue no porciõ nor right nor remembraunce in Jerusalem.

The valley gate buylded Hanun/ & the citesins of Zanoah. They builded it/ and set on the dores/ lockes & barres therof/ & a thousande cubytes on the wall/ vnto the Dongepoyte. But the Dongepoyte buylded Melchiah ꝑ sonne of Rechab/ the ruler of ꝑ fourth parte of *the vyneyardes: he buylded it & set on the dores lockes & barres therof. But the Welligate builded Selum the sonne of Cholhosah/ the ruler of ꝑ fourthparte of Maspha He builded it/ & couered it/ & set on the dores/ lockes/ & barres therof/ & the wall vnto the pole of Siloah by the kynges garden/ vnto the steppes that go downe from the cytte of Dauid. After him builded Nehemiah ꝑ sonne of Asbok/ the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethzur/ vntyll the other syde ouer agaynst the sepulchres of Dauid/ & to the pole Asuia and vnto the house of the myghtye.

* Some trade. Bethyathard.

After hym buylded the Leuites/ Rehum the sonne of Bani. Nexte vnto hym buylded Hasabiah the ruler of the halfe quarter at Keilah in his quarter. After hī buylded their bzethzē/ Bauai ꝑ sonne of Henadad/ ꝑ ruler of the halfe quarter of Keilah. After hym buylded Ezer the sonne of Josua the ruler of Maspha the other pece yarde ouer agaynst ꝑ harnesse cozner. After him buylded Baruch the sonne of Zabai the other pece wozshypfully & costly/ frō the cozner vnto the doze of the house of Eliasib the hie prest. After hym buylded Marimuth the sonne of Uziah the sonne of Hacos the other pece/ frō the doze of ꝑ house of Eliasib euē as lōge as ꝑ house of Eliasib extēded. After him builded ꝑ prestz/ ꝑ mē of ꝑ coūtre. After him buylded Beniamin & Hasub ouer agaynst their house. After thē Asariah the sonne of Maasiah the sonne of Ananiah nexte vnto hys house. After hym buylded Benui the sonne of Henadad ꝑ other pece from the house of Asariah vnto the turnynge/ and vnto the cozner.

After him buylded Phalel ꝑ sonne of Uzai ouer agaynst the cozner and the hye tower/ which lieth out ouer from the kynges house/ besyde ꝑ courte of the prison. After him Phadaiah the sonne of Pharos (as foz the Nethinims they dwelt in Ophel/ vnto the Watergate/ towarde the east where the tower lyeth out). After hym buylded they of Thekua the other pece ouer agaynst ꝑ greate tower/ that lieth outwarde & vnto the wall of* Ophel.

ij. Par. xxvij. c

But from the Hozsgate fozth buylded the Prestes/ euery one ouer agaynst hys house. After thē buylded Zadok the sonne of Emer ouer agaynst hys house. After hym buylded Semeiah the sonne of Sechaniah ꝑ keper of the eastgate. After him buylded Hananiah the sonne of Selemiah/ & Hanun the sonne of Zalaph the kyrde/ ꝑ other peace. After him builded Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah ouer agaynst hys chest. After hym buylded Melchiah the goldsmythes sonne/ vntill the house of the Nethinims/ & of the merchaūtes ouer agaynst the coūcell gate/ & to the parler in the cozner. And betwene the parlour of the cozner vnto the Shepegate buylded ꝑ goldsmythes and the merchauntes.

¶ The buylding of Jerusalem is hyndred and letted/ the Jewes buylde it beyng readye harneysed: lest their enemyes shuld inuade them.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

But when Sanabalat heard that we builded the wall/ he was wzoth & toke greate indignacīō & mocked the Jewes & sayde before hys bzethzen and the hoste of Samaria: what do the impotent Jewes? shall they be thus suffred? shall they offre? shal they perfourme it in one daye? shall they make ꝑ stones whole agayne ꝑ are brought to dust/ & bzent? And Tobiah the Ammonite beside him saide: let thē builde on/ yf a foxe go vp/ he shall breake downe their stonye wall. Heare O thou oure God/ how we are despised/ turne their shame vpon their awne heade/ & thou mayest geue them ouer in to despisynge in ꝑ lande of their captiuite. Couer not their wickednesse/ & put not out their sinne frō thy presence: foz they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the wall/ and ioyned it whole together/ vnto the halfe heygth. And the people were well mynded to laboure.

But when Sanabalat/ & Tobiah/ & the Arabians/ & Ammonites/ & Asdodits hearde ꝑ the walles of Jerusalē were made vp/ and that they had begonne to stoppe vp ꝑ gappes they were very wzoth/ & cōspired al to gether to come & fight agaynst Jerusalē/ & to make an hinderaūce therin. Neuertheles we made our prayer vnto oure God/ & set watchmen vpō the wall daye & nyght ouer agaynst thē. And Juda sayde: the strength of the bearers is to feble/ & ther is to moch dust/ we are not able to buylde on the wall. And oure aduersaryes thought: they shall not knowe nether se/ tyll we come in the myddes amonge thē/ & slaye thē and hynder the wozcke. But when the Jewes ꝑ dwelt beside thē/ came out of al the places where they dwelt aboute vs/ and tolde vs as good as ten tymes/ then set I the people after their kinreds with their swerds/ speares & bowes beneth in the lowe places behynde the wall/ & loked/ & gat me vp/ and sayde vnto the chefe men & rulers/ and to the other people: be not ye afraied of thē* thinke vpō ꝑ greate Lozde which ought to be feared & fyghte foz youre bzethzen sonnes daughters/ wyues/ and houses. oure enemyes hearde & we had gotte worde of it/ God broughte their coũcell to noughte/ and we turned all agayne to the wall / euery one vnto his labour. And frõ that time forth it came to passe/ & the halfe parte of the yõge men dyd the labour/ & the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda/ which buylded on the wall/ & bare burthens / from those that laded them. With one hande did they the worke/ and with the other helde they their weapen. And euery one that buylded had hys swerde guirde by hys syde and so buylded they. And the trompetters stode beside me.

And I sayde vnto the pryncipall men/ and rulers, and to the other people: the worcke is greate & large/ & we are separated vpon the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noyse of ỹ trõpet / resorte ye thither vnto vs* Oure God shal fight for vs/ & we will be labouringe in ỹ worcke. And the halfe parte of thẽ helde ỹ speares frõ ỹ morninge spринge/ till ỹ starres came forth. And at ỹ same tyme sayde I vnto the people: euery one abyde with hys seruaunt at Jerusalem/ that in the night season we maye geue attendaunce to the watch/ and to labour on the daye tyme. As for me and my brethren/ & my seruauntes/ and the men of the watch behynde me/ we put neuer of oure clothes/ so moch as to washe oure selues.

¶ The people are vexed with hongre. Nehemiah forbydden vsurye. He requyreth not the ipuyng of a captayne.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

And there arose a greate cõplaynte of ỹ people/ & of their wiues agaynst their brethren the Jewes. And ther were some ỹ sayde: oure sonnes & daughters are to many/ let vs take corne for thẽ & eate/ ỹ we maye lyue. Some sayde: let vs set oure landes, vyneyardes and houses to pledge/ & take vp corne in ỹ darth. But some sayde: let vs borowe money of the kinges tribute for oure landes & vyneyardes. Now are oure brethrens bodyes as oure awne bodies and their children as oure children: els shulde we subdue oure sonnes and daughters vnto bondage / and some of oure daughters are subdued allready, * and no strength is there in oure handes, & other men shall haue oure landes and vyneyardes.

* After ỹ hebrue some reade: & we haue not wherwyth to redeme them.

But when I hearde their complaynte and soch wordes, it displeased me sore/ and I aduysed so in my mynde, that I rebuked ỹ counceilers / and the rulers and sayde vnto them: * wyll ye requyre vsury one of another? And I brought a greate congregaciõ agaynst thẽ and sayde vnto them: we (after oure abilyte) haue bought oure brethrẽ the Jewes/ which were solde vnto the Heythen. And wyll ye sell youre brethren/ whõ we haue bought vnto vs? Then held they their peace/ and coulde fynde nothynge to answere.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do. Ought ye not to walke in the feare of God/ because of the rebuke of the Heythen oure enemyes? I and my brethrẽ/ & my seruauntes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsury/ let vs leaue it. Therfore this same daye se that ye restore them their landes agayne/ their vyneyardes/ oyle gardens and houses/ and the hundred parte of ỹ money of ỹ corne/ wyne and oyle that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: we wyll restore thẽ agayne and wyll requyre nothynge of them/ and will do as thou hast spoken. And I called ỹ prestes/ and toke an ooth of them, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappe / and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner from hys house and labour/ that mayntayneth not thys worde: euen thus be he shaken out/ and voyde. And all the congregacyon sayde: Amen/ and praysed the Lorde. And the people dyd so.

And from the tyme forth that it was committed vnto me to be a captayne in the lande of Juda / namely from the twentyeth yeare vnto the two and thyrtyeth yeare of kynge Artharxerses (that is twelue yeare) I and my brethrẽ lyued not of soch sustenaũce as was geuen to a captayne: For the olde captaynes that were before me / had bene chargeable vnto the people/ and had taken of them bred and wyne, and forty sycles of syluer: yee and their seruauntes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of ỹ feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpõ the wall/ and boughte no lande. And all my seruaũtes came thither together vnto ỹ worke. Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyfty of the Jewes & rulers/ which came vnto me/ from amonge the Heythen/ that are aboute vs. And there was prepared me daylye an oxe/ and syx chosen shepe/ and byrdes/ and euer once in ten dayes a greate summe of wyne. Yet requyred not I the ipunge of a captayne for the bondage was greuous vnto the people.* Thynke vpõ me my God vnto the best, accordynge to all that I haue done for thys people.

thorow the myddes of the see drye shode: and their persecuters threwest thou in to ỹ depe as a stone/in ỹ mightie waters. ¶ ledd̄est thē on the daye tyme in a cloudy pyer, ¶ on the nyghte season in a pyer of fyre/to shewe thē lyghte in the waye that they wente.

But oure fathers were proude and hardnecked/so that they folowed not the commaundementes/and refused to heare/¶ were not myndefull of the wonders that thou diddest for them:but became obstynate ¶ heady in so moche that they turned backe to their bondage in their dishobedyence. But thou my God forgauest/and wast gracious/mercyfull/pacyent/and of greate goodnesse/and forsokest them not. *And though they made a moulte calfe (and sayde:¶ this is thy God/ that broughte the out of the lande of Egipte) and dyd greate blasphemyes/yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernes/accordynge to thy greate mercy. * And the cloudy pyer departed not from them on the daye tyme to leade them the waye/nether the pyler of fyre in the nyght season/to shewe them lyghte in the waye that they wente.

And thou gauest them thy good spyrete to enfourme them/¶ withheldest not thy Manna from their mouth/ and gauest them water when they were thyrstye. And Amasai the sonne of Asarael the sonne of Ahasai ꝑ sonne of Mosolamoth/ the sonne of Emer: and his brethrē were valiaunt men/ of whom there were an hundreth & eight & twentye. And their ouerseer was Zabdiel the sonne of Hagdolim.

6. Par. 9. c. Of the Leuites: Semeiah the sonne of Hasub/ the sonne of Asrikam/ the sonne of Hasabiah the sonne of Boni: and Sabathai and Josabad of the chefe of the Leuytes/ in the outwarde busynes of the house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha/ the sonne of Zabdi/ the sonne of Asaph/ which was the pryncipall to begynne the thankesgeuinge vnto prayer. And bakbukiah the seconde amonge hys brethren/ and Abda the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Jduthun. All the Leuytes in the holy citie were two hundreth and foure & foure score. * And the porters Acub and Talmon/ and their brethrē that kepte the portes/ were an hundreth and two and seuentye. As for ꝑ residue of Jsrael/ the prestes and Leuites/ they were in al the cities of Juda/ euery one in his inheritaunce.

And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Siha and Gaspha belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouerseer of the Leuites at Jerusalem, was Usi the sonne of Baani, ꝑ sonne of Hasabiah the sonne of Mathaniah/ the sonne of Micha.

D Of the children of Asaph there were syngers aboute the busynes in ꝑ house of God: for it was the kynges cōmaundement concernynge them/ that the syngers shulde deale faithfully euery daye as accordinge was.

And Pathaiah the sonne of Meseiabel of the children of Zarah the sonne of Juda nexte the kynge in all matters concernynge the people and their villages/ thorow oute all their regyons. And the children of Juda that were without in the townes of their lande/ dwelt some at Kiriath Arbe, and in the villages therof/ and at Dibon/ and in the villages therof: and at Cabzeel, & in the villages therof: & at Jesua/ Moladah/ Bethphalet/ Hazersual/ Berlabe and in their villages: & at Siklag and Moconah/ and in their villages: And at Enremon/ Zarah/ Jerimuth/ Zanoah/ Odollam and in their villages: At Lachis/ and in the feldes therof: At Azekah/ and in the villages therof: and dwelt from Berlabe vnto the valley of Hennom.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

THese are the prestes and Leuites that wente vp with Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel & with Jesua: Saraiah/ Jeremy/ Esdras/ Amariah. Heluch Hatus Sechaniah Rehum Meremoth/ Ado/ Genthoi/ Abiah/ Miamin/ Maadiah. Bilgah. Semaiah. Joiarib. Jadaiah/ Salu/ Amok/ Helkiah & Jadaiah. These were the heades amonge the prestes and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Leuites were these: Jesua/ Bennui/ Cadmiel/ Sarabiah/ Juda & Mathaniah ouer the office of thankesgeuynge/ they and their brethren: Bacbukiah and Unni and their brethren/ were aboute them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadua. And in the tyme of Joakim were these the chefe fathers amonge the prestes: vnder Saraiah Maraiah/ vnder Jeremy Hananiah/ vnder Esdras Mosolam/ vnder Amariah Jehoanan/ vnder Melico Jonathan/ vnder Sebaniah Joseph/ vnder Harim Edna/ vnder Maraioth Helcai vnder Idia Zacharv/ vnder Genthō Mosolā/ vnder Abia Zechri/ vnder Miniamin & Moadia Peltai/ vnder Bilgah Samua/ vnder Semeiah Jehonathan/ vnder Joiarib Mathnai/ vnder Jadaiah Usi/ vnder Selai Kelai, vnder Amok Eber, vnder Hel-chiah Hasabiah, vnder Jadaiah Nathanael.

B And in the tyme of Eliasib. Jotada, Johanan & Jadua, were the chefe fathers amõge the Leuites, and the prestes wrytten vnder ỹ raygne of Darius the Persian. The chyldren of Leui ỹ principall fathers were wrytten in the Cronicles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathan the sonne of Eliasib. And these were ỹ chefe amonge the Leuites, Hasabiah, Serebiah and Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and their brethren ouer agaynst them, to geue prayse and thankes, acordynge as Dauid ỹ man of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynst another. Mathania, Balbukiah, Obadiah, Mosolam, Talmon & Ubub were porters in the watch at ỹ thresholdes of the gates. These were in the tyme of Joakim the sonne of Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemiah the captayne and of the preste Eldras the scrybe.

And in the dedycacyon of the wall at Jerusalem, were the Leuites sought out of al their places, that they myght be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedicacion & gladnesse, with thankesgeuinges, with synginge with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes. And the children of the syngers geatherd them selues together frõ ỹ playne countre aboute Jerusalem, and from the villages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Galgal, & out of the feldes of Geba and Asmaueth: for the syngers had buylded them villages aboute Jerusalem. And the prestes and Leuites purifyed them selues, and clensed the people, the gates and the wall.

C And I caused the princes of Juda to go vp vpõ ỹ wall, & appoynted two greate queers of thankesgeuynge, which went on ỹ ryght hande of the wall towarde the Dounggate, & after them went Osaiah, and half of the princes of Juda, & Asaria, Eldras, Mosolã Juda, Ben Jamin, Semeiah and Jeremy: and certayne of the prestes children with trõpettes, namely Zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semeiah, the sonne of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michaiah, the sonne of Zecur, the sonne of Asaph, and hys brethren Semeiah, Asarael, Melalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the musicall instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

And Eldras the Scrybe before them, towarde the Welligate, & they went vp ouer agaynst them vpon the steppes of the cytye of Dauid at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastwarde.

The other queer of thankesgeuynge wẽt ouer agaynst them, and I after thẽ, and the halfe parte of the people vpon the wall, towarde the Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll the brode wall, and to the porte of Ephraim, & to the Oldgate, and to the Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntyll the Shepegate. And in ỹ prelongate stode they styll, and so stode the two D queers of thankesgeuynge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers wyth me, and the prestes namely Eliakim, Maasiah, Minamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zachary, Hananiah, with trõpettes, and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ser. And the syngers sange loude, & Jesahiah was the ouerseer.

And the same daye were there greate sacrifyces offred, & they reioyced: for God had geuẽ them greate gladnesse, so that both the wyues & children were ioyfull, & the myrth of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were ỹ Heueofferynges, the fyrstlynges and the tythes) that they shulde geather them out of ỹ feldes aboute the cyties, to destribute them vnto the prestes and Leuites acordinge to ỹ lawe: for Juda was glad of the prestes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon ỹ office of their God, and the office of the purifycacõ. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: * for in the tyme of Dauid and Asaph, were the chefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse and thankesgeuynge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemiah, dyd all Israel, geue porciõs vnto the singers and porters, euery daye his porcion, & they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, & the Leuites gaue thynges ỹ were sanctifyed, vnto the children of Aaron.

C The xiij. Chapter.

And what tyme as the boke of Moses was red in ỹ eares of ỹ people there was founde wrytten therin, * that the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come in to the congregacyon of God, because they mett not the children of Israel wyth bred and water, * and hyred Balaam agaynst them, that he shulde curse them: neuertheles oure God turned the curse in to a blessynge. Now when they herde the Lawe, they separated from Israell euery one that had myxte hym selfe therin. And before thys had the Preest Eliasib delyuered the chest of the house of oure God vnto hys kynsman Tobiah: for he had made hym a great chest, and there had they afore tyme layed the meatofferynges, frankencense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wyne and kyne and oyle (accordinge to the cõmaundement geuen to the Leuytes/ syngers & porters) and the heueofferynges of the prestes.

But in all thys was not I at Ierusalem: for in ỹ two & thirtieth yeare of Artharerses kynge of Babilon/ came I vnto the kynge/ and after certayne dayes optayned I lycence of the kynge to come to Ierusalē. And I gat knowlege of the euell that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobiah/ in that he had made him a chest in ỹ courte of the house of God/ and it greued me sore/ and I cast forth all ỹ vessels of ỹ house of Tobiah out of the chest/ & cõmaunded thē to clense the chest. And thither broughte I agayne the vessels of the house of God/ the meatofferynge and the incense.

And I perceaued, that the portions of the Leuites were not geuen them/ for the which cause ỹ Leuites & syngers were fled/ euery one to his lāde for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers/ and sayde: why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them together/ & set them in their place. Then broughte all Iuda the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto ỹ treasure. And I made treasurers ouer the treasure/ euen Selemiah the preest/ and Sadoc the scribe/ and of the Leuytes Phadaiah & vnder their hande Hanan the sonne of Zacur the sonne of Mathaniah: for they were counted faythfull, and their office was to distribute vnto their brethren. *Thynke vpon me O my God here in/ and wype not out my mercy/ that I haue shewed on ỹ house of my God/ and on the officers therof.

In the same tyme sawe I some treadynge wyne prestes on the Sabeth and bringinge in clusters, and asses laden with wyne, grapes/ figges/ and bringinge all maner of burthens vnto Ierusalem/ vpon the Saboth daye. And I rebuked thē earnestly the same daye that they solde ỹ victayles. There dwelt men of Tyre also therin/ which broughte fysh and all maner of ware, and solde on the Saboth vnto the children of Iuda and Ierusalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Iuda, and sayde vnto thē: what euell thynge is/ thys that ye do/ & breake the Saboth daye? Dyd not oure fathers euen thus/ and oure God broughte all this plage vpon vs & vpō this cytye? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon Israel in that ye breake the Saboth.

And it fortuned, that when* the porters of Ierusalē made shadowe before ỹ Saboth, I cõmaunded to shutt the gates/ & charged ỹ they shulde not be opened tyll after the Saboth: and some of my seruauntes set I at the gates/ ỹ there shulde no burthen be broughte in on the Saboth daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes once or twyce ouer nyghte without Ierusalē with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore/ & sayde vnto thē: why tary ye all nyght about the wall? If ye do it once agayne, I will laye handes vpō you. From that tyme forth came they no more on the Saboth. And I sayde vnto the Leuites whych were cleane/ that they shulde come and kepe the gates/ to hallowe the Saboth daye. Thynke vpon me (O my God) cõcernynge this also/ and spare me accordynge to thy greate mercy.

And at the same tyme sawe I Iewes/ that maried wyues of Asdod, Ammō & of Moab and their children spake halfe in the speache of Asdod/ and coulde not speake in the Iewes language/ but by the tonge myghte a man perceaue euery people. And I reproued them/ and cursed them/ and smote certayne men of them/ and pluckte them vp/ and toke an ooth of them by God: Ye shall not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes/ neither shall ye take their daughters vnto youre sonnes/ or for youre selues. Dyd not Salomō the kynge of Israel synne therin? and yet amonge many heythen was there no kynge lyke hym/ and he was deare vnto hys God/ and God made him kynge ouer all Israel/ & yet neuertheles outlandysh wemen caused hym to synne? And shall we then obeye vnto you, to do all thys great euell/ and to transgresse agaynst oure God, & marye straunge wyues?

And one of the children of Ioiada the sonne of Eliasib the hye preest, had made a cõtracte wyth Sanabalat the Horonite: but I chaced him frō me. O my God/ thynke thou vpon them that are quyte of the prestehode/ and haue defyled the couenaūt of the prestehode and of the Leuites. Thus clensed I thē from all soch as were outlandish/ and appoynted the courses of the prestes and Leuites/ euery one to his office/ and to offre the wod at tymes appoynted/ and the fyrst frutes. Thynke thou vpon me (O my God) for the best.

The boke of Esther

¶ Kyng Ahasuerus/which is called Artharerres maketh a royall feast / whereunto the quene Vasthi wyll not come: for which cause she is deuorced.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

IN the tyme of Ahasuerus which raygned fro Inda vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundreth & seuē & twētye landes/ what tyme as he sate on hys seate royall in the castell of Susan in the thirde yeare of his raygne/ he made a feast vnto all his princes & seruauntes namely vnto the mightie men of Perlia & Media, to the capitaynes & rulers of hys countrees/ that he mighte shewe the noble riches of his kingdome, and the glorious worshippe of his greatnesse, many dayes longe/ euen an hundreth and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were expyred the kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in ỹ castell of Susan, both vnto greate & small, seuen dayes longe in the courte of ỹ gardē by ỹ kynges palace: where there hanged white reed & yalow clothes fastened wt coardes of lynnen & scarlet in siluer rynges/ vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The bēches were of goulde & syluer made vpon a pauement of grene, white, yalowe & black Marble. And the drynke was caried in vessels of goulde, & there was euer chaūge of vessell. And the kynges wine was myche acordinge to the power of the kynge. And no man was appoynted what he shulde drynke: for the kynge had cōmaunded all the officers of his house, that euery one shulde do as it lyked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for the wemen in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye when the kinge was merye of the wyne/ he cōmaunded Mehuman, Bartha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar and Carcas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that dyd seruyce in ỹ presence of kynge Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi with the crowne regal/ that he might shewe ỹ people & princes her fairnesse: for she was bewtyfull. But the quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by hys chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge very wroth, & his indignacion kyndled in him.

And the kynge spake to the wyse men that had vnderstandinge in the ordinaunces of ỹ lande for the kynges matters must be hādled before all soch as haue knowlege of ỹ lawe and iudgemēt: and the nexte vnto him were/ Carsena/ Sethar/ Admatha/ Tharsis/ Maeres/ Marsana & Mamucan, the seuen princes of the Perlians & Medes, which sawe the kynges face/ and sat aboue in the kyngdome/ What lawe shulde be executed vpō the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not acordinge to ỹ worde of the kinge by his chāberlaynes. D Then sayde Mamucan before the kynge & the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not onely done euell agaynst ỹ kinge but also agaynst all the princes & all the people in all ỹ landes of kynge Ahasuerus for this dede of ỹ quene shall come abrode vnto all wemen/ so ỹ they shall despyse their husbandes before their eyes, and shall saye: the kinge Ahasuerus cōmaunded Vasthi the quene to come before him/ but she wolde not. And so shall the princesses in Perlia & Media saye likewise vnto all ỹ kinges princes/ when they heare of this dede of the quene/ thus shall there aryse despytefulnes and wrath ynough. If it please the kynge, let there go a commaundement from him/ and let it be wrytten acordynge to the lawe of the Perlians & Medians (& not to be trāsgressed) ỹ Vasthi come no more before kynge Ahasuerus, & let ỹ kynge geue ỹ kingdome vnto another ỹ is better then she.

And that this wrytinge of ỹ kinge which shalbe made/ be publyshed throwout all his empyre (which is greate) that all wyues maye holde their husbādes in honoure/ both amonge greate and small.

This pleased the kynge and the princes/ and the kynge dyd acordinge to the worde of Mamucan. Then were there letters sent forth in to all the kynges landes, in to euery lande acordinge to the wrytynge therof/ and to euery people after their language/ that euery mā shulde be lorde in his awne house. And thys caused he be spoken after the language of hys people.

¶ After the quene put awaye/ certen goodly young damoselles are searched oute. Edissa otherwyse called Esther/ pleaseth the kyng/ and is made quene. Mardochus openeth vnto the kyng those that wolde betraye hym.

¶ The .ij. Chapter.

AFter these actes when the displeasure of kinge Ahasuerus was layed he thoughte vpō Vasthi/ what she had done/ and what was cōcluded concerninge her. Then sayde the kynges seruauntes: Let there be fayre younge virgins sought for the kynge/ and let the kynge appoynte ouerseers in all the landes of his empyre/ that they maye bringe together all fayre younge virgyns vnto the castell of Susan to the wemens buyldinge/ vnder the hande of Hagei the kynges chamberlayne/ that kepeth the wemen/ and let hym geue them their apparell. And loke which damsell pleaseth ỹ kinge/ let her be quene in Vasthis steade.

stede. This pleased the kynge/and he dyd so.

In the castell of Susan there was a Iewe/whose name was Mardocheus/ ꝑ sonne of Iair, the sonne of Semei, ꝑ sonne of Cis ꝑ sonne of Jemini/which was caried awaye
4.Reg.xxiiij.e. from Jerusalem/*whan Jechonias ꝑ kynge of Juda was led awaye/ (whom Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilō caryed awaye) and he norished Hadasah (that is Esther) hys vncles daughter: for she had nether father nor mother/ and she was a fayre and beutyB full damsell. And when her father and mother dyed/ Mardocheus receaued her as hys awne daughter.

Now when the kynges cōmaundemēt and cōmissyon was publyshed/ & many damsels were brought together vnto the castell of Susan vnder ꝑ hande of Hagei/ Esther was takē also vnto ꝑ kynges house vnder ꝑ hande of Hagei ꝑ keper of the wemē/ & the damsell pleased him/ & she founde grace in his sighte And he caused her oyntment to be geuen her/ and her gyftes/ & gaue her .vij. notable gētyl women of the kynges house/ & arayed both her & her gentyll wemē very ryche ye in the house of the wemen. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her/ ꝑ she shulde not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery daye before the courte of the wemens buyldinge/ ꝑ he might knowe how Esther dyd/ and what shulde become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damsell came that she shulde come to ꝑ kinge Ahasuerus/ after that she had bene twelue monethes in the deckynge of the wemen (for their deckynge must haue so moch tyme/ namely sixe monethes with Balme & Myrre/ & sixe monethes wt good spyces/ so were the wemē beutifyed) then wente there one dāsell vnto ꝑ kynge/ & what so euer she requyred/ ꝑ must be geuen her to go with her out of the wemēs buyldinge vnto ꝑ kyngs palace. And when one came in the euenynge/ ꝑ same wēt
C frō him on the morow vnto ꝑ seconde house of wemen, vnder the hande of Saasgas ꝑ kings chāberlayne, which kepte the cōcubins. And she must come vnto ꝑ kinge nomore/ except it pleased the kynge/ and that he cauled her to be called by name.

Now when the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (whō he had receaued as hys awne daughter) that she shulde come to the kynge/ she desyred nothinge but what Hages the kinges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen sayde.

And Esther founde fauoure in the syghte of all them that loked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto kynge Ahasuerus in to the house royall/ in the tenth moneth whych is called Tebeth/ in the seuenth yeare of hys raigne.

And the kynge loued Esther aboue all the wemen/ and she founde grace and mercy in his syghte before all the virgyns: and he set the quenes croune vpon her head/ and made D her quene in steade of Vasthi. And the kinge made a great feast vnto all hys princes and seruauntes (whych feast was because of Esther) and let the landes be in quyetnes/ and gaue royall gyftes.

And whan the virgyns were geathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in ꝑ kinges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and her people/ acordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus/ like as whē he was her tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate/ two of the kynges chamberlaynes Bagathan and Thares which kepte the doze/ were wroth/ & sought to laye their handes on ꝑ kynge Assuerus: wherof Mordocheus gat knowledge/ and tolde it vnto quene Esther/ & Esther certyfyed the kynge therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquisycion was made/ it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was wrytten in the Cronycles before the kynge.

Haman the Macedonian/ after he was exalted/ obtayned of the kyng that all the Iewes shulde be put to death/ because Mardocheus had not done hym worshyp as other had.

The.iij. Chapter.

After these actes dyd the kynge promote Haman ꝑ sonne of Amadatha A the Agagite/ and set hym hye/ & set his seate aboue al the princes that were with him. And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the gate/ bowed their knees/ and dyd reuerēce vnto Haman: for the kynge had so commaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee/ and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whych were in the kynges gate/ sayde vnto Mardocheus: why trāsgressest thou the kynges cōmaundemēt? And when they spake this dayly vnto hym, B & he folowed thē not/ they tolde Haman/ that they myght se whether Mardocheus maters wolde endure: for he had tolde thē, that he was a Iewe. And whē Haman sawe, that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym/ nor worshypped hym/ he was full of indignacyon & thought it to lyttell to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him ꝑ nacīō of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroye all the Iewes the nacion of Mardocheus/ that were in the whole empyre of Ahasuerus.

In the fyrst moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the twelueth yeare of kynge Ahasuerus they cast Phur (ꝑ is a lott) before Hamā/on what daye & what moneth this should be done: & it went oute the twelueth moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto kinge Ahasuerus: There is a people scattered abrode and dispersed amōge all people in all the landꝭ of thyne empire/ & their lawe is cōtrary vnto al people/ & they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it the kingꝭ profet to suffre thē after this maner. If it please the kynge/ let him wryte/ that they maye be destroyed/ & so will I weye downe ten thousande talentes of syluer/ vnder the handes of the worckmen, to be brought into the kinges chamber. Then toke the kynge his ringe frō hys hande/ & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Iewes enemie And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Let the syluer be geuen the/ and that people also/ to do with all what pleaseth the.

D Then were the kynges scrybes called on the thirteneth daye of the fyrst moneth/ and there was writtē (accordynge as Haman cōmaunded) vnto the kynges princes and to the captaynes euery where in the landes/ and to the rulars of euery people in ꝑ countreyes on euery syde/ accordynge to the writynge of euery nacyon/ and after their language in the name of kynge Ahasuerus/ and sealed with the kynges ringe. And the writtinges were sent by postes in to all the kynges landes/ to rote out/ to kyll/ and to destroye all Iewes/ both yonge and olde/ chyldren and wemen in one daye (namely vpon the thyrteenth daye of the twelueth moneth/ whych is the moneth Adar) and to spoyle their goodes.

Thys was the summe of the writynge/ ꝑ there shulde be a cōmaundement geuen in all landes/ to be publyshed vnto all people/ that they shulde be ready agaynst the same daye. And the postes wente in all the haste accordynge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was the commaundement deuysed. And the kynge and Haman sate and dranke. But the cytye of Susan was disquieted.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

When Mardocheus perceaued all that was done, he rēte his clothes and put on sack cloth/ and asshes/ and wente out in to the myddes of the citie/ and cried loude and lamētably/ and came before the kinges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gatē/ that had sack cloth on. And in all landes and places/ as farre as the kynges worde and commaundement extended/ there was greate lamentacyon amonge the *Iewes and many fasted wepte/ mourned, and laye in sack clothes and in asshes. So Esthers damsels/ and her chamberlaynes/ came and tolde it her. Then was the quene exceadingly astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put them on, and laye the sack clothe from hym. But Mardocheus wolde not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whych stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Mardocheus/ that he myght knowe what it were, and wherfore he dyd so. So Hathath wēte forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cytye, whych was before the kynges gate.

* The Iewes were fyrst called Hebrues, of Heber the eldest sonne of Sale sonne of Arphaxat/ as it appeareth. Genes.xi.b. & 1. Paral.i.c. After were they called Israel of Jacob & after Iewes of one of the sonnes of Jacob that was lorde of Iudea.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all ꝑ had happened vnto him/ and of the summe of syluer that Hamā had promysed to weye downe in the kynges chāber because of the Iewes for to destroye them (and he gaue him the copye of the cōmaundement/ that was deuysed at Susan to destroye them/ that he myght shewe it vnto Esther/ and to speake to her & charge her/ that she shulde go in to the kinge and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto hym for her people.

And whē Hathath came in/ & tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus/ Esther spake vnto Hathath/ and cōmaunded hym to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes/ and the people in the landes of the kyng knowe/ that whosoeuer cōmeth within the courte vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the cōmaundement is that the same shall dye immedyatly/ excepte the kynge holde out the gouldē scepter vnto hym, that he maye lyue. As for me/ I haue not bene called to come in to ꝑ kinge now this thirtie dayes.

And when Mardocheus was certified of Esthers wordꝭ/ Mardocheus bad saye agayne vnto Esther: thinke not to saue thine awne life/ whyle thou art in ꝑ kinges house before all Iewes: for yf thou holdest thy peace at this tyme/ then shall ꝑ Iewes haue helpe and delyuerannce out of another place/ and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to ꝑ kyngdome, for this tymes sake? Esther bad/ geue Mardocheus this answer: Go thou thy waye then/ & geather together all the Iewes ꝑ are founde at Susan/ and fast ye for me/ ꝑ ye eate not & drinke not in thre dayes/ nether daye nor nighte. I and my mayden will fast lykewyse, & so wyll I go in to the kynge cōtrary to the cōmaundemēt: yf I perishe/ I perishe. So Mardocheus wente his waye/ & dyd all that Esther had cōmaunded hym.

¶ Esther

¶ Esther entreth in to the kyng and byddeth him and Haman to a feast. Hamã prepareth a gallouse for Mardocheus.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

A IN the thirde daye put Esther on her royall apparell, & stode in ỹ courte of the kyngs palace withyn ouer agaynst the kynges house. And the kynge sate vpon hys royall seate in the kynges palace ouer agaynst the gate of the house. And when the kynge sawe Esther the quene standynge in ỹ courte, she founde grace in hys syghte. And the kynge helde out the golden scepter in hys hande towarde
B Esther. So Esther stept forth & touched the toppe of the scepter. Then sayde the kynge vnto her: What wilt thou quene Esther? and what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of ỹ empyre, & it shall be geuẽ the. Esther sayde If it please ỹ kinge, let ỹ kinge & Haman come this daye vnto ỹ banket ỹ I haue prepared. The kynge sayde: cause Haman to make haste, that he maye do as Esther hath sayde.

Now when the kynge & Haman came to ỹ banket ỹ Esther had prepared, ỹ kyng sayde vnto Esther at the bancket of wyne Esther, what is thy peticyõ? and it shalbe geuen the. And what requyrest thou? If it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

C Then answered Esther and sayde: my peticion & desyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the syght of the kynge, & yf it please ỹ kinge to geue me my peticion, and to fulfyll my request, then let the kynge & Haman come to the bancket ỹ I shall prepare for thẽ, and to morow will I do as the kinge hath sayde.

Then went Haman forth the same daye ioyfull and mery in his mynde. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate, ỹ he stode not vp and kneled before hym, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he refrayned him selfe: and whẽ he came home, he sent, and called for his frendes, and Zares hys wyfe, & tolde thẽ of the glory of his riches, & the multitude of his children all to gether how ỹ kinge had promoted him so greatly, and how that he was take about the princes and seruãtes of the kynge. Hamã sayde moreouer: Yee & Esther the quene let no man come with the kinge vnto ỹ banket ỹ she had prepared, excepte me, & tomorow am I bidden vnto her also with ỹ kinge. But in all thys am I not satisfyed as longe as I se Mardocheus the Iewe syttinge at ỹ kynges gate. Then sayde Zares hys wyfe & all hys frendes vnto hym: Let them make a galowes of fyfty cubites hie, and tomorow speake thou vnto the kinge ỹ Mardocheus maye be hanged theron, yf thou cõmest merely with the kynge vnto the banket. Hamã
D was well content wyth all, and caused a galowes to be prepared.

¶ The kyng turneth ouer the Chronycles & fyndeth the scripture of Mardocheus, & then to the cõsolyõ of Hamã, cõmaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honoure.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

A THe same night could not ỹ kinge slepe, and he cõmaunded to bringe the Cronycles and storyes: whych when they were red before ỹ kinge they happened on ỹ place where it was written, how Mardocheus had tolde, that the kynges two chãberlaynes (whych kepte the threshold) sought to laye handes on kynge Ahasuerus. And the kynge sayde: what worshippe & good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynges seruãtes
B that ministred vnto him. There is nothynge done for hym. And the kynge sayde: Who is in the courte? (for Haman was come in to ỹ courte without before the kyngs house, that he myght speake vnto the kynge to hange Mardocheus on ỹ tre, that he had prepared for him.) And ỹ kinges seruãtes sayde vnto him: beholde, Haman standeth in the courte. The kynge sayde: let him come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge sayde vnto hym: what shall be done vnto the man, whom the kynge wolde fayne bringe vnto worshippe? But Haman thought in hys hert: Whom shulde the kynge els be glad to bringe vnto worshippe, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whom the kynge wolde be glad to do worshippe, be
C broughte hyther, that he maye be arayed wyth the royall garmentes whych the kynge vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpõ, and that the crowne royall maye be set vpon hys heed. And let this rayment and horse be deliuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges princes, that he maye araye the man withall whõ the kinge wolde fayne honoure, and cary hym vpõ the horse thorow the strete of the citie, & cause it to be proclamed before him: thus shall it be done to euery mã, whom the kinge wolde fayne honoure.

The kynge sayde: make haste, and take as thou hast sayde, the rayment and the horse: & do euen so with Mardocheus the Iewe that sytteth before ỹ kynges gate, & let nothinge fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, & arayed him, and brought hym on horsbacke thorow the streate of the citie, and proclamed before hym: Euen thus shall it be done vnto euery man whom the kinge is disposed to honoure.
D And Mardocheus came agayne to ỹ kynges gate, but Haman gat him home in all ỹ haste mourninge with bare heade, and tolde Zares his wyfe & all his frendes, euery thynge that had happened him. Then sayde his wise men & Zares his wyfe vnto him: If it be Mardocheus of the sede of the Iewes, before whom thou hast begonne to fall, thou canst do nothynge vnto hym, but shalt fall before hym. Whyle they were yet talkinge with hym, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste to come vnto the bāket that Esther had prepared.

¶ The quene biddeth the king and Hamā agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman: and he is hāged on the gallowes which he had prepared for Mardocheus.

¶ The.bij.Chapter.

AND when the kynge and Hamā came to ỹ banket that quene Esther had prepared, ỹ kynge sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the banket of wyne: what is thy petitiō quene Esther, that it maye be geuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yee, all be euen halfe of ỹ empyre, & it shall be done. Esther the quene answered and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O kynge) & yf it please the kynge then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre & my people for my petitiōs sake: for we are solde I & my people bothe to be destroied, to be slaine B & to perisshe. And wolde God we were solde to * Some reade. be bondmen and bondwemen, then wolde I although the although be the enemye wolde not recompence the kynges harme. kynges harme. The kynge Assuerus spake and sayde vnto quene Esther: what is he that? Or where is he that darre presume in his mynde to do soch a thinge after that maner? Esther sayde: the enemye and aduersary is this wicked Haman.

C As for Hamā, he was exceadingly afraied before the kinge & the quene. And the kynge arose from the bāket and from the wyne in hys displeasure and wente into the palace garden. And Haman stode vp and besought quene Esther for hys lyfe: for he sawe that there was a mischefe prepared for hym of the kynge allready.

And when the kynge came agayne out of the palace garden into the parler where they had eaten, Haman had layed hym vpon the D bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayde ỹ kinge wyll he force the quene also before* me in ỹ house? As sone as that worde wēte out of the * Or in my presence. kynges mouth, they* couered Hamans face. * To couer his face, is to And Harbonah one of the chamberlaynes ỹ stode before the kynge, sayde. Beholde there standeth a gallowes in Hamans house fyfty cubytes hye, whych he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for the kynge. The kynge sayde: hange hym theron. So they hanged Haman on the gallowes that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacyfyed.

¶ The.biij.Chapter.

THe same daye dyd kynge Assuerus geue the house of Haman the Iewes enemye, vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before ỹ kynge: for Esther tolde how that he belōged vnto her. And the kynge put of hys fynger ryng, which he had take from Haman, and gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Hamā. And Esther spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at hys fete, & besought hym, that he wolde put awaye the wyckednes of Haman the Agagite, and his deuice that he had ymagined agaynst the Iewes. And the kyng helde out the goulden scepter vnto Esther. B Then rose Esther, & stode before the kynge, and sayde: yf it please the kynge, & yf I haue founde grace in his sight, & yf it be cōuenīēt for the kynge, & yf it be accepted in his sight then let it be wrytten, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, maye be called agayne: wych letters he wrote, to destroye the Iewes in all the kynges landes. For how can I se ỹ euell that shall happen vnto my people? & how cā I loke vpon the destruccion of my kynred?

Then sayde the kynge Assuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Mardocheus the Iewe: Beholde, I haue geuen Esther the house C of Haman, and him haue they hanged vpon a tre, because he layed hande vpon the Iewes. Wryte ye now therfore for the Iewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, & seale it with the kynges ryng (for the wrytinges that were wrytten in the kynges name, and sealed wyth the kynges ryng, durst no man dysanulle.) Then were the kynges scrybes called at the same tyme in the thirde moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was wrytten (as Mardocheus cōmaunded) vnto the Iewes and to the prynces, to the Debytes and captaynes in the landes from India vntyll Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euery one accordynge to the wrytynge therof, vnto euery people after their speche, and to the Iewes accordynge to their wrytinge and language. D

And it was written in the kynge Assuerus name, and sealed with the kinges ringe. And by postes that rode vpon swyfte ponge Mules, sent he the wrytynges, wher in the kynge graunted the Iewes (in what cytyes so euer they were) to geather them selues to gether, and to stande for their lyfe, and for to rote to rote oute to slaye / and to destroye all the power of the people & lande that wolde trouble them with chyldren and wemen . and to spoyle their good vpō one daye in all ỹ lādes of kynge Ahasuerus namely vpon the thyrteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

* To lande for their lyues is a matter of speakyng simple to the Iewes for they were syre to resiste and kyll their enemyes and spoyle their goodes.

The summe of the wrytynge was / how there was a cōmaundemēt geuē in all landes to be publyshed vnto all ỹ people / that the Iewes shulde be ready agaynst that daye to auenge them selues on their enemyes. And the postes that rode vpon the Mules / made haste with all spede / accordyng to ỹ kynges worde: and the commaundement was deuysed in the castell of Susan.

As for Mardocheus, he went oute frō the kynge in royall apparell of yelow & whyte / and with a greate crowne of goulde / beynge arayed with a garment of lynnē and purple / and the cytte of Susan reioyced & was glad: but vnto the Iewes there was come lyght & gladnesse / and ioye & worshyppe. And in all landes and cyties / into what places soeuer the kynges worde and commaundemēt reached / there was ioye and myrth / prosperite & good dayes amonge the Iewes: in somoch that many of the people in the lande became of the Iewes belefe / for ỹ feare of ỹ Iewes came vpon them.

¶ At the cōmaundement of the kynge the Iewes put their aduersaries to deeth. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Iewes kepe a feast daye in remembraunce of their deliuerance.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

IN the twelueth moneth / that is the moneth Adar / vpon the thyrteenth daye, which the kinges worde and cōmaundement had appoynted / that it shulde be done / euen vpō the same daye that the enemyes shulde haue destroyed the Iewes to haue oppressed them / it turned contrary wyse / euen that the Iewes shulde subdue their enemyes. Then geathered the Iewes together in their cyties within all ỹ landes of kynge Ahasuerus / to laye hande on soch as wolde do them euell / and no man coulde withstand them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes / and princes and Debities / and officers of the kynge promoted the Iewes: for the feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was greate in the kynges house / & the reporte of hym was noysed in all lādes / how he increased & grewe.

Thus the Iewes smote all their enemies
B with a sore slaughter / and slewe & destroyed / and dyd after their wyll vnto soch as were their aduersaries. And at the castell of Susan slewe the Iewes and destroyed fyue hundreth men: & slewe Pharsandatha / Delphō / Alphatha / Phoratha / Adalia / Aridatha / Pharmastha / Arisai / Aridai, Uaizatha / the ten sonnes of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha ỹ enemye of the Iewes: but on his goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the kynge certyfyed of the nombre of those that were slayne at ỹ castell of Susan. And the kynge sayde vnto quene Esther: The Iewes haue slayne & destroyed fyue hundreth men at ỹ castell of Susan, & the ten sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kynge? what is thy petityon / that it maye be geuen the? & what requyrest thou more to be done? Esther sayd: If it please the kynge / let him suffre the Iewes to morow also to do accordyng vnto this dayes cōmaundemēt / that they maye hange Hamās ten sonnes vpon the tre. And the kyng charged to do so / & the cōmaundemēt was deuysed at Susan / & Hamans ten sonnes were hanged. And the Iewes geathered thē selues together at Susan / vpō the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slewe thre hundreth men at Susan / but on their goodes they layed no handes.

As for the other Iewes in ỹ kynges lādes / they came together / & * stode for their lyues / & gat rest from their enemyes: and slewe of their enemyes fyue & seuētye thousand how beit they layed no handes on their goodes. This was done on the thirteenth daye of the moneth Adar / & on the fourteenth daye of the same moneth rested they / which daye they ordeyned to be a daye of feastyng & gladnesse But the Iewes at Susan were come together both on the thyrteenth daye & on ỹ fourteenth / & on the fyfteenth daye they rested, and the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastynge & gladnes. Therfore the Iewes ỹ dwelt in the villages and vnwalled townes / ordeyned the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar / to be a daye of feastyng and gladnes / and one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and sent the wrytyngs vnto all the Iewes ỹ were C in al the landes of kynge Ahasuerus / both nye & farre / that they shulde yearly receaue & holde the fourteenth & fyfteenth daye of the moneth Adar / as the dayes wherin ỹ Iewes cam to rest frō their enemies / & as a moneth wherin their payne was turned to ioye / and their sorowe into prosperite: that they shulde obserue the same as dayes of wealth & gladnes / and one to sende gyftes vnto another / & to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Iewes receaued it that they had begonne to do / and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Haman ỹ sonne of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemye/had deuyled to destroye all the Jewes / & caused to cast Phur(that is Lot) for to put them in feare/& to bringe them to naughte:and how Hester wente and spake to the Kynge / that thorow letters his wycked deuyce(which he ymagined agaynst the Jewes)might be turned vpon his awne heede/ and how he & hys sonnes were hanged on the tre.For ỹ which cause they called this daye Phurim after the name of *Phur, according to all the wordes of this wrytyng: and what they them selues had sene/and what had happened vnto them.

* That is/ Lot.

And the Jewes set it vp/ and toke it vpon them and their sede/& vpō all soch as ioyned them selues vnto them / that they wolde not mysse to obserue these two dayes yearly/according as they were wrytten and appoynted/how that these dayes are not to be forgotten/but to be kepte of chylderes chyldrē amōge all kynredes in all landes & cytyes. They are the dayes of Phurim/which are not to be ouerslipte amonge the Jewes/ & the memoryall of them oughte not to perysshe from their sede.

And quene Hester the daughter of Abihail & Mardocheus the Jewe wrote wyth all auctorite/to confirme this seconde wrytting of Phurim/and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the hundreth & seuē & twenty landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus / wyth frendly and faythfull wordes / to confirme these dayes of Phurim / in their tyme appoynted / according as Mardocheus the Jewe and Hester the quene had ordeyned cōcernynge them:lyke as they vpō their soule and vpon their sede had confirmed the actes of the* fastynges and of hir cōplaynte. And Hester cōmaunded to stablish these actes of this Phurim/and to wryte them in a boke.

¶ The.x.Chapter.

And the kynge Ahasuerus layed tribute vpon the lande/ and vpon the Iles of the see. As for all ỹ worke of his power and auctorite/ & the greate worshippe of Mardocheus / whych the kynge gaue him, beholde, it is wrytte in the Cronycles of the kynges of Media and Persia. For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde nexte vnto kynge Ahasuerus / and greate amōge the Jewes/& accepted amōge the multitude of his brethren / as one that seketh ỹ welth of his people/ and speaketh the best for all his sede.

The boke of Job.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

In the lāde of Hus there was a man called Job: an innocent & vertuous man,soch one as feared God excheued euell. This mā had.vii. sonnes/ and iii daughters. & ys substaunce was.vii.M.shepe.iii.M.camels v. C.youck of oxen.v.C. she asses / and a very greate housholde:so that he was one of the most principall men amonge all them of the east countre. And his sonnes went / & made bancketes:one daye in one house / another daye in another/ & sent for their.iii. systers to eate & drincke with them. So when they had passed ouer ỹ tyme of their banckettyng rounde aboute,Job sent for them / & clensed them agayne/and gat vp early, & offered for euery one a brentoffryng. For Job thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence/and haue bene vnthankfull to God in their hertes. And thus dyd Job euery daye. Now vpō a tyme,when ỹ a* seruauntes of God b* cam & stode before the Lord, Sa- a* By the seruauntes of God here vnderstande not only angelles/by whō he ordreth the course & workes of the worlde: but also the godly & chosen/whom he continually careth and prouydeth for. Job.v.a.

b* Cam & stode before the lorde. Thynck not that God some tyme appeareth to the angelles/and sometyme not/for the good aungelles do alwayes se the face of God: Neither commeneth God euer with the aungelles or with the deuell with bodely speache but the holy ghoost in the scriptures speaketh many thynges vnto vs accordynge to oure fealynge/and vseth a maner of speakynge familyar to vs / attrybutynge appearyng speakyng enquiryng and answerynge to God and to aungelles which thynge mā onely vseth to shewe that we therby maye the easelyar perceaue his meanynge. The commynge of the aungelles here to no nother thyng than to gene accomptes of their office inioyned them; which they gene/ knowyng that God seyth wyth what trust they dyde it: and to gene thankes and wayte forth.r to ward. They came (sayth Origen) honourynge magnifyng prayseyng & genynge thankes. Of Satan also wryteth he thus. He cam nether with goyng to/or cōmynge in.but he cam in thought/counceill/a most wycked desyre to accuse the ryght welle before God. His thought and desyre are take as a cōmyng. The deuyll then is counted to haue come into the syght of God/not that the most wycked cam in drede in the syght of the good God/but because his cruelle most wycked thoughtes cam into the syght of God. And thus euen now a dayes also commeth the deuyll with them in to the syght of God in that he dayly accuseth/fyndeth faute/vexeth/persecuteth & troubleth the godly.

than cam also among[st] them. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan: From whence cōmest thou? Sathan answered the Lorde/ & sayd: I haue gone aboute the lande and walked thorow it.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: hast thou not cōsydered my seruaunt Job/ how that he is an innocent and vertuous mā: loch one as feareth God, and eschueth euell, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? Sathā answered/ and sayde vnto the Lorde: Doth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued him, his house/ and all his substaunce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the worckes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the lande? But laye thyne hande vpon him a lytle/ touche once all that he hathe/ and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayd vnto Sathan: lo all that he hath/ be in thy power: only vpon hym selfe se that thou laye not thyne hande. Then went Sathan forth from the Lorde.

¶ Now vpō a certayne daye whē his sonnes and daughters were eatynge/ and drinckīng wyne in their eldest brothers house/ there came a messenger vnto Job/ & sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowynge/ & the Asses going in the pasture besyde them: the Sabees cam in violently/ and toke thē all awaye: ye they haue slayne thy seruaūtes with the swearde/ and I only ranne my waye to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakynge/ there came another/ and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen/ it hath consumed/ and brent vp all thy shepe and seruauntes: and I only ranne my waye/ to tell the. In ỳ meane season whyle he was yet speakynge/ there cam another, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armies/ & fell in vpon thy camels, which they haue caried awaye/ yee and slayne thy seruauntes with the swearde: and I only am gottē awaye/ to tell the: Whyle he was speakynge/ there came yet another/ & sayde: Thy sonnes and daughters were eatyng & drynckynge wyne in their eldest brothers house/ & lodenly there came a mighty greate wynde out of the South/ & smote the .iiii. corners of the house: which fell vpon thy children/ so that they are dede: and I am gotten awaye alone/ to tell the.

Then Job stode vp/ and rente hys clothes shaued his heade, fell doune vpō the groūde/ worshipped and sayde: Naked came I out of my mothers wombe/ & naked shall I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue/ and the Lorde hath taken awaye * now blessed be ỳ name of the Lorde. In all these thynges dyd Job not offende, *ner murmured folyshly agaynst God.

* The Greke & Origen adde hereunto. As it hath pleased the the Lorde so is it done.

* The Greke addeth with his lyppes.

Job is plaged with sore byles/ & afterwarde is mocked of his wyfe. His frendes vnryte him & haue compassion on hym.

The .ij. Chapter.

IT chappened also vpō a tyme/ that when the seruauntes of God cam & stode before the Lorde/ Sathan came amōge them, & stode before him. * And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan: From whence commest thou? Sathan answered and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande and walked thorow it.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: hast thou not consydered my seruaunt Job/ how that he is an innocent and vertuous mā loch one as feareth God and eschueth euell/ and that there is none lyke him in the lande? But thou mouedest me agaynst hym/ to punysh him: yet is it in vayne, for he contynueth still in his godlynesse. Sathā answered ỳ Lorde, and sayde: Skynne for skynne? yee a man will geue all ỳ euer he hath/ for his lyfe. But laye thyne hande vpon him, touche him once vpō the bone and flesh/ and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: lo/ there hast thou him in thy power, but spare his lyfe.

So went Sathan forth from the Lorde/ and smote Job with marueylous sore byles/ from the sole of the fote vnto hys crowne: so that he sat vpon the grounde in the asshes/ and scraped of the fylth of hys sores with a potsherde.

Then sayd his wyfe vnto him: Wolte thou contynue in thy perfectnes? curse God/ and dye. But Job sayde vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Seynge we haue receaued prosperite at the hande of God, wher fore shulde we not be content with aduersyte also? In all these thynges/ dyd not Job synne with his lyppes.

Now when Jobs frendes herde of all the trouble/ that happened vnto hym/ there came thre of them, euery one from hys awne place: namely/ Eliphas the Thamanite/ Baldad the Suhite/ and Zophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come/ to shewe their compassyon vpon him/ and to comforte hym. So when they lyfte vp their eyes a farre of/ they knewe him not.

Then they cryed/ and wepte: then euery one of them rente hys clothes, and sprynckled dust vpon their heades in the ayre. They sat them doune by him also vpō the grounde vij. dayes and .vij. nyghtes. Neyther was there eny of them that spake one worde vnto hym/ for they sawe that hys payne was very greate.

¶ The

¶ The wordes of Job/ wherin he declareth that thys present lyfe is myserable: & that the deeth of the rygh teous is ioyouse and fortunable

a* Cursed hys daye. Lyke as a man hauynge an impostume clayth Chyrurgome(yf he be cut of the Surgeon/ hauynge nothyng wher with he may resyst durynge the tyme of his cuttynge he deeth for the tyme(that he reyseth him not: yet is redy to ayde them that stand by him: and yet can do nothyng vnto them: ¶ euen so Job fearing the greuousnes of blasphemynge and curssynge doth wrynge to vnlyp vnly thynges & speakynge after the maner of the comen people whych imputeth their miserye to the influence of the starres & to the daye of their byrth curseth his wombe: that is to say according how byrter a lyfe he lyueth: & vnto how great myserye he was borne(as we comenly saye) in an vnhappy houre: euen as though now a dayes a man repenting his synne/ should saye/ Wo is me wretch. In an vnhappy houre was I borne whych wyth my deades haue deuyded my maker and wo worth my selfe.

b* They that curse the dayes: are those that are weryed of their lyfe / in somoche that they fall in deade to cursynge.

* Marck wide

AFter this opened Job hys mouth/ and/ a* cursed his daye/ and sayde: lost be that daye / wherin I was borne: and the nyght/ in the whych it was sayde. there is a mā chylde conceaued The same daye be turned to darcknesse. and not regarded of God from aboue, nether be shyned vpō with lyght: but be couered with darcknesse / and the shadowe of death. Lett the dymme cloude fall vpon it / and let it be lapped in with sorowe Let the darck storme ouercome that nyght, lett it not be reckened amōge the dayes of the yeare / nor counted in the monethes. Desyred be that nyght/ & discōmended: let* the cōthat curse the daye/ euē those ẏ be ready to rayse vp mournynge geue it also their curse. Lett the starres be dymme thorow darcknesse of it. Let it loke for lyght. but let it se none nether the rysyng vp of the fayre morynyng: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me / nor hyd these sorowes fro myne eyes.

Alas, why dyed I not in the byrth? Why dyd not I perysh, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me suck wyth their brestes? Then shulde I now haue lyen styll, I shulde haue slepte, & bene at rest: like as the kynges and lordes of the erth which buylde them selues specyall places: As the prynces ẏ haue greate substaunce of gould/ and their houses full of syluer. O that I vtterly had no beynge / or were as a chynge borne out of tyme, that is put aside ether as yonge children, which neuer sawe the light There must the wycked ceasse from their tyranny there such as are ouerlabourid be at rest: there are those lett out fre / whych haue bene in prison, so that they heare nomore the voyce of the oppressoure: There are small and greate. the bonde man, and he that is fre from his master.

Wherfore is the lyght geuen to him that is in misery? and lyfe vnto them, that haue heuy hertes? Whych longe for death / yet come not: & search for it moare then for treasure which also wolde be exceding glad, & re ioyce yf they fownde their graue. That shuld be hope to ẏ man whose waye is hyd * which God hedeth backe from him. For my syghes come before I eate & my roarynges fall out like flowyng water For ẏ thyng ẏ I feared/ is come vpon me: and the thynge that I was afrayd of, is happened vnto me? Was I not happy? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not at rest? And now cōmeth such mysery vpō me.

¶ Job is reprehended of impacience and mistrust/and to deeth/so that he cannot obtayne to dye/ which thynge he so greatly desyreth for.

¶ The iiij.Chapter.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanyte and sayd vnto him: Yf we beginne to cōmen with the peraduenture thou wylt be dyscontent/ but who can withholde him self from speakynge? Beholde/thou hast bene a teacher of many/and hast comforted the weery handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen / thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the thou chrenckest awaye: now that it hath touched thy self, thou arte sayntharted. Is not this thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacīēce/ and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consyder (I praye the) whoeuer perysshed beynge an innocēt? Or/ whē were the godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that plowe vanytie & sowe malicie reape the same. With the blast of God dyd they perysh/ and with the breth of his anger cōsumed they awaye. The a* roaryng of the lyon the voyce of the lyoness, and the teeth of the lyons whelpes are broke. The lyon perisheth, for lacke of praye & the lyons whelpes are scattered abrode.

And vnto me was ẏ worde hydde & myne eare hathe receaued a lytell therof. In ẏ phātasyes and thoughtes of the vysyon of the nyght, when slepe cometh on men. feare came vpō me and drede & made my bones to shake And when the wynd passed by before my presence it made the heares of my flesshe stand vp. He stode there and I knew not his face, an ymage ther was before me and ther was styllnes/so that I heard thys voyce. b* Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall man be purer than his maker? * Beholde ther is no trust to his seruaūtes/ & in his aungelles hath he founde frowardnes. How moche moare in them that dwell in houses of claye, whose foundacion is but erth: which shalbe consumed by the Moth. They shalbe smytē fro the morynge vnto the euenyng: yee they shall perysh euerlastyngly & no man thinck therō. Is not their b* dignitie take awaye wt them, they shall dye and not in wysdome.

a* By the roaryng the voyce & the teethe/ are vnderstand the blasphemyes & barbaryngers that are vsed against the innocent / as it is sayde Prouer. 30. By the sygnifycacion of the lyo he meaneth that the wycked shall perysshe how great or myghty soeuer they be.

b* Shall mā be more iust &c. Of this principle will Eliphates reason thus against Job. yf God wolde destroye an innocent it shulde followe that mā were more ryghteouse and pure than God but this is impossible for the contrarye is shewed vnto me by reuelacyon.

c* Beholde ther is no trust &c. He laboureth in confirmynge that which he had before propounded. The summe of the reason is/Aungelles are not purer than God/ergo not men.

d* Dignitye sygnifyeth here whatsoeuer they haue wherin they excell other whether it be ryches or honoure / power or cunynge &c. For none of these shall redeame them from deth.

¶ The.v.Chapter.

¶ The ende of a fole. The ryghtwesnes of God. The Lorde chastneth vs/ and delyuereth them agayne.

Q iiij

NAme me one els/yf thou cãst fynde eny:yee loke aboute the/vpon eny of the holy men. As for the folysh man, displeasure kylleth him and anger slayeth the ignorant. I haue sene my self, when the folish was depe roted/that hys hewty was sodenly destroyed / that his chyldren were without prosperite or health: that they were slayne in the dore / and no man to delyuer them: that his haruest was eaten vp of the hungrye: that the weapened man had spoyled it, and that the thurstie had droncke vp his ryches. It is not the earth yͤ bringeth forth trauayle, nether cõmeth sorow out of ye grounde: but it is mã/that is borne vnto mysery/lyke as the byrde for to fle.

B But now wyll I speake of the Lorde/and talke of God: whych doth thynges / that are vnsearcheable/and maruelles without nombre: Which geueth rayne vpõ the earth / and poureth water vpon all thynges: which setteth vp them of lowe degre / and sendeth prosperite/to those that are in heuynesse: which destroyeth the deuyces of the sotyll / so that they are not able to performe yͤ thinges that they take in hande: whych compaseth the wyse in their awne craftynesse / and ouerthroweth the councell of the wycked. In so- C moch yͤ they runne in to darcknesse by dayre / & grope about them at the none daye/ lyke as in the nyght.

a* He delyuereth the sely. This sentence propounded after the maner of a Prophecye ys mysseth all one with that of Paul. i. Cor. c. God is faythfull which shall not suffre you to be tempted aboue youre strengthe / but shall in the myddes of the temptacyon make a waye to escape out. Elphas meaneth: he hath verely wrapt the in many mi series but whe the seuenth cometh & when it shall scame to him that yͤ offence is justycyed ys punished & that thou hast left thyne impacyence (for that sayeth he to Job/thoughe vnrightly) then wyll he prosper the as so great

And so he delyuereth the poore from the swearde, from their mouth and frõ the hãde of the cruell; that yͤ poore maye haue hope/ and that the mouth of the oppressoure maye be stopped.

Beholde happye is the man/ whom God punyssheth: therfore despyse not thou yͤ chastenynge of the Almyghty. For though he make a woũd he geueth a medicine agayne: though he smyte / hys hande maketh whole agayne.

a* He delyuereth the oute of syxe troubles/ so yͤ in the seuenth there can no harme touch the. In the myddest of honger he saueth the from death: and when it is warre / from the power of the swearde.

He shall kepe the from the perilous tonge so that when trouble commeth / thou shalt not nede to feare. In destruction & derth thou shalt be merry/ & shalt not be afrayed for the beastes of the earth: But the castels in the lande shall be confederate with the / and the beastes of the felde shall geue the peace.

Yee thou shalt know, that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest: thou shalt beholde thy substaunce & be nomore punysshed for synne Thou shalt se also that thy sede shall encrease, and that thy posterite shalbe as the grasse vpon the erth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a layre age /lyke as the corne cheues are brought in to yͤ barne in due season. Lo, this is yͤ matter as we ourselues haue proued by experience. Therfore now that thou hearest it/take better hede to thy self. health/yͤ thou shalt after leade thy lyfe moost fortunately.

Job answereth/that his payne is moare grenouse. then his faute/yet not withstãdyng he deliteth therin

The .vi. Chapter.

IOb answered and sayde: O yͤ my mysery were weyed, & my punishment layed in the balaunces: for then shulde it be heuyer, then the sande of the see. This is the cause / that my wordes are so sorowfull. a* The Arrowes of the almyghtye after some mennes opinion are the sorenesse of his iudgement & his wrath: after some other/ they are yͤ crowble which the lawe mouthing the hertes of men- B while they there by are styrred to hate their selues / and so are healthfully pulled: as it is sayd Psal. xxxvi. & some agayne expounde them to be the crosse of mysery and wretchednes wherin God hath now wrapped hym. For the Scriptures (sayr they) reuocate their crosse of ignorãce of God. The same wyll that this sentence be encreasyng & amplifying of that which his aduersarye had scarcely layde

Forc* the arowes of the almyghty are in me, whose indignacion hath dronke vp my spyrite, and the terryble fearcs of God fyght agaynst me. Doth the wylde asse reare whe he hath grasse? Or cryeth the ox whiche hath fodder ynough? That which is vnsauery, shalt it be eaten with oute salte or is there any taste in yͤ whyte of an egge. The thyng that some tyme I myght not awaye withall are now my meate for very sorow. O that I myght haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunte me the thyng that I longe for: That he wolde let his hãd go, & hew me downe. Then shulde I haue some cõsolacyon: yee I wolde desyre hym in my payne, that he shulde not spare / for I wyll not be agaynst yͤ wordes of yͤ holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or, what is myne end, that my soule myght be patient? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or/ is my flesh made of brasse? Is it not so that ther is in me no helpe: b* that my substaũce is taken from me. He that is in tribulacyon ought to be cõforted of his neyghbour: c* but the feare of the Lorde is cleane awaye: My awne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke / that hastely runneth thorow the valleyes. But they that feare the hore frost, the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When their tyme cõmeth / they shalbe destroyed and perysshe: and when they be set on fyre, scarcely layde against him. Elphas in the begynnyng of the fourth Chapter had layde that the plage was came vpõ him & had touched him. With this (sayr they) meaneth he nowe. Beholde it not onely toucheth me / but woundeth me with Arrowes / and those venoumed with venoume/ haptly with the gall of dragõs with which touchyng both my blonde wareth woode/and all my spyrete is supped vp. Moreouer God hathe not onely throwe these darres vpon me but also his dreadfull feares/ that is whatsoeuer he hathe that is terrible layeth he on me.

b* That my substaunce is taken frõ me. The Chald interp. hathe. Wysdome is departed from me / and that after Hab. Sirach. the wysdome of dyscussynge iudging & tryng of thynges As though he shulde saye so soare is my greefe sythe my helpe is taken from me that I am not permytted to breathe so longe tyll I maye call to remembraunce what is most acceptable to God. Some reade Is not all the strength of myne vnderstãdyng gone from me.

c* But the feare of the Lorde &c. As thoughe he sayd. But alas/ nowa dayes, there is no feare of the Lorde lefte: and therfore it is no maruell yͤ charitie also which is ioyned to the feare of God be not in vse.

kynde, they shalbe remoued out of their place/ for ỳ pathes that they go in/are croked: they haste after vayne thynges/and shall perysh. Consydre the pathes of Theman/ & ỳ wayes of Saba/wherin they haue put their trust. Confounded are they/that put eny confidence in them: for when they cam to opteyne ỳ thynges ỳ they loked for, they were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my mysery/ye are afrayed. Wyll I desyre you/to come hyther? Or/to geue me eny of youre substaunce? To delyuer me frō the enemyes hande / or to saue me from the power of the myghtie? Teach me and I wyll holde my tonge: and yf I do erre / shewe me wherin.

Wherfore blame ye then the wordes / ỳ are well and truly spoken? which of you can reproue them? Sayyng only that ye are subtyll to check mens sayinges/and can speake many wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse/& go about to ouerthrowe youre awne frende. Wherfore loke not only vpon me/but vpon youre selues: whether I lye/ or no. Turne into youre awne selues/ I praye you/ be indifferent iudges. and cōsydre myne vnrygh-teousnesse: whether there be eny vnrygh-teousnesse in my tonge / or vayne wordes in my mouth.

¶ Job sheweth that this lyfe is but a batayle or warfare.

¶ The.vij.Chapter.

Is not the lyfe of man vpon earth a very batayll? Are not hys dayes lyke ỳ dayes of an hyred seruaūte? For lyke as a bonde seruaunt desyreth the shadowe/ & as an hyrelynge wolde fayne haue an ende of his worcke: Euen so haue I laboured whole monethes longe (but in vayne) and many a carefull nyght haue I tolde. When I layed me downe to slepe / I sayde: O whē shall I ryse? Agayne, I longed sore for the night. Thus am I full of sorowe/ tyll it be darcke. My flesshe is clothed wyth wormes/ fylthynesse and dust: my skynne is wythered/ and crompled together: my dayes passe ouer more spedely / then a weuer can weeue out his webbe: and are gone/ or I am a ware. O remembre/ that my lyfe is but a wynde/ and that myne eye shall nomore se ỳ pleasures therof / yee & that none other mānes eye shall se me eny more / yf thyne eyes vpon me / I come to naught lyke as a cloude is consumed & vanished awaye/ euen so he that goeth downe to hell / cōmeth nomore vp / ner turneth agayne into hys house/ neither shall his place knowe him eny more.

¶ Therfore I wyll not spare my mouth/ but will speake in the trouble of my spryte/ in ỳ bytternesse of my mynde will I talke. Am I a see or a whalfysh/ that thou kepest me so in preson? When I thynke: my bedd shall comforte me. I shall haue some refreshynge by talckinge by my self vpon my couche: Then troublest thou me wyth dreames / & makest me so afrayed thorow vysions/ that my soule wysheth rather to be strangled, & my bones to be deed.

I can se no remedy/ I shall lyue no more: Spare me then/ for my dayes are but vayne What is man, that thou hast hym in such reputacion/ and settest so moch by hym? Thou takest diligent care for hym / & sodenly doest thou trye him

Why goest thou not fro me/ ner lettest me alone / so longe tyll I swalow downe my spetle? I haue offended/ what shall I do vnto the/ O thou preseruer of men? Why hast thou made me to stande in thy waye/ & am so heuy a burden vnto my self? Why doest thou not forgeue me my synne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wyckednesse. Beholde/ now must I slepe in the dust: & yethou seekest me to morow in ỳ mornyng. I shalbe gone.

¶ Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserued hys payne. A descripcion of hypocrisye.

¶ The.viij.Chapter.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite/ & sayde: How longe wylt thou talke of such thynges? how longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Doth God peruerte the thyng that is iustfull? Or/ doth the Almyghtye destroye the thynge that is ryght? When thy sonnes synned agaynst him/ dyd not he punish them for their wyckednesse? If thou woldest now resorte vnto God by tymes/ and make thyne humble prayer to the Almyghtye: yf thou woldest lyue a pure and a godly lyfe: shulde he not wake vp vnto the immediatly, & geue the, the bewte of righteousnesse agayne: In so moch / that wherein soeuer thou haddest lytle afore / thou shuldest now haue greate aboundaunce. Enquere of them that haue bene before the, search dylygently amonge thy forefathers: Namely / that we are but of yester daye / and consydre not / that oure dayes vpon earth are but a very shadowe. They shall shewe the they shall tell the/ yee they wyll gladly confesse the same.

Maye a ryshe be grene wythout moysture? maye ỳ grasse growe wythout water? No: but (or euer it be shot forth / and or euer it be gathered) it withereth before eny other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all them / that forget God: and euen thus also shall the ypocrytes hope come to naught. His confydence shalbe destroyed, for he trusteth in a spyders webb webbe. He leaneth him vpō his house, but he shall not stande: he holdeth him fast by it, yet shall he not endure. Ōt tyme a thynge doth florysh, and men thynke that it maye abyde: ℣ Sonne shynynge: it shuteth forth ỹ braunches in his garden, it taketh many rotes, in so moch that it is lyke an house of stones.

But yf it be taken out of his place, euery mā denyeth it, saying: I knowe the not. Lo, thus is it vnto him, that reioyseth in his awne doynges: and as for other, they growe oute of the earth.

Beholde, God wyll not cast awaye a vertuous man, nether wyll he helpe the vngodly. Thy mouth shall be fyll with laughynge, & thy lyppes wyth gladnesse. They that hate the, shalbe confounded, and the dwellynges of the vngodly shall come to naught.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

IOb answered, & sayd: As for that, I knowe it is so of a treuth, that a man compared vnto God, can not be iustified. If he wyll argue with him, he shall not be able to answere him vn to one amonge a thousande. He is wyse of hert, and myghtie in strēgth. Who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynst hym? * He translateth the mountaynes, or euer they be aware, & ouerthroweth them in hys wrath. He remoueth the earth out of her place that her pylers shake wyth all. He commaundeth the Sonne, and it ryseth not: he closeth vp ỹ starres as it were vnder a synget. He him selfe alone spreadeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the see. He maketh the baynes of heauen, the Oxons the.vii. starres and the secrete places of the south. He doth greate thynges such as are vnsearcheable, yee and wonders without nombre.

If he cam byme, I myght not loke vpon him: yf he went his waye, I shulde not perceaue it. If he be hasty to take eny thynge awaye, who will make him restore it agayne? Who wyll saye vnto hym: what doest thou? He is God, whose wrath no man maye withstande: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder him. How shulde I then answere him? or what wordes shulde I fynde out agaynst him? Yee though I be righteous, yet wyll I not geue him one worde agayne, but mekely submytte my selfe to my iudge. All be it ỹ I call vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure, ỹ he hath herde my voyce: he troubleth me so with the tempest, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He wyll not let my spyrite be in rest, but fylleth me with bytternesse.

If men wyll speake of strength, he is the strongest of all: yf men wyll speake of ryghteousnes, who darre be my recorde. * If I will iustifye my self, my awne mouth shall condemne me: yf I wyll put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer: for that I shulde be an innocēt my conscyence knoweth it not, yee I my selfe am weary of my lyfe.

This one thyng wyll I saye: He destroyeth both the ryghteous & vngodly. And though he slaye sodenly wyth the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punyshment of the innocent. It is for the worlde, he geueth it ouer in to the power of the wycked, such as the rulers be, wherof all landes are full. If it not so, where is there eny, but he is such one?

My dayes haue bene more swyfte then a runner: they are gone sodenly, and haue sene no good thynge. They are passed awaye, as the shippes that be good vnder sayle, and as the Egle that hasteth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynges to chaunge my countenaunce, & to cōforte my selfe: then am I afrayed of all my worke, for I knowe, thou fauourest not an euell doer. If I be then a wycked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Though I washed my selfe with snowe water, & made myne handes neuer so clene, yet shuldest thou dyppe me in the myer, and myne awne clothes shulde defyle me. For he that I must geue answere vnto, and with whom I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Nether is there eny daysman to reprouve both the partes, or to laye his hande betwixte vs. Let him take his rod awaye fro me, yee let him make me no more afrayed of him, and then shall I answere him wythout eny feare. For as longe as I am in such fearfulnesse I can make no answere: And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

Here is it good to se that Job presumeth not of his awne ryghteousnes, but playnely cōfesseth him selfe a synner before god, although he before the worlde had lyued blamelesse. God saweth on the herte though men looke but onelyon ỹ outwarde appearāce. His aduersaryes thought that he shulde neuer haue had soche a crosse layde on hym, vnlesse they had also outwardly & openly layed to wyckednesse. Therfore answereth Job in dyuerse places that he therin was not culpable, & therfore accuseth as it were after the maner of men the iudgemēt of God, concernynge such as are outwardly ryghteous: & thoughe he be not vtterly ryghteous (for soche a one is no where) yet he is not so vngodly, that he deserueth so sore punnyshmēt, and that shulde cause him to shewe him blamelesse knowe, that he speaketh of hys outwarde maner of lyuynge, not of the inwarde thoughtes and desyres of the herte, wherin he was vnadoubted an offender.

a God translateth the mountaynes, not only these of ỹ erth but also the arrogācy & pryde of tyrantes & the great rewmes of the worlde, which by a borrowed speache are often tymes in the Scripture sygnyfyed by mountaynes & hylles. So trāslated he Pharao. Exodi. vii. g. & kynge Senacherib. Esai. xxxvij. g

C Iob is vniuſtly reprehended of Sophar. God is in-comprehenſyble he is mercyfull to the repentaunte.

C The xi. Chapter.

Then anſwered Sophar the Naa-mathite, and ſayd: Shulde not he Wylt thou fynde out God ẽ thy ſeking?

wilt thou attayne to the perfectneſſe of the

For it is he that knoweth the vanyte of men: he ſeyth their wyckednelle alſo / ſhulde

D Then ſhuldeſt thou forget thy myſery, and thynckeſt nomore vpon it/ then vpon the waters that runne by. Then ſhuld thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye / and ſpringe forth as the morninge. Then myghteſt thou haue coumforth, in the hope that thou haſt: & ſlepe quyetly, whẽ thou art buryed. Then ſhuldeſt

C The xii. Chapter.

So Iob anſwered, and ſayde: Then

Beholde yf he withholde ỹ waters, they drye vp: yf he let them go they destroye the earth. With hym is strength and wysdome: he knoweth bothe the deceauer & hym that is deceaued.

☞ He carpeth awaye ỹ wyse men/ as it were a spoyle/ & bringeth the iudges out of their wyttes. He lowseth the gyrdle of kynges/ & gyrdeth their loynes with a bonde. He ledeth D awaye the Preastes in to captyuyte/ & turneth the myghtye vpsyde downe. He taketh the verite frō out of the mouth & disapoynteth the aged of their wysdome. He powreth out confusyon vpon Princes/ & comforteth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke what lyeth hyd in darcknesse/ he declareth it opēly: and the very shadowe of death bringeth he to lyght. He bothe increaseth the people/ & destroyeth them: He maketh thē to multiplye/ & driueth thē awaye. He chaūgeth the hertes of the Princes & kynges of the earth/ & disapoynteth thē: so that they go wandringe out of the waye/ & grope in the darcke without lyght/ stackering to & fro lyke dronckē men.

LO, all this haue I sene with myne eye, heard with myne eare/ & vnderstand it. Loke what ye knowe/ that same do I knowe also, nether am I inferior vnto you. Neuertheles I am purposed to talke with the almyghtie/ & my desyre is to comen with God. As for you/ ye are worckmasters of lyes/ & vnprofytable Phisicias all to gether. I wolde God ye kepte youre tonge/ that ye myght be take for wyse men. Therfore heare my wordes/ & ponder the sentence of my lyppes. Will ye make answere for God wyth lyes, and mayntayne hym with disceate? Will ye accepte the person of God, & intreate for hym? Shall it, at helpe you, when he calleth you to rekoning. Thynke ye to begyle him as a man is begyled? He shall punysh you, & reproue you yf ye do secretly accepte any personne. Shall he not make you afrayed, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not hys terrible feare fall vpon you? youre remembraūce & albe lyke vnto the dust, & youre pryde shalbe turned to clay. Holde youre tonges now, and let me speake, for there is some thinge come into my mynde. *Wherfore do I beare my flesh in my teth & myne soule in myne hādes? Lo there is nether comforte nor hope for me yf he will slaye me. But yf I shewe & reproue myne awne wayes in his sight, he is cuē the same, that maketh me whole: & why? there maye no hypocrite come before hym. Heare my wordes & ponder my sayinges vp youre eares. *Beholde now haue I prepared my iudgement, & knowe that I shalbe founde ryghtwes. What is he, that will go to lawe with me? Thou preuaylest agaynst him/ so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his estate/ & puttest him frō the. Whether his chyldrē come to worshippe or no/he can not tell: And yet they be nē of lowe degre/he knoweth not. While he lyueth, his flesh must haue trauayle: & whyle the soule is in him/he must be in sorowe.

Eliphas reprehēdeth Job because he ascribeth wysdome & pureues to him selfe. He describeth the curse fallyth on the wycked/rekenyng Job to be one of that nombre.

The.xb. Chapter.

Then answered Eliphas ỹ Themanite & sayde: *Shulde a wyse mā answer as the seyence of ỹ winde/ & fyll his bely wyth the wynde of the east? Thou reprouest with wordes, that are nothinge worth: & speakest the thinges/ which can do no good. As for shame / thou hast set it aside els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth & so thou hast chosen the a craftie tonge. Where vnto loke thyne eyes, that thy minde is so puft vp agaynst God & letteth such wordes go out of thy mouth? What is man/ that he shulde be cleane? what hath he (which is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be knowne to be ryghteous? Beholde there is no trust to hys sayncters: yee ỹ very

The vngodly despayreth all the dayes of his lyfe, & the nōbre of a tyrauntes yeres is vnknowne. A fearfull sounde is euer in hys eares/ & when it is peace / yet feareth he destruccīō: He beleueth neuer to be delyuered out of darcknesse, the sweorde is alwaye before his eyes. Whē he goeth forth to get hys lyuing he thinketh plainly, that ỹ daye of darcknesse is at hande. Sorow and carefulnesse make him afrayed, & cōpasse him roūde about, lyke as it were a kynge w̄ his hoost redy to ỹ battayll. For he hath stretched out his hande agaynst God / & armed hym selfe agaynst the Almyghtie. He runneth proudly vpon him and with a styffnecke fyghteth he agaynst him: where as he coūereth hys face with fatnesse/and maketh his body wyll lykynge. Therfore shall his dwelling be in desolate cyties/and in houses which noman inhabiteth/but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be rych/neyther shall his substaunce continue/ner encrease vpon earth. He shall neuer come out of darcknesse / the flame shall drye vp his braunches/ with the blast of the mouth of God shall he be taken awaye. He wyll nether applye hym selfe to faythfulnes ner treuth/ so sore is he disceaued with vanite.

He shall perysh/afore his tyme be worne out/ & his hande shall not be grene. He shall be pluckte of as an vntymely grape frō the vyne, & shall let his floure fall / as the olyue doth ¶ Job repetynge his mysery te sayth that he suffreth more then his wyckednesse hath deserued.

IOb answered, and sayde: I haue oft tymes herde soch thyngs. Mi-serable geuers of cōfort are ye/ all the sorte of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet eny more to saye? I coude speake/ as ye do also. But wolde God/ that youre soule were in my soules stede: then shulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you/ and shake my heade at you. I shulde cōforte you with my mouth and release youre payne with the talkyng of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes nip sorow wyll not ceasse: and though I holde my tonge, yet will it not departe from me. And now that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed where of my wyrnckes beare wytnesse: there standeth vp a dyssembler to make me answere with lyes to my face. He is angry at me, he ba-teth me & gnasheth vpon me with his teth. Myne enemy slaueth vpō me with hys eyes.

They haue * opened their mouthes wyde vpon me and smytten me vpon the cheke de-spytefully, they haue eased thē selues thorow myne aduersite. God hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly, & delyuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was somtyme in wealth/ but sodenly he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the neck he hath rente me, & set me as it were a marck for hym to shute at. He hath cōpased me rounde aboute with his dartes he hath wounded my loynes/ and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpō the groūd. He hath geuē me one woūde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a giaunte. I haue sowed a sack cloth vpon my skynne & lye with my strength in the dust.

My face is swollē with wepyng & myne eyes are waren dymme. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes/ and my prayer is cleane.  O earth couer not my blood, & let my crynge fynde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauē, & he that knoweth me/ is aboue in ẏ heygth. My frendes laugh me to scorne/ but myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. Though a body myght pleate with God as one man doth with another yet the nombre of my yeares are come/ and I must go the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

¶ The.xvij.Chapter.

MY breth fayleth, my dayes are shor-tened. I am harde at deathes dore. I haue disceaued no mā, yet must myne eye cōtinue in heynesse. O deliuer me, and set me by the: who shall then be able to thrust my handes togethers Thou hast withholden their hertes frō vnderstan-dynge, therfore shall they not be set vp on hye. He promyseth hys frendes parte of hys good, but his awne chyldrē spōge it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the comon people. I am hys gestynge stocke amonge thē. My countenaunce is heuy for very an-ger, & the membres of my body are become lyke a shadow. Vertuous men therfore shall well consyder this, & the innocent shall take C parte agaynst the ypocrite.

The ryghteous wyll kepe his waye/ & he that hath cleane hādes, wyll euer be strōger & stronger. As for you, turne you, & get you hence/ for I can not se one wyse mā amōge you. My dayes are past/ my thoughtes are banysched awaye/ wherch haue vexed myne herte chaungynge the nyght in to daye/ and ẏ light into darckenes. Though I tary neuer so moch yet ẏ graue is my house, and I must make my bed in the darcke. I call corrupciō my father & the wormes call I my mother & my syster. What helpeth then my longe ta-ryenge? Or who wyll fulfyll ẏ thynge that I loke for? All that I haue, shall go downe in to the pytt, and lye with me in the dust.

¶ The.xviij.Chapter.

THen answered Baldad ẏ Suhite/ and sayde: when wyll* ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marcke well, & consyder/ we wyll speake also. Wherfore are we counted as beastes/ and reputed so vyle in youre syght: Why de-stroyest thou thy selfe with anger? Shall ẏ earth be forsaken/ or the stones remoued oute of their place because of the? Shall not the lyght of the vngodly be put oute? yee ẏ flame of his fyre shall not burne. The lyght shalbe darcke in his dwellynge & hys candle shalbe put out with him. His presump-tuous goinges shall be kepte in, & his awne councell shall cast him downe. For his fete shalbe taken in the nett/ and he shall walke in ẏ snare. His fote shalbe holdē in ẏ gilder/ and the thurste shall catch him. The snare is layed for him in the grounde, and a pitfall in the waye.

Fearfulnesse shall make him afrayed on euery syde that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Honger shalbe his substaunce & myssortune shall hange vpon hym. The frall

Hys rotes shalbe dryed vp benethe and above shall his harueste be cutt downe. Hys remembraunce shall perish from the earth / & his name shall not be prayed in the stretes: he shalbe dryuen from the lyght into darcknesse / and be cast cleane out of the worlde. He shall nether haue children nor kynnefolckes amonge his people / no / nor eny posterite in his countre: young & olde shalbe astonished at his death. Soch are now the dwellynges of the wycked / and this the place of him that knoweth not God.

¶ The .xix. Chapter.

Iob answered / & sayde: how longe will ye vexe my mynde / & trouble me with wordes? Lo / ten tymes haue ye reproued me: are ye not ashamed for to laugh me so to scorne? yf I go wrōge / I go wrōge to my selfe. But yf ye will enhaunce your selues agaynst me / & accuse me to be a wicked personne because of ꝑ shame ꝑ is come vpō me: knowe this then / ꝑ it is God / which hath hādled me so violētly & hath compased me aboute with his scourges. Beholde / though I crye / yet violence is done vnto me / I can not be herde: Though I cōplane / there is none to geue sentence vnto me. He hath hedged vp my path / I can not get awaye he hath set darcknesse in my gate. He hath spoyled me of myne honoure and take the a* crowne awaye fro my head. He hath destroyed me on euery syde / and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken awaye fro me as it were a tre pluckt vp by ꝑ rote. His wrath is kindled agaynst me, he taketh me / as though I were his enemy.

His men of warre came together / which made their waye ouer me / and besieged my dwellynge rounde aboute. He hath put my brethren farre awaye fro me, & soch as were of myne acquauntance / are become straūgers vnto me. Myne awne kynsfolkes haue forsakē me / & my frēdes haue put me out of remēbraunce. The seruauntes & maydēs of myne awne house take me for a straūger / & I am be come as an alcaunt in their syght. When I call vpon my seruaūt he geueth me no answere: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne awne wyfe maye not abyde my breth / I am layne to speake fayre vnto the chyldren of myne awne body. Yee ꝑ very desert fooles despyse me / & whē I am gone from them, they speake cruell vpon me. All soch as were my most familiers, abhorre me: & they whom I loued best, are turned against me. My bone hageth to my skynne / & my flesh is awaye only there is left me the skynne aboute my teth. Haue pyte vpō me / haue pyte vpō me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the Lorde hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me b* as God, and c* are not satisfyed of my flesshe?

a* Rabi Abraham vnderdandeth by the crowne the dignitye that commeth to the ryche by the meanes of their ryches: for all men haue the ryche in honour: although come vnderstande therby his chyldren: as in the proues. The crowne of olde men are their chyldren. Other some other interpret the dignitie that came vnto him of his wysdom & cunnynge. So Iobs meanynge is / that of a worshypfull ryche man he is become poore & despysed.

b* The hebrues reade as thy do / meanynge the cruell which are not satisfyed with his flesshe-for he wolde be not that his frendes shulde conuerte.

c* Are not satisfyed of my flesshe. To eate & be satisfied of a mannes flesshe is a borrowed speache take both in the good and euell parte. In the good parte it sygnifyeth to loue / to iudge frendly & thynke the leuyth to fall to prayenge. In the euell parte it is cruelly and beastly to inuade & (as it were) to trare with spytefull and baynouse wordes.

O that my wordes were written, O that they were put in a boke: wolde God they were grauē with yron penne in leade or in stone. For I am sure, ꝑ my redemer lyueth, & that I shall ryse out of ꝑ earth in ꝑ latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne with thys skynne & se God in my flesh. Yee I my selfe shall beholde him / not with other but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me / when ye saye: why do not we persecute him: we haue founde an occasion agaynst him. But bewarre of the swearde / for the swearde wylbe auenged of wyckednesse: and be sure, that there is a iudgment.

¶ The .xx. Chapter.

Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes cōpell me to answere. And why: my mynde is tossed here and there. I haue sufficyently herde thy checking and reproue, therfore am I purposed to make answere after myne vnderstandyng. Knowest thou not this, namely: that from the begynnynge euer sence the creacion of man vpon earth) the prayse of ꝑ vngodly hath bene shorte / and that the ioye of ypocrites continued but the twynckelyng of an eye: Though he be magnifyed vpto ꝑ heauen / so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perisheth at ꝑ last lyke dōge: In somoch that they which haue sene hym / saye: Where is he? He vanysheth as a dreame / so that he can no more be founde / & passeth awaye as a vysyon in the nyght. So ꝑ the eye which sawe him before getteth now no syght of him, and his place knoweth him nomore. His chyldren go a beggynge / their handes bringe them to sorow & heuynesse.

Frō his youth his bones are full of vyce / which shall lye downe wyth hym in ꝑ earth. When wyckednesse is swete in his mouth / he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth / that wyll he not forsake / but kepeth it close in his throte. The meate ꝑ he eateth / shalbe turned to the poyson of serpentes / within within his body. The ryches that he deuoureth / shall he perbreake agayne / for God shall drawe thē out of his bely. *he shall sucke ꝑ serpēts hed & ꝑ adders tonge shall slaye him: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers & brokes of hony & butter: But laboure shall he / & yet haue nothinge to eate. Greate traffyque shall he make for ryches / but he shall not enioye thē. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not holped them. houses hath he spoyled and not buylded them. Hys bely coude neuer be filled therfore shall he perish in his couetousnesse. He deuoured so greedely, that he left nothyng behynde therfore his goodes shall not prospere. Though he had plenteousnesse of euery thynge / yet was he poore / and therfore he is but a wretch on euery syde.

a. He shall sucke the serpētes hed that is he shalbe subiect to all cursednesse & suffer all maner sorowe. It is so the sinner of speache as is before in the .xv. b. of dyspuchyng wyckednesse.

For though ꝑ wicked haue neuer so moch to fill his bely, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause hys battayll to rayne ouer him: so ꝑ yf he fle the yron weapens, he shall be shott with ꝑ stele bowe. The arowe shall be takē forth, and go out at his backe / and a glysterynge swearde thorow the gall of him, feare shall come vpō him. *b There shall no darckines be able to hyde hī. And vnkyndled fyre shall consume him / and loke what remayneth in hys house / it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse / & the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The substaunce that he hath in his house / shalbe taken awaye and perysh / in the daye of the Lordes wrath. This is the porcyon that the wicked shall haue of God / and the heretage that he maye loke for of the Lorde.

b. That is he cānot byde him for perelles.

¶ The.xxi. Chapter.

IOb answered / and sayd: O heare my wordes / & amende your selues. Suffre me a lytle / that I maye speake also / and then laugh my wordes to scorne / yf ye wyll. Is it with a mā / that I make this disputacyon? Which yf it were so / shulde not my spyrete be then in sore trouble? Marck me well, be abasshed / and laye youre hande vpon youre mouth. For whē I ponder & cōsyder this / I am afrayed / and my flesh is smytten with feare. Wherfore do wicked men lyue in healthe and prosperite / come to their olde age / and increase in ryches? Their chylders chyldren lyue in their sight / & their generacyon before their eyes. Their houses are safe frō all feare / for the rodd of God doth not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth / & that not oute of tyme: their cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

They sende forth their chyldrē by flockes / and their sonnes lede ꝑ daunce. They beare with them tabrettes and harpes / and haue instrumentes of musyck at their pleasure. They spende their dayes in welthynesse: but sodēly they go downe to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs / we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. What maner of felowe is the Almyghtie / that we shulde serue him? What profyt shulde we haue / to submytte oure selues vnto hym? Lo / there is vtterly no goodnesse in thē / therfore will not I haue to do with the councell of ꝑ vngodly. How oft shall the cāde of the wicked be put out? how oft cōmeth their destruccion vpon thē? O what sorowe shall God geue thē for their parte in his wrath? Yee they shall be euē as chaff before the wynde / and as dust that the storme careth awaye.

And though God saue their chyldrē from soch sorowe / yet wyll he so rewarde thē selues, that they shall know it. Their awne destruccion and mysery shall they se with their eyes / & drincke of the fearfull wrath of the Almighty. For what careth he / what be come of his housholde after hys death? whose monethes passe awaye swyfter then an arowe. In as moch thē as God hath the hyest power of all / who can teach him eny knowlege? One dyeth now when he is mightye & at his best / rich / & in prosperite: euē whē hys *bowels are at ꝑ fattest, & his bones full of mary. An other dyeth in sorowe & heuynesse / and neuer had good dayes. Now lye they both a lyke in the earth / & the wormes couer them. But I knowe what ye thynke / yee & what ye ymagin agaynst me vnrighteously For ye saye: where is the Princes palace? where is the dwellynge of the vngodly: Like eny mā that goeth by the waye / & (yf ye will not regarde their tokens & dedes) he shall tell you / that the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruccyon / and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth in the daye of wrath. Who darre reproue him for his wayes to his face? who rewardeth him for the vngraciousnesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to hys graue / and watch amonge the heape of the dead. Then shall he be layne to be buryed amonge the stones by the broke syde. All men must folowe hym / & there are innumerable gone before hym. O how vayne is the comforte ꝑ ye geue me! Are not youre answeres cleane contrary to ryght and treuth?

¶ The xxij. Chapter.

ELiphas the Themanite gaue answere & sayde: Maye a man be compared vnto God in wysdome / though he seme to him self / for to be lyke him? What pleasure hath God in ꝑ thou art righteous? Or what doth it profite him/ þ thy wayes are perfect? Is he afrayed to reproue the/ & to steppe forth wt the in to iudgment? Cōmeth not this for þ great wickednesse/ & for thyne vngracious dedes which are innumerable? Thou hast take þ pledge from thy brethrē for nought/ & robbed þ naked of their clothing: To such as were weery, hast thou geuē no water to drincke, thou

B hast withdrawē bred frō þ hūgrye: Shulde such one then as vseth violēce/ wronge & oppression (doinge all thinge of partialite/ and hauinge respecte of personnes) dwell in the lande? Thou hast sent wyddowes awaye emptie & oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore art thou cōpased aboute wyth snares on euery syde/ & sodēly vexed wt feare Shuldest thou thē se no darcknesse? Shulde not þ water floude runne ouer the? Now because þ God is hyer then the heauēs/ & because thou seyst þ the starres are so hye/ wilt thou therfore saye: Tush/ how shulde God knowe? Doth his dompnion reach beyonde the cloudes? Tush/ the cloudes couer hym þ he maye not se/ for he dwelleth in heauen.
C Well, thou wilt kepe þ olde waye/ that all wicked men haue gone: both olde & yonge/ whose foundaciō is a rūninge water/ which saye vnto God: go frō vs/ & after this maner: Tush/ what will the Almightie do vnto vs? where as he (not withstandyng) fylleth their houses wt al good. Which meanynge of the vngodly be farre fro me. For with ioye shall the godly/ and with gladnesse shall the innocent se/ that their increase shall be hewen downe/ and their posterye consumed with fyre.

Therfore recōcile the vnto God/ & be content/ so shall all thinges prospere wt þ rightwell. Receaue the lawe at his mouth/ & laye vp his wordes in thyne herte. For yf thou wilt
D turne to þ Almightie, thou shalt stande fast/ & all vnrighteousnesse shall be farre frō thy dwellynge: He shall geue the an haruest/ which in plenty & aboundaūce shall exceade the dust of the earth/ and the golde of Ophir lyke ryuer stones. Yee the Almightye hys awne selfe shalbe thine haruest/ & the heape of thy money. Then shalt thou haue thy delyte in the Almightie/ & lyft vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him/ & he shall heare the/ & thou shalt kepe thy promyses. Then/ loke what thou takest in hand, he shall make it to prospere wt the, and the lyght shall shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth hym selfe/ hym shall he set vp: and who so loketh meekely/ shalbe healed. Yf thou be innocēt, he shall saue the: and thorow the vnclenesse of thyne hādes shalt thou be delyuered.

Job affirmeth that he bothe knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge & sayth that he hath walked in his ryghtwesnesse.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

Iob answered/ & sayd: My saying is yet this daye in bitternes/ & my hāde heuy amonge my gronynges.
O that I myght fynde him and fynde him: O that I myght come before his seate/ to pleate my cause before him/ & to fyll my mouth wt argumētes: That I might know/ what answere he wolde geue me: & that I might vnderstande/ what he wolde saye vnto me. Will he pleate agaynst me with hys greate power & strēgth or will he leane him
B selfe vtterly vpon me? Oh no/ let him not do so wt me. But lett hym geue me lyke power to go to þ lawe/ then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before/ I fynde him not: If I come behynde/ I can get no knowledge of him: Yf I go on the left syde to pōdre his workes/ I can not attayne vnto them Agayne/ yf I go on the right syde/ he hydeth him selfe/ that I can not se him. But as for my waye, he knoweth it: & tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

Neuertheles my fete kepe his path/ hys hye strete haue I holden/ and not gone oute of it. I haue not forsaken the cōmaundemēt that is not their awne: & gather the grapes out of his vinyarde / whō they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare / hauynge no clothes to couer them and kepe them from colde: So that when the showers in ỳ moūtaynes haue rayned vpon them / & they be all wett / they haue none other succoure / but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckinge fatherlesse chīdrē / and put the poore in prison: In somoch that they let thē go naked without clothing / and yet the hungrie beare the sheeues. The poore are fayne to labourre in their oyle milles / yee and to treade in their wyne presses / & yet to suffre thyrst. The whole cytie cryeth vnto the Lorde with syghyng / the soules of ỳ slayne make their complaynte: But God destroyeth them not for all this / where as they (notwithstandynge) are rebellious and disobediēt enemyes / which seke not his light and waye / ner turne agayne in to hys path. Tymely in the morynge do they aryse / to murthur the symple and poore / & in ỳ nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the adulterer / ỳ wayteth for the darcknesse / & sayeth thus in hym selfe: Tush / there shall no man se me / & so he disgyseth his face. In ỳ nyght season they search the houses / and hyde thē selues in the daye tyme / but will not knowe ỳ light. For as soone as the daye breaketh / the shadowe of death cōmeth vpon thē / and they go in horrible darcknesse. The vngodly is very swyft: O ỳ his portiō also vpō erth were swyfter then ỳ runnyng water / which suffreth not ỳ shypmā to beholde the fayre & pleasaūt vyneyardes. O ỳ they (for ỳ wickednesse which they haue done) were drawen to ỳ hell / soner thē snowe melteth at the heate. O that all cōpassion vpō thē were forgottē: that their dayntyes were wormes, that they were cleane put out of remēbraūce / & vtterly hewē downe lyke an vnfrutefull tre. For they manteyne the barē / & make thē ỳ they can not beare / & vnto wyddowes they do no good. They plucke downe ỳ mightie w their power / & when they them selues are gotten vp / they are neuer without feare / as lōge as they lyue. And though they myght be safe / yet they wyll not receaue it / for their eyes loke vpō their awne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle / but shortly are they gone / brought to extreme powerte / & take out of the waye: yee & vtterly plucte of / as ỳ eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyll thē reproue me as a lyar / & saye that my wordes are nothynge worth?

THere are places where syluer is molten/ & where golde is tryed: where yron is dygged oute of the grounde/ & stones reioiced to metall. The darckenes shall once come to an ende/ he can seke out ỹ groũde of all thinges: the stones/ the darcke/ & ỹ horrible shadow. With the ryuer of water parteth he a sunder the straunge people/ ỹ knoweth no good neyghbourheade: soch as are rude/ vnmanerly & boyesterous. He bringeth foode out of ỹ erth/ & that which is vnder/ consumeth he w fyre. There is founde a place/ whose stones B are cleane Saphirs, & where ỹ clottes of ỹ earth are golde. There is a waye also ỹ the byrdes knowe not/ that no vulturs eye hath sene: wherin ỹ proude & hye mynded walke not/ & where no lyon cõmeth. The .xxx. Chapter.

But now they that are myne inferiours and younger then I haue me in derysyon: yee euen they, whose fathers I wold haue thought scorne to haue set with the dogges of my catell. The power & strēgth of their handes might do me no good and as for their age, it is spēt and past awaye without any profyt. For very misery and honger, they wente aboute in the wyldernesse lyke wretches and beggers/ pluckyng vp herbes from amonge the bushes/& the Junipers rote was their meate. And when they were dryuen forth/men cried after them / as it had bene after a theefe.

Their dwellynge was beside foule broukes/ & yee in the caues & dennes of the earth. Vpon the brye heeth wente they aboute cryinge/ & in the brome hylles they gathered thē to gether. They were the chyldren of fooles & vylaynes/wyche are dead awaye frō the worlde. Now am I their songe / & am become their iesting stocke: they abhorre me/they flē farre fro me/ & stayne my face with spetle. For the Lorde hath opened his quyuer/he hath hyte me/& put a bridle in my mouth. Vpon my right hande they rose to gether agaynst me/ they haue hurte my fete/made a waye to destroye me/& my path haue they clene marred. It was so easy for them to do me harme/ that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vpō me / as it had bene the breakyng in of waters / & came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me.

Myne honoure vanysheth awaye more swyftly then wynde/& my prosperite departeth hēce lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my mynde poured full of heuynesse/ & the dayes of trouble haue takē holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorow in the nyght season/& my synewes take no rest. ¶With all their power haue they chaūged my garmēt/ & gyrded me therwith/as it were wt a coate. I am euē as it were claye/& am become like asshes and dust. ¶When I crye vnto the/ thou doest not heare me: & though I stande before the/yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemye/ & wt thy vyolent hande thou takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou dydest set me vp on hye/as it were aboue the wynde/but now hast thou geuē me a very sore fall. Sure I am/ ỳ thou wylt delyuer me vnto death: where as a lodgynge is prepared for all men lyuynge. Now vse not mē to do vyolēce vnto thē/ that are destroyed all ready: but where hurte is done/ there vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? Had not my soule compassyon vpō the poore? Yet neuertheles where as I loked for good/euell happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for lyght / there came darcknesse. My bowels sreth within me/& take no rest / for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mekely & lowly came I in/ yee & without any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacyon, and cōmuned with them. But now I am a companyon of dragons/& a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to blacke/and my bones are brent with heate: my harpe is turned to sorow/& my pype to weppynge.

a* To make a couenaunt with his eyes/is/ to mortifye the cōcupiscence of the hert that commeth by the mares of the eye: which is to pulle out the eyes is sayde Mat.v.e.

I a* Made a couenaunt with myne eyes/ that I wolde not loke vpon a damsell. For how greate a porcīō shal I haue of God frō aboue: & what enheritaunce frō the almyghtye on hye? Is for the vngodly & he that towcheth him selfe to the cōpany of wycked doers shall not destruccion & mysery com vpon hym? Doth not he se my wayes, & tell all my goynges. If I haue cleaued vnto ought or yt my fete haue runne to dyscease: let me be weyed in an euen balaunce/ that God may se my innocency. If so be that I haue withdrawne my sote out of ꝑ ryght waye/ yf myn hert hath folowed myne eye syght/ yf I haue stayned or defiled my hādes: O then is it reason that I sowe/ and another eate/ yee that my generacion and posterite be cleane roted out. If myn hert hath lusted after my neighbours wyfe/ or yf I haue layde wayte at his doze. O then let my wife be another mans harlot and let other lye with her. For this is a wickednesse & synne/ that is worthy to be punB nyshed/ yee a fyre that vtterly shulde consume/ & rote out all my substāce. When the pooze despyseth any thynge at me/ haue I denyed it them? Haue I caused the wyddowe stande waytinge for me in vayne? Haue I eaten my porcyō alone/ that the fatherlesse hath had no parte w me? for mercy grewe vp with me fro my youth/ & cōpassion fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any man perish thorow nakednesse & wāt of clothinge? Or any pooze man for lack of rayment whose sides thanched me not because he was warmed with the wolle of my shepe? Dyd I euer lyfte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yee in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in auctorite: then let myne arme fall fro my shulder/ & myne arme bones be broken frō the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeaūce & punishemēt of God/ & knew very well/ ꝑ I was not able to beare his burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Haue I euer done any wicked dede where thorow I shamed my selfe before men: or any abhominacyō/ that I was fayne to hyde it? For yf I had feared any greate multytude of people: or yf I had bene dyspysed of the kynrede. O then shulde I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quyetly spent my lyfe, & not gone out at the doze. O that I had one whych wolde here me. Lo, this is my cause. Let the almyghty geue me answere: & let hym that is my contrary party sue me with a lybell. Then shall I take it vpon my shulder, & as a garlande about my head. I haue told the nōber of my goynges, & delyuered them vnto hym as to a Prynce But yf case be that myne owne lande cry out agaynst me, or that the forowes therof make any cōplaynte: yf I haue eatē the fruites therof vnpayed for, yee yf I haue greued any of ꝑ plowmen: then let thystles growe in stede of my wheate/ & thornes for my barlye.

¶ Elyu after the other had fynyshed their communycacyon reproueth them of sondrynes. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the spirite of God.

¶ The .xxxii. Chapter.

So these thre men wolde speake no more with Iob, because he helde hym selfe a ryghteous man. But Elyu the sonne of Barachell the Busite of the kinred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Iob, that he called him selfe iust before God. And with Iobs thre frendes he was angry also because they had founde no reasonable answere to ouercome hym. Now tarried Elyu tyll they had ended their cōmunicacyon with Iob/ for why they were elder then he. So when Elyu the sonne of Barachel the Busite sawe/ ꝑ these thre men were not able to make Iob answere/ he was displeased: so that he gaue answere him selfe/ & sayde: Consydring/ that I am yonge/ & ye be men of age/ I was afrayed/ & durst not shewe forth my mynde/ for I thought thus within my selfe: It becommeth olde men to speake/ & the aged to teache wysdome. Euery mā (no doute) hath a mynde/ but it is the inspiracyō of the Almighty that geueth vnderstanding. All mē are not wyse/ neyther doth euery aged man vnderstande the thinge that is to doubt.

Therfore wyll I speake also(in so farre as I maye be harde)& wyll shewe you myne oppynyon. For when I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge/and hearde youre wysdome/what argumētes ye made in your communycacyon: yee when I had dylygētly pondred what ye sayde I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynst Job / or that directly coude make answere vnto his wordes: lest ye shulde prayse youre selues/to haue foūde out wysdome: because it is God that hath cast hym out / & no man.
D Neuertheles/seynge he hath not spokē vnto me/therfore wyll not I answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed/that they coude not make answere / nor speake one worde) but in so moche as ye wyll not speake / standynge styll lyke dom men / and makynge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shappe him an answere/and to shewe him my meanyng. For I am full of wordes/& the spyrete that is within me/ compelleth me.

Beholde/I am as the newe wyne / which hath no vente / and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therfore wyll I speake that I may haue a vente: I will opē my lyppes/& make answere. I will regarde no maner of personne/no mā will I spare. For yf I wold go aboute to please men/I knowe not how sone my maker wolde take me awaye.

¶ Eliu sheweth wherin Job offendeth. With God may we not strue/nor curiously searche out his workes.

¶ The.xxxiij.Chapter.

Herfore heare my wordes(O Job) & herken vnto me all/that I wyll saye: Beholde / I wyll open my mouth/and my tonge shall speake out of my chawes. My hert shall ordre my wordes aryght/ & my lyppes shall talke of pure wisdome. The spyrite of God hath made me/& the brethe of the almyghtye hath geuen me my lyfe. If thou canst/ then geue me answere: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde/before God am I euen as thou/for I am fashyoned and made euen of the same moulde. Therfore / thou nedest not be afrayed of me / nether nedest thou to feare / that my auctoryte shalbe to heuy for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne eares/& I haue herde the voyce of thy wordes: I am clene without any faute / I am innocent, & there is no wickednes in me. But lo/he hath pyked a quarell agaynst me, taketh me for his enemy: he hath put my fote in ꝑ stockes/ & loketh narowly vnto all my pathes. Beholde / vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyn wyll I make answere.

Shulde God be reproued of man? Why doest thou then stryue agaynst him/because he geueth the no accōptes of all his doinges? For when God doth once cōmaunde a thing there shulde no man be curyous / to searche whether it be ryght. In dreames & bysyōs of the nyght season (when slombrynge cōmeth vpō men/& they fall a slepe in their beddes) he rowndeth thē in the eares, he informeth them/and sheweth them playnely / that it is he/which withdraweth man from euyll/ delyuereth hym from pryde/ kepeth hys soule from destrucciō/& his lyfe from the swearde. He chasteneth hym with sychnesse/and bryngeth hym to his bed: he layeth sore punyshement vpon hys bones/so that hys lyfe maye awaye with no bred / & his soule abhorreth to eate any dayntye meate: In so moche that his body is cleane consumed awaye/and his bones appeare no more. Hys soule draweth on to destrucpon/& hys lyfe to death. Now yf there be a* messenger, one amōge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe hym the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto hym / & sayeth: Be shalbe delyuered/that he fall not downe to destrucpon/for I am sufficyently recōcyled. Than hys flesh (which hath bene in mysery & trouble) shalbe as it was in hys youth. For yf he submytte hym selfe vnto God / he is gracyous/and sheweth hym hys countenaūce ioyfully/and rewardeth man for his rightuousnes. Soche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended/ but he hath chastened and reformed me. I dyd vnryghtuously / neuertheles he hath not recompensed me therafter. Yee he hath delyuered my soule from destrucpon/ and my lyfe/that it seeth the lyght. Lo/thus worcketh God allwaye with man / that he kepeth hys soule from peryshynge/ and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuynge. Marcke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll/vntyll I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thynge to saye / then answere me/ and speake/for thy answere pleaseth me. If thou hast nothinge/then heare me/and hold thy tonge/so shall I teache the wysdome.

* That is an interpretour of the worde of God.

Eliu proceading forth in his communycacyon / sayde: Heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me/ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouth tasteth ꝑ meates / so the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs seche it out amõge oure selues, that we may knowe what is ryght. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghtuous/but God doth me wronge. I must neades be a lyer, though my cause be right/and violently I am plaged where as I made no sawte: where is there soche one as Job, ẏ drynketh vp scornefulnes like water? which goeth in the cõpany of wycked doers/ & walketh with vngodly men? For he sayeth: Though a man be good, yet is he naught before God. Therfore herken vnto me/ ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God/that he shuld medle with wickednesse: and farre be it from the almightye/ ẏ he shulde medle with vnrighteous dealynge: but he rewardeth the workes of man and causeth euery man to finde accordinge to his wayes. For sure it is/ /that God condemneth no man wrongoully/ and the iudgement of the Almyghtye is not vnrighteous. Who ruleth ẏ earth in his steade? Or/whom hath he sett to gouerne the whole worlde? To whom hath he geuen hys herte/ for to drawe his spirite and breth vnto hym? All flesh shall come to gether vnto naught/ & all men shall turne agayne vnto earth. If thou now haue vnderstandynge heare what I saye/ & herken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole / that loueth no ryght? If thou were a very innocent man/ shuldest thou then be punyshed? For he is euen the same/ that knoweth the rebellions kynges/ & sayeth to Princes: Vngodly men are ye. He hath none respecte vnto the per-

C sonnes of the lordly/ & regardeth not the ryche more then poore. For they be all the worcke of his handes. In the twynckinge of an eye shall they be slayne: & at mydnight/ when the people & the tyrauntes rage/ then shall they perysh/ & be taken awaye without handes. And why? hys eyes loke vpon the wayes of man/ and he seyth all his goynges. There is no darckines nor thycke shadowe / that can hyde the wycked doers frõ hym. For no man shalbe suffred to go into iudgemẽt with God.

Many one/ yee innumerable doth he punyshe/ and setteth other in their steades. For he knoweth their euell & darcke worckes/ therfore shall they be destroyed. They that were in the steade of Sears/ dealt lyke vngodly men. Therfore turned they back trayterously & vnfaythfully from hym / & wolde not receaue his wayes. In so moch that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym/ & now he heareth the complaynte of soche as are in necessite. If he deliuer and graũte pardõ, who will iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde awaye his coũtenaũce/ who wyll turne it aboute agayne/ whether it be nesse and synne of the people/ he maketh an ypocryte to reygne ouer them. For so moch then as I haue begonne to talke of God/ I wyll not hynder the. If I haue gone a mysse/ enfourme me: yf I haue done wronge/ I will leaue of. Wylt thou not geue a reasonable answere? Art thou afrayed of any thynge/ seinge thou begannest fyrst to speake, & not I? For els the men of vnderstandynge & wysdome, that haue herde me, might saye: What canst thou speake? As for Job he hath nether spoken to the purpose nor wisely. O father/ let Job be well tryed / because he hath turned hym selfe to the wycked: yee aboue hys synnes he hath blasphemed / which offence he hath done euen before vs/ in that he stryueth agaynst God with his wordes.

D to the people or to any mã? For the wycked-

¶ The .xxxv. Chapter.

Eliu spake more ouer / and sayde:

A Thynkest thou it ryght that thou sayest: I am ryghtuous before God? Seinge thou sayest so, how doest thou knowe it? What thinge hast thou more excellẽt then I. ẏ am a synner? Therfore wyll I. geue answere vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen / & beholde it: consyder the cloudes how they are hyer then thou. If thou synnest, what doest thou vnto B hym? If thyne offences be many how gettest thou his fauoure? If thou be ryghtuous what geuest thou hym? Or what receaueth he of thy handes? Of soche an vngodly personne as thou ẏ of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendest to be: there is a greate cry & cõplaynte made by them that are oppressed with violence/ yee euery man complayneth vpon the cruell arme of tyrañtes. For soche one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? ẏ that giueth vpon vs/ C ẏ we myght prayse him in the night? Which geueth vs more vnderstanding then he doth the beastes of the earth / & teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

If any soche complayne/ no man geueth answere/ & that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpõ God / doth not he heare hym? Doth not the almyghtye accepte hys crye? When thou D speakest then/ shulde not he pardon the / yf thou open thy selfe before hym, and put thy trust in him? Then bleth he no violence in his wrath/ nether hath he pleasure in curyous & depe inquysicions. Therfore hath Job opened his mouth but in vayne / & folyshly hath he made so many wordes.

¶ The .xxxvj. Chapter

Eliu

Aflu proceaded forth in his talkīg & sayde: Holde the styll a lytle/ & I shall shewe the/ what I haue yet to speake on Goses behalfe. I wyll open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderstandynge/ and proue my maker righteous. True are my wozdes/ & no lye: & the knowledge wher with all I argue agaynst the/ is perfecte. Beholde/ God caũeth not awaye ỹ mightye/ for he him selfe is mighty in power and wysdome.

Is for the vngodly/ he preserueth thẽ not/ but helpeth the pooze to their right. He turneth not his eyes awaye frõ the righteous/ he setteth vp kynges in their trone/ and confirmeth them/ so that they allwaye sytt ther
B in. But yf they be layed in prison and cheynes/ oz bounde with the bondes of pouerte: then sheweth he them their wozckes & dedes & the synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruell violence.

a* With punishyng & nurtringe of them, rowndeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from their wyckednesse, & to amende. If they now wyll take hede and be obedient, they shall were out their dayes in prosperite and their yeares in pleasure & ioye. But yf they wyll not obeye / they shall go thozow the swearde, & perish oz euer they be aware. As for soche as be sayncte/ dissemblers and ypocrites, they heape vp wzath for thẽ selues: for they call not vpõ hym, though they be his prisoners. Thus their soule perisheth in folysshnesse/ and their lyfe with the condemned. The pooze deliuereth he out of his straytenesse/ & comforteth soche as be in necessyte and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylt be content) from the bottomlesse pytte that is benethe: and yf thou wilt holde the quyete/ he shall fyll thy table with plenteousnesse.

He turneth the water to small droppes/ he dryueth his cloudes to gether for to rayne/ so ỹ they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can spreade out the cloudes (a couerynge of his tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them/ & to couer the botome of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he hys people/ & geueth them aboundaunce of meate. In ỹ turnyng of a hande he hydeth the lyght/ & at hys commaundement it commeth agayne. The ryslng vp therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the catell.

At this/ my hert is astonied/ & mo-
I ued out of his place. Heare then ỹ sounde of his voyce/ & the noyse ỹ goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauẽ/ & his light reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaringe voyce foloweth him for his glorious maiesty grueth soche a thonder clappe/ that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. It geueth an horrybie sownde/ when God sendeth oute hys voyce: greate thynges doth he/ which we can not cõprehende. When he cõmaundeth the snowe/ it falleth vpon the erth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge/ immedyatly ỹ showers haue their strength / and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they
B might knowe their awne wozckes. The beestes crepe into their dẽnes/ & take their rest. Out of the south commeth the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the* blesth of God the frost cõmeth/ & the waters are sped abrode. The cloudes do their labour in geuing moystnesse the cloudes poure doune their rayne. He dystributeth also on euery syde, accordinge as it pleaseth him to deale out his wozckes, that they maye do / whatsoeuer he cõmaundeth them thozow the whole worlde: whether it be to punysh any lande, oz to doo good vnto them/ that seke hym.

* The breth of God here signifieth a stroge and vehement wynd as is the north wynde.

Herken vnto this (O Job) stand styll/ and C considre the wondrous wozckes of God. Art thou of councell wyth God/ when he doth these thinges: When he causeth the lyght to come forth of hys cloudes: Art thou of hys councell when he spreadeth out the cloudes: Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of hys wonders: and how thy clothes are warme/ when the lande is styll thozow the South wynde: Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen/ which is to loke vpon/ as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto hym / for we are vnmete

P because of darcknes. Shall it be tolde hym what I saye? Shuld a man speake / or shulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not the light / that he kepeth cleare in ꝑ cloudes / which he clenseth whan he maketh ꝑ wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of ꝑ North / but the prayse & honoure of Gods feare cō-meth from God hym selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power / equite / & righteousnesse / he is hyer than can be expressed. Seinge then ꝑ euery body fea-reth hym / why shulde not all wyse men also stande in feare of hym.

THen spake the Lord vnto Job out of the storme / & sayde: what is he that hydeth his mynde with folysh wordes? Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man / for I will question the / se thou geue me a directe answere. Where wast thou / whē I layde the foundacyōs of ꝑ earth? Tell pla-nely yf thou hast vnderstanding. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or / who hath spreade ꝑ lyne vpō it? Where vpō stande the pylers of it? Or / who layed ꝑ corner stone? * a Where wast thou, * a whē the morning starres praysed me to gether and all the chyldren of God reioysed tryumphantly? Who shut the see with doores whē it brake forth as a chyld out of hys mothers wombe? When I made the clowdes to be a couering for it, & waoled it with the darcknes? when I gaue it my com-maundement, making dores & barres for it / & sayd: Hither to shalt thou come, but no fur-ther, & here shalt thou laye downe thy proud & hye waues. Hast thou geuen the morning his charge (as soone as thou wast borne) & shewed the daye spring his place, ꝑ it might take holde of the corners of the earth, & that ꝑ vngodly might be shakē out? Their tokēs & weapōs hast thou turned lyke claye, & sett thē vp agayne as the chaūging of a garmēt. Yee thou hast spoyled the vngodly of their light & brokē the arme of ꝑ proude. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see: or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of deeth bene opened vnto the / or hast thou sene the dore of euerlastyng treasure? Hast thou also perceaued how broade ꝑ earth is? Now yf thou hast know-ledge of all / then shew me where light dwel-leth / & where darcknes is: that thou mayest bringe vs vnto their quarters / yf thou canst tell the waye to their houses.

¶ Knewest thou (whē thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldest be? Wentest thou euer in to the threasuries of the snowe / or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle / which I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble / agaynst the tyme of batell and warre? By what waye is the lyght parted, and the heate dealt out vpon the earth? Who deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers / or who maketh a waye for the stormy wether / that it watereth & moysture th the drye and baren grounde: to make the gracse growe in places where no body dwelleth / and in the wylder-nes where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hath begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wōbe came the yse? Who hath gendred the colnes of the ayre? that ꝑ waters are as harde as stones / and lye congeled aboue the depe. Hast thou brought ꝑ .vij. starres to gether? Or art thou able to breke the circle of heauē? Canst thou D bringe forth the morninge starre or the eue-nynge starre at conuenient tyme / & cōueye them home agayne? Knowest thou ꝑ course of heauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordy-naunce therof vpō the erth? Moreouer / cāst thou lyft vp thy voyce to the cloudes / ꝑ they maye powre downe a greate rayne vpō the? Canst thou thonder also that they maye go their waye / & be obedīēt vnto the / saying: Lo here are we. Who geueth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandinge? who nombreth the cloudes in wysdome? who stylleth the behe-ment waters of the heauen? who turneth the clottes to dust / & then to be clottes agayne? Hunteste thou the praye frō the lyō / or fedest thou his welpes lying in their dēnes / & lur-king in their couches? who prouideth meate for the rauē / when his younge ones crye vn-to God / & be aboute for want of meate?

¶ God speaketh vnto Job shewynge hym by the ex-ample s of hys workes. that hys ryghtwesnes is vn-searchable.

Therfore haue I spoken vnwyselye / seynge these thinges are so hye/ & passe myne vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also/ & let me speake: answere vnto the thinge that I wyll aske the. I haue geuen diligent eare vnto the/ & now I se the w̃ myne eyes. Wherfore I geue myne awne selfe the blame/ & take repentaũce in ꝑ dust and asshes.

Now when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased with the & thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken ꝑ thing
B that is ryght before me/ lyke as my seruaũt Job hath done. Therfore take .vij. oxen & .vij. rammes/ and go to my seruaunt Job / offre vp also for youre selues a brent offringe: and Marc.v.c. let my seruaũt Job praye for you. Him will I accepte/ & not deale with you after youre folysshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thinge which is ryght/ lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite/ Baldad ꝑ Suhite & Sophar the Naamathite wente
C their waye, and dyd accordyng as the Lorde cõmaunded thẽ. The Lorde also accepted ꝑ personne of Job/ and the Lorde turned hym vnto Job, whẽ he prayed for hys frindes: Yee the Lorde gaue Job twyse as moche as he had afore.

And then came there vnto him all his brethren/ all his systers, with all them that had bene of his acquaintaunce afore/ & ate bred with him in hys house/ wondring at hym/ & comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble/ that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Euery man gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he D was before: for he had .xiiij. M. shepe. bi. M. camels/ & .M. youck of oxẽ/ & a. M. asshes. He had chyldren also .vij. sonnes & .iij. doughters. The fyrst called Faye: the second Pouerte: the thyrde All plenteousnes. In all ꝑ lande were none foũde so fayre/ as ꝑ doughters of Job/ & their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethren. After this lyued Job .xl. yeares/ so that he sawe his childrẽ; & hys childrẽs children to the fourth generacyon. And so he dyed/ beinge olde & of a perfecte age.

¶ The fyrst Psalme.

¶ Those that forsake the councelles and tradycyons of the wycked/and wholly geue them selues to knowe the lawe of God/and to shewe it in their lyuyng: doth thys Psalme pronounce blessed/ both here in the worlde to come: and the contrarye parte/in both the worldes/myserable and wretched.

Blessed is the man/ that goeth not in the councell of the vngodly: that abydeth not in a the waye of synners/ b and sytteth not in the seate of the scornefull.

But delyteth in the lawe of the Lorde/ & exercyseth hym selfe in his lawe, both daye and nyght.

Soche a man is lyke a tre planted by the waterside, that bryngeth forth his frute in due season.

His leaues shall not fall of, & loke what soeuer he doth/it shall prospere.

As for the vngodly it is not so with them: but they are lyke the dust, which the wynde scattereth awaye from of the grounde.

Therfore the vngodly shall not be able c to stande in the iudgement, nether the synners in the congregacyon of the ryghtuous.

For the Lorde alloweth the waye of the ryghtuous, but the waye of the vngodly shall perysshe.

a The waye of synners is their maners & ordynaunces in whych they walche/ as it were in a waye Waye in the scripture is taken for whatsoeuer we do or go about/ be it good or euyll/ as in the last verse of thys Psalme.

b The Scripte in the seate of the scornefull is to conspire with the & to become fellowes of their mysche-fe: as in the Psal. xcvj.

c To stande in iudgement/ is/ to wynne the procesle and to haue sentence: pronounced on their syde: as to robbe iudgement/ is/ to let the procesle/ & to haue sentence pronounced agaynst ryght & trueth. Esa. x.a. So then this text meaneth no more/ but that the wycked shall haue soche a terrible sentence geuen vpon them/ that they shall not be able to abyde/ when the Lorde shall come to the generall iudgement: it meaneth not that the wycked shall not appeare in the iudgement.

¶ The .ij. Psalme.

C A prayer agaynst frowarde malycyous & wycked men, which vexe with wyles and violence oppresse all that are poore and helpelesse, wherin also their intolerable pryde and vngodlynes, with their craftes and despyte to hurte other are described.

C There is no Tytle in the Hebrew.

Why arte thou gone so farre of, O Lorde: wylt thou hyde thy selfe in tyme of trouble?

Whyle the vngodly hath ỳ ouer hande, the poore must suffre persecucyon: O that they were taken in the ymagynacyon which they go aboute.

For ỳ vngodly maketh boost of his awne hertes desyre, the couetous blesseth him self, and blaspheneth the Lorde.

The vngodly is so proude and full of indignacyon that he careth not: neither is God before his eyes.

His wayes are allwaye filthye, thy iudgmentes are farre out of his sight, he defyeth all his enemyes.

For he sayeth in hys herte: Tush, I shall neuer be cast downe, ther shal no harme happen vnto me.

¶ This Psalme made Dauid vpon some greate and Jeopardous perill agaynst which he hertened him self not a lytell with calling to remẽbraunce the promes of God: & thereby perswaded him self that he shulde haue the victorye/ & after lyue peceably in the trade of godly lyuyng.

¶ Of Dauid.

THe Lorde is my lyght and my health: whom then shulde I feare? the Lorde is the strength of my lyfe / for whome then shulde I be afrayed?

Therfore when the wycked / euen myne enemyes and my foes/ came vpõ me/ to eate vp my flesh / they stombled and fell.

B Though an hoost of men were layed a- gaynst me, yet shall not my hert be afrayed: & though there rose vp warre agaynst me/ yet wyll I put my trust in him.

a* The scripture doth often call the rocke for strength & stablenes ỹ which is ỹ true & liuely foundacõ of ỹ church. Psal.xviii.a.

One thynge haue I desyred of ỹ Lorde/ which I wyll require: namely / that I may dwell in the house of the Lorde all the dayes of my lyfe to beholde the fayre beutie of the Lorde/ and to vyset his temple.

b* That is/ vanquyshed myne enemyes.

For in the tyme of trouble he hath hyd me in his tabernacle/ yee in ỹ secrete place of his dwellyng hath he kepte and set me vp vpon a a* rocke of stone.

c* The lyfte his face frõ yi/ is/ not to care for him to trouble hym/ and not to heare hym: And on ỹ contrary parte not to hyde his face frõ him, is to care for him/ to helpe him and succoure him fauorably to heare him. Psal.xxxiij.b. cij.cxliij.

And now hath he b* lyft vp my head aboue myne enemyes/ ỹ cõpassed me roũde about.

Therfore wyll I offre in his dwellynge / the oblacyon of thãkesgeuyng: I wyll singe and speake prayses vnto the Lorde.

AScribe vnto the Lorde, O ye mightie/ ascribe vnto the Lorde worshippe and strength. B

Geue the Lorde the honoure of his name/ bowe youre selues to the holy magesty of the Lorde.

It is the Lorde that cõmaundeth ỹ waters: It is the glorious God that maketh ỹ thonder: it is the Lorde that ruleth the see.

The voyce of ỹ Lorde is mightye in operacyon, the voyce of the Lord is a glorious voyce.

The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedre trees: yee the Lorde breaketh the Ceders of Libanus.

He maketh

He maketh them to skyppe lyke a calfe: Libanus & Sirion lyke a ponge vnycorne.

The voyce of the Lorde deuydeth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lorde [b*] shaketh the wyldernesse / yee the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse of Cades.

b* That is maketh the hydeous & terrible brastes of the wylderness to quake.

The voyce of the Lorde moueth the hyndes and discouereth ỹ thicke bushes: in his temple shall euery man speake of hys honoure.

The Lorde stilleth the water floude / & the Lorde remayneth a kynge for euer.

The Lorde shall geue power vnto hys people / the Lorde shall geue his people the blessynge of peace.

B For his wrath endureth but ỹ twynckling of an eye / and his pleasure is in lyfe: heuynesse maye well endure for a nyght / but ioye commeth in the morynge.

As for me / when I was in prosperite / I sayde: Tush / I shall neuer fall more.

And why? thou Lorde of thy goodnesse hadest made my hyll so stronge.

But as soone as thou turnedest thy face fro me / I was brought in feare.

Then cryed I vnto the / O Lorde / yee vnto the Lorde made I my prayer.

What profyt is there in my bloude / yf I go downe to corrupcyon?

Maye the dust geue thanckes vnto the? Or shall it declare thy faythfulnesse?

Heare / O Lorde / and haue mercy vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

D d* To put of his sack cloth is / to put awaye ỹ sadnes of hys herte: because they vsed to clothe the selues with sacke cloth in tyme of their extreame sadnes / as ye se in Esther & in many other places.

A Psalme of Asaph.

A How louynge is God vnto Israel/ to soche as are of a cleane hert?

Neuertheles my fete were almost gone/ my treadynges had well nye slypte.

And why? I was greued at the wycked/ to se the vngodly in soche prosperyte.

For they are in no parell of death/ but stande fast lyke a palace.

They come in no mysfortune lyke other folke/ nether are they plaged lyke other mē.

And this is the cause that they be so puft vp in pryde/ and ouerwhelmed with cruelte and vnryghteousnesse.

Their eyes swell for fatnesse/ they do euē what they lyst.

Corrupte are they/ and speake blasphe- B myes malycyously/ proude and presumptuous are their wordes.

They stretch forth their mouth vnto the heauen/ & their tōge goeth thorow ꝑ world.

Therfore fall the people vnto thē/ & there out sucke they no small auauntage.

Tush/ saye they, how shuld God perceaue it? is there knowlege in the moost hyest?

Lo, these are the vngodly, these prospere in the worlde/ their haue riches in possessyō.

Shulde I then clense my herte in vayne (thought I) & wash my handes in innocency?

Wherfore shuld I be then punyshed dayly/ & be chastened euery morynge?

Yee I had almost also sayde euen as they: but lo, then shuld I haue condemned the generacyon of thy chyldren.

Then thought I to vnderstande this/ but it was to harde for me.

Vntyll I wente into the Sanctuary of God, and consydred the ende of these men.

Namely, how thou hast sett thē in a slyppery place/ that thou mayst cast thē downe headlynges and destroye them.

O how sodenly do they consume/ perysh/ and come to a fearfull ende?

Yee euē lyke as a dreame when one awa- b kem so makest thou their* ymage to vanysh out of the cite. * That is/ their estimacō or glorye.

Thus my hert was greued/ and it wente D euen thorow my reynes.

So foolysh was I and ignorant/ and as it were a beast before the.

Neuertheiesse I am all waye by the/ thou holdest me by my ryght hande.

Thou leadest me with thy counsell/ and afterwarde receauest me vnto glory.

O what is there prepared for me in heauen? there is no thing vpon earth/ that I desyre in comparyson of the.

My flesh & my hert fayleth/ but God is the strength of my hert/ & my porcyō for euer.

For lo, they that forsake the shall perysh: thou destroyest all them that* cōmytte for- nycacyon agaynst the. * They cōmit fornycacyon agaynst hym/ that put their trust in any other than in hym alone.

But it is good for me/ to holde me fast by God, to put my trust in the Lorde God, and to speake of all thy workes.

which we haue herde & knowne/ & suche as oure fathers haue tolde vs.

That we shulde not hyde them from the chyldren of the generacyons to come: but to shewe the honour of the Lorde/hys myght & wonderfull worckes that he hath done.

He made a couenaũt with Jacob/& gaue Israel a lawe/which he commaunded oure forefathers to teache their chyldren.

That their posterite myght knowe it/and the chyldren which were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp/they myght shewe their chyldren the same.

That they also myght put their trust in God/& not to forget what he had done/ but to kepe hys commaundementes.

And not to be as their forefathers/a *frowarde and ouerthwarte generacion, a generacyon that set not their herte a right, and whose spyrete was not true towarde God.

a *Of a frowarde generacion: &c. xxj.c.

B Lyke as the chyldrẽ of *Ephraim/which beyng harnessed and caryẽg bowes, turned them selues backe in the tyme of batayll.

b *Although Ephraim in Josue xvij. signifie but one tribe of the chyldren of Israel: neuertheles for the most parte/ in the Prophetes by Ephraim are vnderstãde the x. tribes/which were vnder Jeroboam: as it appeareth Osee. xij.d.x.a.b. &c. Caue

They kepte not the couenaunt of God/ & wolde not walke in hys lawe.

They forgat what he had done/and the wonderfull worckes that he had shewed for them.

Marueilous thynges dyd he in the syght of oure fathers in the lande of Egypte/ euen in the felde of *Zoan.

He deuyded the see & let them go thorow it, & made the waters to stande lyke a wall.

In the daye tyme he led thẽ with a cloude/ & all the nyght thorow with a lyght of fyre.

He cloue the hard rockes in the wyldernesse/& gaue them dryncke therof/ as it had bene out of the greate deapth.

He brought waters out of ỹ stony rocke/ so that they gushed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all this they synned agaynst him/ & prouoked the moost hyest in ỹ wyldernes.

They tempted God in their hertes/ and requyred meate for their lust.

For they spake agaynst God/& sayde: yee yee, God shall prepare a *table in ỹ wyldernesse/shall he?

C d *By the table is vnderstande all sortes of vytayles necessary for mãs: yet is it often taken for the bredde & water of the wisdome of the worde of God: as in the Psal. xxiij.b.

Lo/he smote the stony rocke, that the watery streames gushed out, and the streames flowed with all: but how can he geue bred & prouyde flesh for his people?

When ỹ Lord hearde this/he was wroth: so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob/ and heuy displeasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God/ & put not their truste in hys helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue/& opened the doores of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon them for to eate/and gaue them bred from heauen.

Then ate they angels *fode/ for he sent them meate ynough.

He caused the East wynd to blowe vnder the heauẽ, & thorow hys power he brought in the south wynde.

He made flesh to rayne vpon thẽ as thicke as dust/and fethered foules like as the sande of the see.

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde aboute their habytacyons.

So they ate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their awne desyre.

They were not disapoynted of their lust.

But whyle ỹ meate was yet in their mouthes: the heuy wrath of God came vpon thẽ, & slewe the *welthiest of thẽ, & smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

But for all this they synned yet more/and beleued not his wonderous worckes.

Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanyte, and sodenly their yeares were gone.

When he slewe them/ they sought hym/ & turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their succoure/ and that the hye God was their redemer.

Neuertheles they dyd but flatter him in their mouthes, and dyssembled wyth hym in their tonges.

For their herte was not whole with him/ nether contynued they in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercyfull/ ỹ he forgaue their mysdedes/and destroyed them not.

Yee many a tyme turned he his wrath awaye/ and wolde not suffre hys whole displeasure to aryse.

For he considered ỹ they were but *flesh: euen a wynde that passeth awaye/and commeth not agayne.

g *Flesh for man/ as in the Psal. lvj

O how oft haue they greued hym in the wyldernesse?

How many a tyme haue they prouoked hym in the deserte?

They thought not of his hand/in the daye when he delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

How he had wrought hys myracles in Egypte/& his wondres in the lande of Zoan.

How he turned their waters in to bloude/ so that they myght not drynke of ỹ ryuers.

c* This is expounded in the Psalme. xv. a.

O Lord God of Hostes/ heare my prayer: herken O * God of Jacob.

Beholde, O God oure defence, d* loke vpõ the face of thyne anoynted.

For one daye in thy courte is better then a thousande.

I had rather be a doore keper in the house of my God, then to dwell in the tentes of the vngodly.

For the Lord God is a lyght and defence/ the Lorde wyll geue grace and worshyppe/ and no good thinge shall he withholde from them that lyue a godly lyfe.

O Lorde God of Hostes/ blessed is the man that putteth hys trust in the.

d* To loke vpon the face/ is to beare graciously and to shewe a token of benyuolence/ as in Nume. vi. d.

Wylt thou be displeased at vs for euer? wylt thou stretch out thy wrath frõ one generacyon to another?

Wylt thou not turne agayne and quyckẽ vs/ that thy people maye reioyse in the?

I wyll herken what the Lorde God wyll saye/ c* for he shall speake peace vnto hys people and to hys sayntes/ that they turne not them selues vnto folysshnes.

For hys saluacyon is nye them that feare hym so that glory shall dwell in oure lande.

Mercy & trueth are met together/ rygh-

Trueth

Trueth shall ryse out of the earth / and ryghtuousnesse shall loke downe frō heauē.

And why? the Lorde shall shewe louynge kyndnesse, and oure lande shall geue her encrease.

b* Or, kepth & spd. kyngs. b* Ryghtuousnesse shall go before hym, and prepare the waye for his comynge.

Be mercyfull vnto me, O Lorde, for I a* call dayly vpon the. a* What to call for, signifieth in the scripture, is sayde in Exo. xxxiij. d. 1. Reg. viij. b. 3 Psal. xcix.

Comforte the soule of thy seruaunt, for vnto the, O Lorde, do I lyft vp my soule.

For thou Lorde art good and gracyous, and of greate mercy vnto all them that call vpon the.

Geue eare Lorde vnto my prayer, & pondre my humble desyre.

In the tyme of my trouble I call vpō the, for thou hearest me.

Amonge & Goddes there is none lyke vnto the, O Lorde, there is not one that can do as thou doest.

All nacyons whom thou hast made, shall come and worshyppe before the, O Lorde, and shall glorifye thy name.

For thou art great, thou doest wonderous thinges, thou art God alone.

Leade me in thy waye, O Lorde, that I may walke in thy trueth: O let my hert delyte in fearynge thy name.

I thanke the, O Lorde my God, & wyll prayse thy name for euer.

For great is thy mercy towarde me, thou hast delyuered my soule from the * b nethermost hell. b* That is, out of extreame & co partyes.

¶ O God the proude are rysen agaynst me, and the congregacion of the myghtye seketh after my soule, & set not & before their eyes.

But thou, O Lorde God, art full of compassyon, and mercy, longe sufferynge, great in goodnes and trueth.

O turne the then vnto me, haue mercy vpō me: geue thy strength vnto thy seruaūt, and helpe the sonne of thyne handmayde.

Shewe some token vpon me for good, & they which hate me, maye se it, and be ashamed: because thou Lorde hast holpen me, & comforted me.

The hylles melt like waxe at the presence of the Lorde of the whole earth.

The very heauens declare his ryghtuousnes / and all the people se his glory.

Confounded be all they ỹ worshipe ymages / and delyte in their Idols: worshipe hym all ye goddes.

Sion heareth of it & reioyseth: yee & all the daughters of Iuda are glad because of thy iudgmentes, O Lorde. B

For thou Lorde art the most hyest ouer all ỹ earth / thou art exalted farre aboue all goddes.

 That is / Townes and vyllages.

O ye

O ye that loue the Lorde / ſe that ye hate the thynge which is euell: the Lorde preſerueth the ſoules of his ſaynctes, he ſhall deliuer them from the hande of the vngodly.

There is ſpronge vp a lyght for the ryghtuous /and a ioyfull gladneſſe for ſuch as be b* true herted.

b* What the true herted ſymbyeth in the Scripture is ſayde in the Pſalm.lxuij.b

Reioyſe therfore in the Lorde / ye ryghtuous:and geue thãckes for a remẽbraunce of his holyneſſe.

MY ſonge ſhalbe of mercy & iudgment/ vnto the(O Lorde) will I ſynge.

O let me haue vnderſtandynge in the waye of Godlyneſſe, vntyll the tyme that thou come vnto me:and ſo ſhall I walcke in my houſe with an innocent herte.

I will take no wicked thynge in hande/I hate ꝑ tyme of vnfaythfulneſſe/ it ſhall not cleue vnto me.

a* A frowarde herte ſhall departe fro me/ I will not knowe a wicked perſonne.

a* That is a frowarde herte which ſygnifyeth to be the honour & will of God/ and yet he doth ſeke nothing leſſe/as he ſaith Prouer.vi.b.

Who ſo priuely ſclaundreth his neyghboure, him will I deſtroye: Who ſo hath a proude loke & an hye ſtomacke / I maye not awaye with him.

Myne eyes ſhal loke for ſuch as be faithfull in the lande, that they maye dwell wyth me: & who ſo leadeth a godly lyfe / ſhalbe my ſeruaunt.

There ſhall no diſceatfull perſonne dwell in my houſe,he that telleth lyes ſhall not tarye in my ſight.

I ſhall ſoone deſtroye all the vngodly of the lande/that all wicked doers maye be rooted out of the cytie of the Lorde.

¶ The.cij.Pſalme.

¶ A lamentable bewaylyng of the myſerye of the holy people / in which they were almoſt oppreſſed wyth innumerable iniuries of the borderers and people that dwelt nere vnto them at their returne frõ Babylon/ when they came to repayre the temple & cytie of Hieruſalem.

¶ A prayer

A prayer of the afflyct / when he was in woo/and powred oute hys complaynte before the Lorde.

A * True prayer is an earnest & affectuous communicacyon of the hert with God, and a dylygent consyderacyon of the thynges that want in vs concernyng the leasyng of hys glorye and doyng his will: with a burnyng & fervent desyre of the spirite/that requyreth him to repayre & amend that whych wanteth in vs. Psalm. v. a. Rom. xv. b. Every Godly wyshe is also a good prayer. * No cause for any maner of fode.

HEare my * prayer, O Lorde/and lett my cryenge come vnto the.

Hyde not thy face from me in ỹ tyme of my trouble enclyne thyne eares vnto me when I call/ O heare me/ & that right soone.

For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke/and my bones are brẽt vp as it were a fyre brande.

My hert is smytten downe and wythered lyke grasse/so ỹ I forget to eate my * bred.

For the voyce of my gronynge, my bone will scarse cleue to my flesh.

I am become lyke a Pellycane in ỹ wildernes, and lyke an howle in a brokẽ wall.

I wake, and am cuẽ as it were a sparow sytteynge alone vpon the house toppe.

Myne enemyes revyle me all the daye longe they laugh me to scorne/& are sworne together agaynst me.

I eate asshes with my bred, and mẽgle my dryncke with weppynge.

And that because of thyne indignacyon & wrath, for thou hast taken me vp / and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone lyke a shadowe/ and I am wythered lyke grasse,

But thou / O Lorde/ endurest for ever/ and thy remembraunce throwow out all generacyons.

Aryse therfore & haue mercy vpõ Sion/ for it is tyme to haue mercy vpõ her / yee the tyme is come.

And why? thy servauntes haue a loue to her * stones, & it pitieth thẽ to se her in the dust.

The Heathẽ shall feare thy name, O Lorde/ and all the kynges of the earth thy majesty.

For the Lorde shall buylde vp Sion, and shall apeare in his glory.

* He turneth him vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, & despyseth not their desyre.

This shalbe wrytten for those that come after / that the people whych shalbe borne/ maye prayse the Lorde.

For he loketh downe from his Sanctuarye / out of the heauen doth the Lorde beholde the earth.

That he maye heare the mournynges of soch as be in captyuite, and deliuer the chyldren of death.

That they maye preach the name of the Lorde in Sion, & his worshipe at Jerusalẽ.

When the people are gathered together/ & the kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde.

He hath brought downe my strẽgth in my journey, and shortened my dayes.

Yet will I saye: O my God / take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeares, they endure throwow out all generacyons.

Thou Lorde in the begynnyng hast layed the foundacyon of the earth/ and the heauẽs are the worckes of thy handes.

* They shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall were olde as doth a garmẽt/ and as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them/ & they shalbe chaunged. * Heb. i. b

But thou art the same/ & thy yeares shall not fayle.

The chyldrẽ of thy servauntes shall cõtynue/ & their sede shall prospere in thy sight.

The. ciij. Psalme.

He prayseth the goodnes of God toward men/ which both forgeueth them their synnes and aboundauntly distributeth vnto them worthy goodes.

Of Dauid.

PRayse the Lorde/ O my soule/ and all ỹ is within me prayse hys holy name. A Prayse the Lorde O my soule/ and forget not all his benefytes.

Which forgeueth all thy synnes / & healeth all thyne infirmities.

Which saueth thy lyfe from destruccyon/ and crowneth the with mercy / and louynge kyndnesse.

Which satisfyeth thy desyre wyth good thynges, makyng the yonge and lusty as an Aegle.

The Lorde executeth ryghtuousnesse and iudgment, for all them that suffre wronge. B

He shewed his wayes vnto Moses/ & hys worckes vnto the chyldren of Israel.

The Lord is full of compassyon and mercy. * longe suffrynge/ & of great goodnesse. a * The Lorde is longe suffrynge / which is moare then prayer: for he not onely suffreth/ but also differeth vengeaunce desyrynge the amendemẽt of the synner / louyng better to pardon & forgeue then to punyshe. Rom. ii. a Ether despysest thou the ryches of hys goodnes / patyence & longe sufferaunce &c.

He will not alwaye be chydynge / nether will he kepe his anger for euer.

He hath not dealt with vs after oure synnes, nor rewarded vs according to oure wickednesse.

For loke how hye the heauen is in comparison of the earth, so greate is his mercy also towarde them that feare him.

Loke how wyde the east is from ỹ west/ so farre hath he set oure synnes from vs.

Yee like as a father pitieth his awne children, euen so is the Lorde mercyfull vnto thẽ that feare him.

For he knoweth wherof we be made / he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a mã in his time is but as is grasse/ and floureth as a floure of the felde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it/ it is gone / and the place therof knoweth it no more.

But the mercyful goodnesse of the Lorde endureth for euer and euer / vpon them that feare him, and his ryghtuousnesse vpon their chylders chyldren. D

Soch

Soch as kepe his couenaunt/& thincke vpon his commaundementes to do them.

O prayse the Lorde all ye his Hostes / ye seruauntes of his/that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde all ye worckes of his/in euery place of his dominiō: prayse thou the Lorde/O my soule.

The. ciiij. Psalme.

The prayseth God for the creacyon of all thynges/ & A for his goodly gouernaunce therof.

PRayse the Lorde O my soule: O Lord my God thou art become exceadynge glorious/ thou art clothed wt maiesty and honoure.

Thou deckest thy self wt lyght / as it were with a garment/thou spredest out ♁ heauen lyke a curtayne.

Thou boltest it aboue with waters/ thou makest the cloudes thy charet/ & goest vpon the wynges of the wynde.

*Heb. 1. b. *Thou makest thyne angels spyrites/and thy ministers flammes of fyre.

Thou hast layed the earth vpon her foundacyon, that it neuer moueth at enytyme.

Thou couerest it wyth the depe lyke as wyth a garment / so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they flie/at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayed. B

(Then are the hylles seene aloft / and the valleys beneth in their place which thou hast appoynted for them.)

Thou hast set them their boundes/which they maye not passe / that they turne not agayne to couer the earth.

Thou causest the welles to sprynge vp amonge the valleys / & the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That all beastes of the felde maye haue dryncke/& that the wilde asses maye quench their thyrste.

Aboue vpō the hylles haue the foules of the ayre their habitacyon/and synge amōge the braunches.

Thou watrest the hylles from aboue/the earth is fylled wt the frutes of thy worckes.

Thou bryngest forth grasse for the catell/ and grene herbes for the seruyce of men.

Thou bryngest fode out of ♁ earth: wyne to make glad the herte of man/ oyle to make hym a chearfull countenaunce and bred to strengthe mans herte.

* That is, that grow. C The trees *of the Lorde are full of sappe/ euē ♁ trees of Libanus which he hath plāted. We of the selues and are not graffed of men.

There make the byrdes their nestes / and the fyre hylles are a dwellyng for ♁ storche.

The hilles are a refuge for ♁ wilde goates/ and so are the stony rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appoynted the Moone for certayne seasons / the Sunne knoweth hys goinge downe.

Thou makest darcknesse / that it maye be night/wherin all the beastes of the forest do moue.

Yee and the ponge lyons which roare after their pray/and seke their meate at God. But when the sunne aryseth / they get them awaye together / & lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to his worcke/and to tyll his lande vntyll the euenynge.

*O Lord, how manifolde are thy workes/ right wysely hast thou made them all: yee ♁ earth is full of thy ryches. *Psal. xcij. a

So is this greate & wyde see also / wherin are thynges creepynge innumerable/ both small and greate beastes.

There go the shippes ouer / and there is that Leuiathā, whome thou hast made/ to take his pastyme therin. b Of this ye haue in Job xl. b.

They wayte all vpō the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season.

When thou geuest it them / they gather it: when thou openest thyne hande/ they are fylled with good.

But when thou hydest thy face / they are sorowfull: yf thou takest awaye their breth/ they dye/ & are turned agayne to their dust.

Agayne/ when thou lettest thy breth goo forth, they are made/ and so thou renuest the face of the earth.

The glorious maiesty of the Lorde endureth for euer/ & the Lorde reioyseth in hys worckes. c What is signified by the reioysynge of the Lord is sayd Esa. lxv. b.

The earth trembleth at the loke of him, he doth but touch the hylles and they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as longe as I lyue/ I wyll prayse my God whyle I haue my beynge.

O that my wordes myght please him/ for my ioye is in the Lorde.

13 So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble / and he delyuered them oute of their dystresse.

14 He brought them out of darcknesse & out of the shadowe of death / & brake their bōdes in sonder.

15 O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde / and the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

16 For he hath broken the* gates of brasse / and smytten the* barres of yron in sonder.

17 Folysh mē were plaged for their offence / and be cause of their wickednesse.

18 Their soule abhorred all maner of meate / they were euen harde at deathes dore.

19 So they cryed vnto ỳ Lord in their trouble. & he delyuered thē out of their dystresse.

20 He sent his worde and healed them / and saued them from destruccyon.

21 O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde, and the wōders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

22 That they wolde offre vnto him the sacrifyce of thāckesgeuyng, & tell out his worckis with gladnes.

23 They that go downe to the see in shippes / & occupie their busynesse in greate waters.

24 These men se the worckes of the Lorde, & his wonders in the deape.

25 For at his worde / the stormy winde ariseth / and lyfteth vp the waues therof.

26 They are carryed vp to ỳ heauē / & downe agayne to ỳ deape, their soule melteth awaye in the trouble.

27 They rele to and fro / they stacker lyke a dronchen man / and are at their wyttes ende.

28 So they crye vnto ỳ Lord in their trouble / & he delyuereth thē out of their distresse.

29 He maketh the storme to ceasse / so that ỳ waues are styll.

Then are they glad because they be at rest / and so he bryngeth them vnto the hauen where they wolde be.

30 O that men wolde prayse the goodnes of the Lorde, and the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

Which

which we haue herde & knowne/ & soche as oure fathers haue tolde vs.

That we shulde not hyde them from the chyldren of the generacyons to come: but to shewe the honour of the Lorde/hys myght & wonderfull worckes that he hath done.

He made a couenaũt with Jacob/& gaue Israel a lawe, which he commaunded oure forefathers to teache their chyldren.

That their posterite myght knowe it/and the chyldren which were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp/they myght shewe their chyldren the same.

That they also myght put their trust in God/& not to forget what he had done/ but to kepe hys commaundementes.

And not to be as their forefathers/a*frowarde and ouerthwarte generacion, a generacyon that set not their herte a right, and whose spyrete was not true towarde God.

a*Of a frowarde generacion: what. xy.c.

B Lyke as the chyldrẽ of b*Ephraim/which beyng harnessed and carryẽg bowes, turned them selues backe in the tyme of batayll.

b*Although the Ephraimites signifie but one tribe of the chyldren of Israel: neuertheles for the most parte/ in the Prophetes by Ephraim are vnderstãde the x. tribes/which were vnder Ieroboam: as it appereth Ose. viij.d.x.b.c. & O. Cant.

They kepte not the couenaunt of God/ & wolde not walke in hys lawe.

They forgat what he had done/and the wonderfull worckes that he had shewed for them.

Marueilous thynges dyd he in the syght of oure fathers in the lande of Egypte/ euen in the felde of c*Zoan.

He deuyded the see & let them go thorow it/ & made the waters to stande lyke a wall.

In the daye tyme he led thẽ with a cloude/ & all the nyght thorow with a lyght of fyre.

He cloue the hard rockes in the wyldernesse/& gaue them dryncke therof/ as it had bene out of the greate deapth.

He brought waters out of ỹ stony rocke/ so that they gushed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all that they synned agaynst him/ & prouoked the moost hyest in ỹ wyldernes.

They tempted God in their hertes/ and requyred meate for their lust.

For they spake agaynst God/& sayde: yee yee, God shall prepare a d*table in ỹ wildernesse/ shall he?

d*By the table is vnderstande all sortes of vytayles necessary for mãne: yet is it often taken for the bredde & water of the wisdome of the worde of God/ as in the Psal. xxiij.b.

Lo/he smote the stony rocke, that the watery streames gushed out, and the streames flowed with all: but how can he geue bred & prouyde flesh for his people?

When ỹ Lord hearde this/ he was wroth: so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob/ and heuy displeasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God/ & put not their truste in hys helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue/& opened the doores of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon them for to eate/and gaue them bred from heauen.

Then ate they angels*fode/ for he sent them meate ynough.

He caused the East wynd to blowe vnder the heauẽ, & thorow hys power he brought in the south wynde.

He made flesh to rayne vpon thẽ as thicke as dust/and fethered foules like as the sande of the see.

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde about their habytacyons.

So they ate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their awne desyre.

They were not disapoynted of their lust.

But whyle ỹ meate was yet in their mouthes: the heuy wrath of God came vpon thẽ/ & slewe the e*welthiest of thẽ, & smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

e*Manna is called the fode of angels/ not that the angels vse soche fode/ but because it came downe frõ heauen/ which is the dwelling place of the angels. And therfor do some reade here the bredde of the cloudes/ because it came from the cloudes: some the bredde of ỹ mighty/ because it cam from the almyghty. Exo. xvi.d. Sapien. xvi. c. & Ioan. vi.d.

But for all this they synned yet more/and beleued not his wonderous worckes.

Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanyte, and sodenly their yeares were gone.

f*By the welthy ornat in the Scripture/ & by the chosen/ are signified ỹ noble & mighty princes & prelates: & all those that are moost esteamed & honoured in thys worlde. Psalme. xxij.g

When he slewe them/ they sought hym/ & turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their succoure/ and that the hye God was their redemer.

Neuertheles they dyd but flatter hym in their mouthes, and dyssembled wyth hym in their tonges.

For their herte was not whole with him/ nether contynued they in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercyfull/ ỹ he forgaue their myslydedes/and destroyed them not.

Yee many a tyme turned he his wrath awaye/ and wolde not suffre hys whole displeasure to aryse.

For he considered ỹ they were but g*flesh: euen a wynde that passeth awaye/and commeth not agayne.

g*Flesh for man/ as in the psal. lvi.

O how oft haue they greued hym in the wyldernesse!

How many a tyme haue they prouoked hym in the deserte!

They turned backe/ and tempted God/ & moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hand/in the daye when he delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

How he had wrought hys myracles in Egypte/& his wondres in the lande of Zoan.

How he turned their waters in to blonde/ so that they myght not drynke of ỹ ryuers.

How he sent lyce amõge them/to eate thẽ vp/and frogges to destroye them.

How he gaue their frutes vnto the caterpyller/ & their laboure vnto the grashopper.

How he bett downe their vyneyardes wt hayle stones/ and their molbery trees wyth the frost.

How he smote their catel wt hayle stones/and their flockes with hote thonder boltes.

How he sent vpon them the furyousnesse of his wrath, anger and displeasure: wyth trouble and fallyng in of euell angels.

When he made a waye to hys fearfull indignacyon, and spared not their soules frō death, yee & gaue their cattell ouer to the pestylence.

When he smote all ẏ fyrstborne in Egypt, the moost pryncypall and myghtyest in the dwellynges of Ham.

But as for his awne people, he lead them forth lyke shepe, and caried them in the wyldernesse lyke a flocke.

He brought thē out safely, ẏ they shulde not feare, and ouerwhelmed their enemyes with the see.

He caryed them vnto the borders of his Sanctuary: euen in to thys hyll, which he purchased with his ryght hande.

He dyd cast out the Heathen before them, caused their lande to be deuyded amonge thē for an heritage, and made the trybes of Israel to dwell in their tentes.

For all this they tempted & displeased the most hye God, and kepte not his couenaunt.

But turned their backes, and fell awaye lyke their forefathers, startynge aside lyke a broken bowe.

And so they greued hym wt their hye places, and prouoked hym with their ymages.

When God herde this, he was wroth, & toke fore displeasure at Israel.

So that he forsoke the Tabernacle in Silo, euen his habitacion wherin he dwelt amonge men.

He deliuered their power into captyuite, and their glory into the enemyes hande.

He gaue his people ouer vnto the swerde, for he was wroth with his heritage.

The fyre consumed their yōge men, and their maydens were not geuen to mariage.

Their Prestes were slayne wt the swerde, and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacyon.

So the Lorde awaked as one out of slepe, and like a gyaunte refreshed wt wyne.

He smote his enemyes in the hynder partes, and put them to a perpetuall shame.

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the trybe of Ephraim.

Neuertheles, he chose the tribe of Juda, euen the hyll of Syon which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, & layed the foundacion of it lyke the groūde, that it myght perpetually endure.

He chose Dauid also his seruaunt, & toke hym awaye from the shepe foldes.

As he was folowinge the yowes greate wt yonge, he toke him, that he might fede Jacob hys people, and Israel his enherytaunce.

So he fed them with a faythfull and true hert, and ruled them with all the dilygence of hys power.

O geue thankes vnto the God of all goddes/for his mercy endureth for euer.

O thanke

O thanke the Lorde of all Lordes, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which only doth greate wonders / for hys mercy endureth for euer.

Which by his wysdome made the heauēs / for hys mercy endureth for euer.

Which layed out the earth aboue the waters, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which hath made greate lyghtes / for hys mercy endureth for euer.

The sunne to rule the daye / for hys mercy endureth for euer.

The moone & the starres to gouerne the nyght / for his mercy endureth for euer.

*Exo.xij.c. *Which smote Egypt with their fyrst borne / for his mercy endureth for euer.

And brought out Israel frō amonge thē / for his mercy endureth for euer.

With a myghtye hande and stretched out arme / for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which deuyded the reed see into partes / for his mercy endureth for euer.

*Exo.xiiij. *And made Israel to go thorow the myddest of it / for his mercy endureth for euer.

But as for Pharao and his hoost / he ouer threwe them in the reed see / for his mercy endureth for euer.

*Exo.xv.xvi.xvij. *Which led hys people thorow the wyldernesse / for his mercy endureth for euer.

*Josue.xij.a. *Which smote greate Kynges / for hys mercy endureth for euer.

Yee / and slue myghtye Kynges / for hys mercy endureth for euer.

*Num.xxi.c. *Schon King of the Amorytes / for his
*Deute.iij.a. mercy endureth for euer.

And Og the King of Basan / for his mercy endureth for euer.

And gaue awaye their lande for an heritage / for his mercy endureth for euer.

Euen for an heritage vnto Israel his seruaunt / for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which remembreth vs / when we are in trouble / for his mercy endureth for euer.

*Psal.cxlv.d. *Which geueth fode vnto all flesh / for his mercy endureth for euer.

O geue thankes vnto ỹ God of heauē / for his mercy endureth for euer.

¶ The.cxxxvij Psalme.

¶ The Babylonyans requyred of Israel songes / but they perpetually bewayled the destruccio of Jerusalē.

BY the waters of Babylon we sat downe & weapte / when we remembred Syon.

As for oure harpes / we hanged them by vpon the trees / that are therin.

Then they that led vs awaye captyue / requyred of vs a songe and melody in oure heuynes: synge vs one of the songes of Sion.

How shall we synge the Lordes songe in a straunge lande?

IF I forget the / O Jerusalē / let my right hande be forgotten.

If I do not remembre the / let my tonge cleue to the rofe of my mouth: yee yf I preferre not Jerusalem in my myrth.

Remembre ỹ chyldrē of Edom / O Lord / in the daye of Jerusalem / how they sayde: downe with it / downe with it: euē to ỹ ground.

a* Daughter of Babylon for cyrye & people of Babylon. *O daughter of Babylō, thou shalt come to mysery thy selfe: yee / happye shall he be, that rewardeth the as thou hast serued vs.

*Blessed shall he be, that taketh thy chyldren / and throweth thē against the stones. *Esaiæ.xiij.c.

¶ The.cxxxviij.Psalme.

¶ He praiseth the goodnes of God towarde hym / which hath delyuered hym forth of all Jeopardyes / & promoted hym vnto the dygnitie of a kynge.

Of Dauid.

I Will geue thankes vnto ỹ / O Lord / wyth my whole herte / euen before the Goddes / will I synge prayses vnto the.

I will worshyppe towarde thy holy temple / & prayse thy name / because of thy louīg kyndnesse & trueth / for thou hast magnyfyed thy worde / according vnto thy greate name.

When I call vpon the / thou hearest me / & endewest my soule with moche strength.

All the Kynges of the earth shall prayse the, O Lorde / when they heare the wordes of thy mouth.

Yee they shall synge in the ways of the Lorde, that greate is the glorye of the Lorde.

B For though the Lorde be hye / yet hath he respecte vnto the lowly: as for the proude, he beholdeth hym a farre of.

Though I walke in ỹ myddest of trouble / yet shalt thou refresh me: thou shalt stretche forth thyne hād vpō the furyousnes of myne enemyes, & thy right hāde shall saue me.

The Lord shall make good for me / yee thy mercy, O Lorde, endureth for euer: despyse not then the worcke of thyne awne handes.

¶ The.cxxxix. Psalme.

¶ He sheweth that all thinges are euident & open vnto God which made hym: and that he is euery where / and seyth all thynges.

*To the chaunter / a Psalme of Dauid. *Luke the xxiij. of the.xix. Psalme.

O Lorde / thou searchest me out / and knowest me.

Thou knowest my downe syttinge & myne vprysynge / thou vnderstandest my thoughtes a farre of.

Thou art aboute my path & aboute my bedd / & spyest out all my wayes.

For lo / there is not a worde in my tonge, but thou / O Lorde knowest it altogether.

Thou hast fashyoned me behynde and before / and layed thyne hande vpon me.

Soche knowledge is to wonderfull and excellent for me / I can not atteyne vnto it.

B Whither shall I go then from thy spyrite? or / whyther shall I go then frō thy presence?

If

If I clyme vp into heauē/thou art there: yf I go downe to hell/thou art there also.

If I take the wynges of the morynge/ & remayne in the vttermoſt parte of the ſee:

Euen there also ſhall thy hande leade me/ and thy ryght hande ſhall holde me.

If I ſaye: peraduenture the darckneſſe ſhall couer me/then ſhall my nyght be turned to daye.

Yee the darckneſſe is no darckneſſe wyth the/but the nyght is as cleare as the daye/ ỹ darckneſſe and lyght are both alyke.

For my reynes are thyne/thou haſt couered me in my mothers wombe.

I wyll geue thankes vnto the/ for I am wonderouſly made: maruelous are thy worckes/ & that my ſoule knoweth right well.

My bones are not hyd from the/ though I be made ſecretely/and faſhyoned benethe in the earth.

Thyne eyes ſe myne vnperfectneſſe/ they ſtande all wrytte̅ in thy booke: my dayes were faſhyoned/ when as yet there was not one of them.

How deare are thy councels vnto me O God: O how greate is the ſumme of them?

If I tell the̅/they are mo in nombre then the ſande: when I wake vp/ I am preſent with the.

Wylt thou not ſlaye ỹ wycked (Oh God) ỹ the bloudy perſone myghte departe from me?

For they ſpeake vnright of the, thyne enemyes exalte themſelues preſumptuouſly.

I hate them O Lorde/ that hate the: and am not awaye wyth thoſe that ryſe vp agaynſt the?

Yee I hate them right ſore/ therfore are they myne enemyes.

Trye me/O God/and ſeke the grounde of myne hert: proue me/examen my thoughtes.

Loke well yf there be any waye of wyckednes in me/ b* and leade me in the waye euerlaſtynge.

b* Some reade: then leade me by the waye of the worlde/ that is/deſtroy me.

¶ The cxl Pſalme.

The deſyreth to be deliuered from the dyſceates & lyes of Doeg/ and his companyons.

a* To the chaunter/ a Pſalme of Dauid.

DElyuer me/O Lorde, frō the cruell mā/ Oh preſerue me frō the wycked men.

Which ymagin myſchefe in their hertes, and ſtere vp ſtryfe all the daye longe.

They ſharpen their tonges lyke a ſerpēt: adders poiſon is vnder their lippes. Selah.

Kepe me/O Lorde/ from the hande of the vngodly: preſerue me from the wycked men, which are purpoſed to ouerthrowe my goinges.

B The proude haue layed a ſnare for me/ & ſpred a net abroade wyth coardes/ yee and ſet trappes in my waye. b* Selah. b* Loke the Pſalme. xij. a.

But my ſaynge is vnto the Lorde: thou art my God/ heare the voyce of my prayer O Lorde.

O Lorde God, thou ſtrēgth of my health/ thou haſt couered my heade in the daye of battayle.

Let not the vngodly haue hys deſyre/ O Lord/let him not haue his purpoſe/leſt they be to proude. Selah.

Let the myſchefe of their owne lippes fall vpon the head of the̅/that cōpaſe me about.

Let hote burnyng c* coales fall vpō the̅/ let them be caſt into the fyre, & into the pyt/ that they neuer ryſe vp agayne. c* Coales: her of is ſayde in the Pſal. xviij. b

A man full of wordes ſhall not proſpere vpon the earth: a malycyous & wycked perſon ſhalbe hunted awaye/and deſtroyed.

Sure I am/that the Lorde wyll auenge the poore/ and mayntayne the cauſe of the helpleſſe.

The righteous alſo ſhall geue thankes vnto thy name/ and the iuſt ſhall contynue in thy ſyght.

¶ The cxli Pſalme.

¶ Fyrſt he prayeth for the ſpirite wherwith he maye preferre the ſharpe frendſhyp of the ſayntes before the proſperitie of the wycked: and after that/for worthye auengement of his enemyes & for his deliuerance.

A Pſalme of Dauid.

LOrde, I call vpō the: haſte the vnto me/ and conſider my voyce, when I crye vnto the.

Let my prayer be ſet forth in thy ſyght as the incenſe, & let the lifting vp of my handes be an euenynge ſacryfyce.

Set a watch/O Lorde, before my mouth/ yee a watch at the doore of my lyppes.

O let not myne herte be enclyned to any euell thynge, to be mynded as the vngodly or wicked men, leſt I eate of ſuche thynges as pleaſe them.

Let the righteous rather ſmite me friendly/ & reproue me: ſo will I take it, as though he had poured oyle vpō my head: it ſhall not hurt my heade/yee I wyll praye yet for their wyckednes.

Their iudges ſtomble at the ſtone/ yet heare they my wordes/that they be ioyfull.

Our bones lye ſcatered before the pyt/ lyke as when one graueth and dyggeth vp the grounde.

But myne eyes loke vnto the/ O Lorde God: in the is my truſt/ Oh caſt not out my ſoule.

Kepe me from the ſnare which they haue layed for me/and frō the trappes of the wycked doers.

Let the vngodly fall into their owne nettes to gether/vntyll I be gone by them.

¶ The. cxlij. Pſalme.

¶ She sheweth how he prayed vnto the Lorde when he stode frō Saul into the caue/ & thought that he shulde there haue bene taken.

The instruccyon of Dauid/ a prayer when he was in the caue.

I a* Crye vnto the Lorde with my voyce/ yee euen vnto the Lorde do I make my supplycacyon.

a* Of this ye haue in ỳ Pſal. xv. Ecc. xviij. 3. Reg. xvij.

I poure out my complaynte before hym/ and shewe hym of my trouble.

When my spyrite is in heuynesse/ for thou knowest my path: in ỳ waye wherin I walke haue they preuely layed a snare for me.

I loke vpon my right hande/ & se/ there is no man that wyll know me.

I haue no place to flie vnto/ no mā careth for my soule.

Therfore do I crye vnto the/ O Lorde/ & saye: thou art my hope and my porcion in the b* lande of the lyuynge.

b* Here it is manyfest, that the lande of the lyuynge signifieth the estate of the sayntes and Chyldren/ which yet remayne in thys lyfe/ as aboue in the Pſalme xxvij.

Considre my cōplaynte, for I am brought very lowe.

O delyuer me fro my persecuters, for they are to stronge for me.

Bryng my soule out of prison/ that I may geue thanckes vnto thy name: whych thynge yf thou wylt graunte me/ then shall the ryghteous resorte vnto my company.

Heare my prayer, O Lorde/ consydre my desyre: answere me for thy treuth & ryghteousnesse sake.

A Pſalme. cij. a.

And entre not into iudgement wyth thy seruaunt/ for in thy syght shall no man lyuynge be iustyfyed.

For the enemye persecuteth my soule/ he smyteth my lyfe downe to the grounde/ he layeth me in the darcknesse, as the dead men of the worlde.

Therfore is my spyrite vexed within me/ & my herte within me is desolate.

B Yet do I remembre ỳ tymes past/ I muse vpon all thy worckes, yee I exercyse my selfe in the worckes of thy handes.

I stretche forth myne handes vnto the/ my soule cryeth vnto the out of the thyrstye lande. Selah.

Heare me, O Lorde/ & that soone/ for my spyrite wareth faynte: hyde not thy face fro me/ lest I be lyke vnto them that go downe into the graue.

O let me heare thy louynge kyndnesse by tymes in the a* morning, for in ỳs my trust: shewe thou me the waye that I shulde walke in/ for I lyft vp my soule vnto the.

a* O* this loke the Pſal. xcij.

Delyuer me, O Lorde, fro myne enemyes/ for I resorte vnto the.

Teache me to do the thynge that pleaseth ỳ/ for thou art my God: let thy louing spyrite leade me forth vnto ỳ lāde of ryghteousnes.

Quycke̅ me/ O Lorde/ for thy names sake/ and for thy ryghteousnesse sake bryng my soule out of trouble.

And of thy goodnesse scater myne enemyes abroade/ & destroye all them that vexe my soule, for I am thy seruaunt.

¶ The. cxliiij. Pſalme.

¶ He prayseth and thancketh God/ because he had delyuered hym from all Jeopardyes and pursuynge of his enemyes/ and promoted hym to be a kyng/ and also made his kyngdome to florysh with abundaunce of all thynges.

Of Dauid.

Blessed be the Lorde my refuge/ whych teacheth my handes to warre/ and my fyngers to fyght.

the byrdes eyes. Yee they them selues lye wayte one for another bloud, & one of them wolde slye another. These are the wayes of all suche as be couetous, that one wolde rayse another his lyfe.

Wysdome cryeth without, & putteth forth her voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacyō in the opē gates, & sheweth her wordes thorow the cytye, sayinge: O ye chyldren, how longe wyll ye loue chyldysshnesse: how long wyll the f* scorners delite in scornynge, and the vnwyse be enemyes vnto knowledge: O turne you vnto my correccyō: lo I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes. * Seing then ỹ I haue called, & ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande, & no man regarded it, but all my councels haue ye despysed and set my correcyōs at naught. Therfore shall I also laugh in youre destruccyō, and mocke you/ when the thinge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thynge that ye be afrayed of, falleth in sodenly lyke a storme/ & your mysery lyke a tēpest: yee whē trouble & heynesse commeth vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shall seke me early/ but they shal not finde me: Inasmuch because they hated knowledg/ & receaued not the feare of ỹ Lozd, but abhorred my councell, & despised my correccyō. Therfore shall they eate ỹ frutes of their awne waye/ & be fylled with their awne councels: for the turnyng away of ỹ vnwyse shal slaye thē, & ỹ prosperite of fooles shalbe their awne destruccyō. But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwel safely, & haue ynough without any feare of euell.

Wysdome is to be embraced & set by. And adoulterous woman is to be eschued.

The.ij.Chapter.

MY sonne/yf thou wylt receaue my wordes, & kepe my cōmaundemētes by the/ yͤ thyne eare may herkē vnto wisdome, applie thyne herte then to vnderstandynge. For yf thou cryest after wysdome/ & callest for knowledge: yf thou seekest after her as after money/ & diggest for her as for treasure: then shalt thou vnderstande the feare of yͤ Lord/ & fynde the knowledge of God. For it is the Lorde yͤ geueth wysdome/ out of hys mouth cōmeth knowledge & vnderstandynge. He preserueth yͤ welfare of yͤ righteous/ & defendeth thē that walke innocētly: he kepeth them in the right path/ & preserueth the waye of his saynctes. Then shalt thou vnderstande righteousnesse/ iudgement & equite/ yea & euery good path. If wysdome entre into thyne herte/ & thy soule delyte in knowledge: then shall councell preserue the/ & vnderstanding shall kepe the. That thou mayest be deliuered frō the euell waye/ & frō the man that speaketh frowarde thinges. From suche as leaue yͤ hye strete/ & walcke in the wayes of darcknesse: which reioyce in doinge euell. & delyte in wicked thinges: b whose wayes are croked/ and their pathes sclaunderous.

That thou mayest be deliuered also frō the straunge woman. & frō her that is not thyne awne: which geueth swete wordes/ forsaketh the husband of her youth/ & forgetteth yͤ couenaunt of her God. For her house is enclyned vnto death/ & her pathes vnto hell. All they yͤ go in vnto her/ come not agayne/ nether take they holde of the waye of lyfe. That thou mayest walke in yͤ good waye/ & kepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iust shall c* dwell in the lande & the innocētes shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be roted out of the lande/ and the wycked doers shalbe taken out of it.

a* What is sygnyfyed by nauell ye shall fynde in Ezechi. xvi.a.

b* Whose wayes are croked. &c. that is/ whō their very lyfe proueth to be offenders.

c* Dwell in the lande. The sygnifycacyon hereof is shewed in the psal. xxxvij.c.

The commaundementes of God must be diligently regarded and obserued.

The.iij.Chapter.

MY sonne/ forget not my lawe/ but se that thyne herte kepe my cōmaūdemētes. For they shall prolonge yͤ dayes & yeares of thy lyfe/ & bringe yͤ peace. Let mercy & faythfulnes neuer go frō the: bynde thē about thy necke/ & wryte them in the tables of thyne herte. So shalt thou fynde fauoure & good vnderstandynge in the syght of God & men. Put thy trust in the Lorde w all thyne herte/ and leane not vnto thyne awne vnderstandyng. In all thy wayes haue respecte vnto hym/ & he shall ordre thy goinges. Be not wyse in thyne awne conceate/ but feare the Lord/ & departe from euell: so shall thy *nauell be whole/ & thy bones stronge.

Honoure yͤ Lord w thy substaūce/ & w the fyrstlynges of all thyne encrease: so shall thy barnes be fylled with plenteousnesse/ & thy presses shall flowe ouer w swete wyne. My sonne despyse not yͤ chastenyng of yͤ Lorde/ nether faynte whē thou art rebuked of hym. *For whom the Lorde loueth him he chastneth: & pleseth in him euē as a father in his awne sonne. Well is him yͤ fyndeth wysdome/ & optayneth vnderstandynge/ for the getting of it is better then any marchaūdise of syluer/ & yͤ profet of it is better then golde. Wysdome is more worth then precyous stones/ & all the thinges yͤ thou canst desyre/ are not to be cōpared vnto her. Vpon her right hande is longe lyfe/ & vpō her left hand is riches & honour. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes/ & all her pathes are peaceable. She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her/ and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

With wysdome hath yͤ Lord layed yͤ foūdacyon of the earth & thorow vnderstanding hath he stablyshed the heauēs. Thorow hys wysdome yͤ drapthes breake vp/ & yͤ cloudes droppe downe of the dew. My sonne/ let not these thinges departe frō thyne eyes/ but kepe my lawe & my coūcell: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule/ & grace vnto thy mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye/ & thy fote shall not stomble. If thou slepest/ thou shalt not be afrayed, but shalt take thy rest & slepe swetely. Thou nedest not to be afrayed of any sodane feare/ nether for the violent ruschynge in of the vngodly/ whenne cōmeth. For the Lorde shalbe besyde the/ and kepe thy fote that thou be not taken. Refuse not to do good vnto hym that shulde haue it/ so lōge as thyne hand is able to do it. Saye not vnto thy neyghbour: go thy waye & come agayne/ to morow will I geue the: where as thou hast now to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neyghbour, seing he hopeth to dwell in rest by the. Stryue not lightely with any man/ where as he hath done the no harme. Folowe not a wycked man/ & chose none of his wayes: for yͤ Lorde abhorreth the frowarde/ but hys secrete is amonge the ryghteous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly/ but he blesseth the dwellynges of the righteous. As for the scornefull/ he shall laugh them to scorne/ but he shall geue grace vnto yͤ lowly. The wyse shall haue honour in possessiō/ but shame is the promocyō that fooles shall haue.

Wysdome and her frutes and wayes ought to be searched.

The.iiij.Chapter.

Heare

HEare/O ye chyldren/ the fatherly exhortacyō, & take goodhede, that ye maye lerne wysdome Yee I shal geue you a good rewarde / yf ye wyll not forsake my lawe. For whē I my selfe was my fathers deare sonne/ & tenderly beloued of my mother, he taught me also/ sayinge: Let thyne herte receaue my wordes/ kepe my commaundementes & thou shalt lyue. Get the wysdome get the vnderstādynge forget not ne wordes of my mouth & turnyke not from them. Forsake her not & she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the. The chefe poynte of wysdome is/ B that thou be wyllynge to optayne wysdome/ and before all thy goodes to gett the vnderstandynge. Make much of her & she shall promote the: Yee yf thou embrace her, she shall bringe the vnto honoure.

She shall make the a gracyous head / & garnysh the a* with a crowne of glory.

a* That is/ with great and syngular honoure as after the.xv.

Heare my sonne & receaue my wordes that the yeares of thy lyfe maye be many. I will shewe the/ the waye of wysdome, & leade the in the ryght pathes. So that yf thou goest therin, there shall no straytenesse hynder the: and when thou runnest/ thou shalt not fall. C Take fast holde of doctryne / let her not go: kepe her/ for she is thy lyfe. Come not in the path of the vngodly/ and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, and go not therin: departe aſyde/ & passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe, except they haue first done some myschefe: nether take they any rest/ except they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the bred of wyckednesse / and dryncke the wyne of robbery. The path of the ryghteous shyneth as the lyght / and is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfecte D daye But the waye of the vngodly is as the darcknes, wherin mē fall, or they be awarre.

b* Wyth ryght hand is vnderstande the false & wycked confidence in workes & by ſ left, desperacyō. To turne aſyde or bowe to ſ right hand is to adde that to the worde of god which God neuer cōmaunded. To turne aſyde or bowe to the left hande is to take awaye frō the worde of God/ or to do that which is forbidde. As it is written in Deuter. xxviij.b. & Josue.xxiij.b.

My sonne, marcke my wordes & encline thyne eare vnto my sayinges. Let thē not departe from thyne eyes, kepe thē euen in ſ myddest of thyne herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them & health vnto all their bodyes. Kepe thyne herte with all dilygēce, for there vpon hangeth lyfe. Put awaye from the a frowarde mouth and let ſ lyppes of sclaunder be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge that is ryght / & let thyne eye lidde loke strayght before ſ. Ponder the path of thy fete / so shall all thy wayes be sure. Turne not aſyde, nether to the b* ryght hand ner to ſ left, but withhold thy fote from euell.

C She warneth to eschue & flee whordome, he forbydeth prodigalitye & wastfull spendyng. He wylleth vs to lyue of oure awne laboures. Men must loue their wyues.

C The.v. Chapter.

MY sonne, ye thou be fierye for thy neyghboure / thou hast fastened thyne hand with another man: yee thou art bounde with thyne awne wordes, & taken with thyne awne speache. Therfore / my sonne, do thys: dyscharge thy selfe, for thou art come into thy neyghbours daunger. Goo thy waye then soone/ & intreate thy neyghbour: let not thine eyes slepe

MY sonne / geue hede vnto my wysdome, & bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayest regarde good cōcell, & ſ thy lyppes may kepe nourtoure. For the lyppes of an harlot are a droppyng hony combe, & her throte is softer then oyle. But at ſ last she is as bytter as worm wod, & as sharpe as a two edged swerde. Her fete go downe vnto death, & her steppes pearse thorow vnto hell. She regardeth not ſ path of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wayes, that thou cāst not knōw B them. Heare me therfore, O my sonne and departe not from the wordes of my mouth. Kepe thy waye farre frō her, & come not nye the dores of her house. That thou geue not a* thyne honour vnto another, & thy yeares to the cruell. That other men be not filled with thy goodes / & that thy labours come not in a straūge house. Yee ſ thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spēt thy body and goodes) & then saye: Alas / why hated I nourtoure: why dyd my herte despyse correccyon: Wherfore was not I obediēt vnto ſ C voyce of my teachers / & herkened not vnto thē that informed me: I am come almost into all myssfortune / in the middest of ſ multytude & congregacō. b* Drincke of ſ water of thyne awne well, & of ſ ryuers ſ rūne out of thyne awne spring. c* Let thy welles flowe out abrode that there may be ryuers of water in the streetes: but let them be on ſ thyne awne and not straungers with the.

a* That is/ thy substance.

b* That is/ holde thy self to thyne awne wyfe.

c* That is/ let thy children come out of thy house with honour & not as bastardes. D

Let thy well be blessed & be glad with the wyfe of thy youth. Louynge is the hynde & frendly is the Roo: let her breastes alwaye satisfye the / & holde the euer contēt with her loue. My sonne/ why wylt thou haue pleasure in an harlot/ & embrace the bosome of another woman: *For euery mās wayes are open in the syght of the Lorde/ & he ponderyth all their gouinges. The wyckednesses of the vngodly shall catch hym selfe/ & wyth ſ snares of his awne synnes shal he be trapped. Because he wolde not be reformed/ he shall dye: and for his greate folyshnesse he shalbe destroyed.

*Iob.xxxiiij.& xxxvij.c.

C The slouthfull & slougysh is pyrched and fyred to worche. The scripture is reproued. Adultery ought to be earnestly auoyded.

C The.vj. Chapter.

¶ God ought to be feared and honoured: Hys commaundementes ought to be kept: Wanton appetytes and desyres ought to be shonned.

ner thyne eye lyddes slomber. Saue thy selfe as a doo frō the hande/ & as a byrde frō the hande of the fouler. Go to the Emmet (thou slogard) consyder her wayes, & lerne to be wyse. She hath no gyde/no teacher no leder: yet in the Sommer she prouydeth her meate/ & gathereth her fode together in the harueste.* How longe wilt thou slepe/thou slogysh man? When wylt thou aryse out of thy slepe? Yee slepe on styll a lytle / slomber a lytle/ folde thyne handes to gether yet a lytle/ & thou mayest slepe: so shal pouerte come vnto the as one yt trauayleth by the waye/ & necessite like a weapened mā. A dyssembling person/ a wycked man goeth wt a frowarde mouth/ he wynketh wt his eyes/ he tokeneth wt his fete/ he poynteth wt his fyngers he is euer ymagenynge myschefe & frowardnesse in his herte/ & causeth discorde. Therfore shal his destruccion come haskely vpō him/ sodēly shall he be all to broken/ & not be healed.

* Prouerb. xxiiij.d.

There be sixe thinges which the Lorde hateth/ and the seuenth he vtterly abhorreth: A proude loke; a dyssemblyng tonge/ handes yt shede innocēt bloude, an herte yt goeth about wt wycked ymagymacyōs/ fete that be swyft in rennynge to do myschefe, a false wytnesse that bryngeth vp lyes/ & soch one as sowyth dyscorde amōge brethre. My sonne/ kepe thy fathers cōmaundementes/ & forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put thē vp together in thyne herte/ & bynde thē aboute thy neck. That they may leade the where thou goest/ preserue the when thou art a slepe/ & yt when thou awakest/ thou mayest talke of thē. For the commaundement is a lanterne / and the lawe a lyght: yee chastenyng & nourtoure is the waye of lyfe: that they may kepe the frō the euell woman/ & frō the flatteryng tonge of the harlot: yt thou lust not after her beuty in thyne hert/ & lest thou be take wt her fayre lokes. An harlot will make a man to begg his bred/ but a maried womā wyll hunt for ye precyous lyfe. Maye a man take fyre in his bosome/ & his clothes not be brēt? Or cā one go vpō hoate coales/ & his fete not be hurte? Euen so whosoeuer goeth in to hys neyghbours wyfe/ & toucheth her can not be vngilty. Men do not vtterly despise a theefe/ that stealeth to satisfye his soule/ when he is hongry: but yf he may be gottē/ he restoreth agayne seuentymes as moche/ or els he maketh recōpense with all ye good of his house. But who so cōmitteth aduoutry with a woman/ he is a foole/ & bringeth his lyfe to destruccyon. He getteth him selfe also shame & dishonour/ soch as shal neuer be put out. For ye gelousy & wrath of ye mā will not be intreated/ no though thou woldest offre him greate giftes to make amēdes/ he wil not receaue thē.

¶ The.viij. Chapter.

My sonne / kepe my wordes/ & laye vp my commaundemētes by the. Kepe my commaundemētes & my lawe/ euē as ye apple of thyne eye/ & thou shalt lyue. Bynde thē vpon thy fingers/ & wryte thē in the table of thyne herte. Saye vnto wysdome: thou art my syster/ & call vnderstandynge thy kynswoman: * that she may kepe the frō the straunge woman/ & frō the harlot which geueth swete wordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I loked thorow ye trealesse/ & beheld the simple people: & amōge other yonge folkes I spyed one yonge foole goinge ouer the stretes / by the corner in ye waye toward the harlottes house in the twylight of the euenynge/ when it beganne now to be myght and darcke. * And beholde/ there mett hym a woman in an harlottes apparell (a dysceatfull / wanton & an vnstedfast womā: whose fete coude not abyde in the house/ now is she without / now in the stretes/ & lurketh in euery corner) she caught the yonge man kyssed hym, & was not a shamed sayinge: I hadde a vowe to paye & this daye I perfourme it. Therfore came I forth to mete the/ that I myght seke thy face/ and so I haue founde the. I haue decke my bed with couerynges & clothes of Egypte. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrre/ Aloes/ and Cynamon. Come / lett vs lye together / and take oure pleasure tyll it be daye lyght. For the goodman is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of moneye with him: who can tell when he cōmeth home? Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame hym/ and with her flatterynge lyppes she wanne hym.

* Gene. xix. b.

Immedyatly he folowed her / as it were an oxe led to the slaughter (& lyke as it were to the stockes/ where folkes are punyshed) so longe tyll she had wounded hys lyuer with her dart: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to ye snare/ not knowyng that the parell of this lyfe lyeth ther vpon. Heare me now therfore/ O my sonne) and marcke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thyne herte wandre in her wayes, & be not thou dysceaued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded and cast downe/ yee many a stronge man hath she slayne. Her houses is the waye vnto hell/ where men go downe vnto the chambers of death.

¶ The.viij. Chapter.

Doth

A DOth not wysdome crye? doth not vnderstandig put forth her voyce? Standeth she not in the hye places in the streetes and wayes? doth she not crye before the whole cite, and in the gates where men go out & in? Vnto you (O ye men) sayeth she, whom I call? Vnto you (O ye chyldren of men) lyft I vp my voyce.

B Take hede vnto knowledge O ye ignoraũt/ be wyse in herte O ye fooles. Geue eare, for I wyll speake of greate matters & open my lyppes to tell thynges that be ryght. For my throte shalbe talking of the trueth, & my lyppes abhorre vngodlyneſſe. All ỹ wordes of my mouth are rightuous/ there is no frowardneſſe nor falſede therin. They are all playne to soche as wyll vnderſtande/ and ryght to them that fynde knowledge. Receaue my doctrine therfore & not syluer: & my knowledge, more then fyne golde. For wysdome is more worth then precyous stones/ yee all the thyngs that thou canſt deſyre/ are not to be compared vnto it.

C I wysdome haue my dwellyng w knowledge/ & prudent councell is myne awne. With me is the feare of the Lorde / and the eſchuyng of euell. As for pryde/ dyſdayne/ & euell waye/ & a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges/ I vtterly abhorre thẽ. I can geue councell/ & be a gyde: I haue vnderſtãdyng, I haue strẽgth. Thorow me/ kyngs reygne: thorow me/ princes make iuſt lawes. Thorow me/ Lordes beare rule/ & all iudges of ỹ earth execute iudgemẽt. I am louyng vnto thoſe that loue me/ & they that ſeke me early/ ſhall fynde me. Riches and honoure are with me/ yee excellent goodes & ryghteouſnes. My fruite is better then golde and precrous stone/ & myne encreaſe more worth then fyne syluer. I walke in the waye of ryghteouſnes/ & in the strete of iudgement.

That I may sende proſperite to thoſe ỹ loue me/ & to encreaſe their treaſure. *The Lorde him ſelfe had me in poſſeſſyon in ỹ begynnynge of his wayes/ or euer he begamne his worckes aforetyme. I haue bene ordened frõ euerlaſting/ & frõ the begynnyng or euer the earth was made. When I was borne, there were nether depthes nor ſpringes of water. Before the foundacyons of the moũtaynes were layed/ yee before all hylles was I borne. The earth & all that is vpon the earth was not yet made/ no not ỹ groũde itſelf. For when he made the heauens / I was preſent: when he ſett vp the depthes in order: whẽ he hanged the cloudes aboue: whẽ he faſtened the ſpringes of the depe: When he shut the ſee within certayne bowndes/ ỹ the waters ſhuld not go ouer their marckes. When he layed the foundacyõs of the earth I was with him/ ordringe all thinges, delyting dayly/ & reioyſyng all waye before him.

As for the rounde compaſe of his worlde/ I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be amõge the chyldrẽ of men. Therfore herkẽ vnto me/ O ye chyldrẽ/ for blessed are they ỹ kepe my wayes. O geue eare vnto nurture/ be wyſe/ & refuſe it not. Bleſſed is the man that heareth me/ watching dayly at my gates/ & geuing attendaunce at ỹ poſtes of my doores. For who ſo fyndeth me/ fyndeth lyfe/ & ſhall obtayne fauour of ỹ Lord. But who ſo offendeth agaynſt me / hurteth his awne ſoule. All they that hate me/ are the louers of death.

The .ix. Chapter.

Wyſdome moueth all men to embrace her. The proper type of a whore.

WYſdome hath buylded her ſelfe an house, & hewen out ſeuẽ pylers: she hath kylled her vitayles, poured out her wyne, & prepared her table. She hath sent forth her maydẽs to crye vpõ ỹ hyeſt place of ỹ cite: Who ſo is ignoraũt/ let hym come hither. And to the vnwyſe she sayd: O come on youre waye eate my bred, & drincke my wyne / which I haue poured out for you. Forſake ignoraũce/ & ye ſhall lyue: and ſe that ye go in the waye of vnderſtandyng. Who ſo reproueth a ſcornefull perſonne/ getteth hym ſelfe dyſhonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodly / ſtayneth hym ſelfe. Reproue not a *ſcorner, leſt he owe the euell wyll: but rebuke a wyſe man/ & he wyll loue the. Geue a diſcrete man but an occaſiõ, & he wyll be ỹ wiſer/ teache a rightuous man, & he wyll increaſe. The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wyſdome, & the knowledge of holy thinges is vnderſtandynge. For thorow me thy dayes ſhalbe prolõged & the yeares of thy lyfe ſhalbe many. If thou be wyſe thy wyſdome ſhall do thy ſelfe good: but yf thou thincheſt ſcorne therof it ſhalbe thyne awne harme. A foliſh reſtleſſe woman full of wordes & ſoch one as hath no knowledge / ſytteth in ỹ dores of her houſe vpon a ſtoole aboue in the cyte/ to call ſoch as go by/ and walke ſtreyght in their wayes. Who ſo is ignoraũt, (ſayth ſhe) let hym come hyther, and to the vnwyſe ſhe ſayeth: ſtollen waters are ſwete, and ỹ bred that is preuely eaten, hath a good taſte. But they conſyder not that death is there/ & that her geſtes go downe to hell.

b * Scornefull or mocking perſonnes after Dauid ſymbolyſed are thoſe which be ſuttel & crafty to hurte other / and which are craftye to diſſeme other & to open & tell ſecretes/ and ſo to breake concordes & vnitye: And thoſe alſo which make a mocke at the worde of God and deſpyſe it / and that re pute it for folyſhneſſe: as after in the xviij. & xxij. b.

A Wyse sonne maketh a glad father/ but an vnwyse sonne is the he-uynesse of his mother. Treasures that are wyckedly gotten/ profyte no thynge/ but righteousnesse deliuereth frō death. The Lorde wyll not let the soule of the ryghteous suffre honger, but he putteth the vngodly from his desyre. An ydle hand maketh poore, but a quycke labo-ryng hand maketh ryche. Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wyse: but he ꝑ is slougysh in harueste/ bringeth him selfe to confusyon. Louyng and fauorable is the face of the righteous/ but ꝑ forehead of ꝑ vngodly is past shame/ & presumptuous. The memoryall of the iust shall haue a good reporte, but the name of the vngodly shall stycke. A wyse man wyll receaue warnynge, but a foole wyll ner be smyten in the face. He that leadeth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wronge waye shalbe knowne.

 To wynche wyth hys eye/ here is to shew a sygne or token of consentyng whē he thynketh the cōtrarye: as before in the vi.b. and Eccli.xxvj.c.

 He that wynketh wyth his eye, wyll do some harme: but he ꝑ hath a foolysh mouth/ shalbe beaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe, but the mouth of the vngodly is past shame & presumptuous.

Cupyll wyll stereth vp stryfe, * but loue coue-reth the multytude of synnes. In ꝑ lyppes of him that hath vnderstandyng a man shall fynde wysdome, but the rodde belongeth to the backe of the folysh. Wyse men laye vp knowledge, but the mouth of the folysh is nye destruccyō. The riche mans goodes are his stroge holde but powerte oppresseth the poore. The ryghteous laboureth to doo good, but the vngodly vseth his encrease vn-to synne. To take hede vnto ꝑ chastenyng of nurtoure/ is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed/ goeth wronge.

* 1. Pet. iij. b. 1. Cor. xiij. b

Dyssemblyng lyppes kepe hatred secretly/ & he that speaketh any sclaunder, is a foole. Where moche babelyng is/ there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth hys lyppes is wyseste of all. An innocēt tonge is a noble treasure / but the herte of the vngodly is no thynge worth. The lyppes of ꝑ righteous fede a whole multitude, but foles shal dye in their awne foly. The blessyng of the Lorde maketh rich men/ as for carefull trauayle/ it doth nothinge therto. A fole doth wyckedly & maketh but a sporte of it: neuertheles it is wysdome for a man to bewarre of soche.

The thinge that the vngodly are afrayed of, shall come vpon them/ but the righteous shall haue their desyre. The vngodly is lyke a tēpest that passeth ouer, & is no more sene/ but the righteous remayneth sure for euer.

D As vyneger is to the teth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is a slougysh personne to thē that sende him forth. The feare of ꝑ Lorde maketh a long lyfe but ꝑ yeares of the vngodly shalbe shortened. The pacīēt abydyng of the righteous shalbe turned to gladnesse/ but ꝑ hope of the vngodly shall perish. The waye of the Lorde geueth a corage vn-to ꝑ godly/ but it is a feare for wicked doers. The righteous shall neuer be ouerthrowne/ but ꝑ vngodly shal not remayne in the lande. The mouth of ꝑ iust wyll talkyng of wys-dome/ but the tonge of the frowarde shall pe-ryssh. The lyppes of the righteous are oc-cupyed in acceptable thyngs/ but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

The.xj. Chapter.

False balaunce is an abhomyna-cyon vnto the Lorde, but a true weight pleaseth him. Where pryde is/ there is shame also and confu-syon: but where as is lowlynes/ there is wys-dome. The innocent dealynge of the iust shall lede them, but the vnfaythfulnesse of ꝑ despytfers shalbe their awne destruccyon.

* Riches helpe not in the daye of vengeaūce/ but righteousnesse deliuereth from death. The ryghteousnes of the innocēt ordreth his waye/ but the vngodly shall fall in his awne wyckednesse. The ryghteousnesse of the iust shall deliuer them / but the despytfers shalbe taken in their awne vngodlynesse.

* Prouer.x.a Eccli.v.b.

* When an vngodly man dyeth/ hys hope is gone / the confydēce of ryches shall perish. The righteous shalbe deliuered out of trou-ble/ and ꝑ vngodly shall come in his steade. Thorow the mouth of the dyssembler is hys neyghboure destroyed / but thorow know-ledge shall the iust be deliuered. When it goeth well wyth the ryghteous / the cytye is mery: and when the vngodly perysh/ there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth/ ꝑ cytie prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule/ it decayeth. A foole bringeth vp a sclaunder of his neyghbour, but a wyse mā wyll kepe it secrete. A dyssemblyng per-son wyll discouer preuythynges/ but he that is of a faythfull herte/ wyll kepe councell. Where no good councell is there the peo-ple decaye: but where as many are that can geue councell / there is wealth. He that is suerty for a straūger/ hurteth him selfe: but he ꝑ medleth not with suertyshyppe/ is sure. A gracyous womā manteyneth honestie/ as for the myghtye/ they manteyne ryches.

He ꝑ hath a gentle lyberall stomack is mer-cyfull: but who so hurteth his neyghbour is a tyraūt. The labour of ꝑ vngodly prospereth not/ but he that soweth ryghteousnes/ shall receaue a sure rewarde. Like as righteous-nes bringeth lyfe: euē so to cleue vnto euell/ bryngeth death. The Lorde abhorreth a fay-ned hert, but he hath pleasure in them that are vndefiled. It shall not helpe ỹ wicked/ though they laye all their handes together/ but the sede of the ryghteous shalbe preserued. A fayre woma without discrete maners/is like a rig of gold in a swines snoute.

The iust laboure for peace and tranquylyte/but the vngodly for dysquyetnesse.

Some man geueth out hys goodes/& is the rycher/but the nygard (hauing ynough) wyll departe from nothynge/ and yet is euer D in pouertye. He that is lyberall in geuyng/ shall haue plenty: & he that watereth / shall be watered also hym selfe. Who so hoordeth vp his corne/shalbe cursed amonge the people:but blessynge shall lyght vpon his head that selleth it. He ỹ laboureth for honesty fyndeth hys desyre: but who so seketh after mischefe/it shall happē vnto hym. He that trusteth in his ryches shall haue a fall/ but the righteous shall florysh as the grene leaf.

Who so maketh dysquyetnes in his awne house, he shall haue wynde for his heritage/ and the foole shalbe seruaunt to the wyse. The frute of the ryghteous is as the tree of lyfe/a wise man also wynneth mens soules.

The.xij.Chapter.

WHo so loueth wysdome/will be cōtent to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reproued/is a foole. A good man is acceptable vnto ỹ Lorde/but the wycked wyll he condempne. A man can not endure in vngodlynesse / but the rote of the righteous shall not be moued.

a.Crowne for great honour & ryches/as before.xiij.chapter.b. A stedfast woman is a  crowne vnto her husband: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly is a corruptiō in his bones. The thoughtes of the ryghteous are right, but ỹ ymaginaciō of the vngodly are disceatfull. The talkynge of the vngodly is how they maye lye wayte for blonde / but the mouth B of the righteous will deliuer thē. Or euer thou canst turne the aboute/ ỹ vngodly shalbe ouerthrowen: but the house of the ryghteous shall stande. A man shalbe cōmended for hys wysdome/but a fole shalbe despised. A symple man which laboureth & worketh/ is better then one that is gorgyous and wanteth bread. A ryghteous mā regardeth the lyfe of his catell/but the vngodly haue cruel hertes. He that tylleth hys land/ shall haue plētuousnesse of bread: but he that followeth ydlynes/is a very foole.

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after mischefe/but ỹ rote of the ryghteous bringeth forth frute. The wicked falleth into ỹ snare thorow ỹ malyce of his awne mouth/ but ỹ iust shall escape out of parell. Euery man shall enioye good accordynge to the innocency of his mouth/& after the workes of his hāde, shall he be rewarded. Loke what a  foole taketh in hāde/he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse/wyll be counceled. A foole declareth his wrath in all ỹ haste, but a discrete man forgeueth wronge. A iust mā wyll tell ỹ trueth, & shewe the thynge that is right: but a false witnesse disceaueth. A sclaūderous personne pricketh like a sword, but a wise mās tōge is wholsome. A true mouth is euer constant, but a dyssemblynge tonge is soone chaūged. They ỹ ymagyn euell in their mynde wyll dysceaue: but the counceilers of peace shall haue ioye folowing thē. There shall no misfortune happen vnto the iust but the vngodly shalbe filled with misery.

a.Of this peple haue before in the.xv.Chap.b

The Lorde abhorreth dysceatfull lyppes, but they that laboure for trueth please him. He ỹ hath vnderstandyng/can hyde hys wisdome: but an vnpyserece herte telleth out his foolishnesse. A diligēt hāde shall beare rule/ but ỹ ydle shalbe vnder tribute. Heuynesse D discouageth ỹ herte of mā, but a good worde maketh it glad agayne. The righteous is liberall vnto his neyghboure, but ỹ waye of ỹ vngodly wyll dysceaue thē selues. A dysceatfull man shall fynde no vauntage, but he that is content with that he hath/ is more worth then golde. In ỹ waye of righteousnesse there is lyfe/as for any other waye it is the path vnto death.

The.xiij.Chapter.

A wyse sonne wyll receaue hys fathers warnyng but he ỹ is *scornefull/ wyll not heare when he is reproued. A good mā shall enioye the frute of hys mouth/but he ỹ hath a frowarde minde shalbe spoyled. He ỹ kepeth his mouth/kepeth his lyfe: but who so speaketh vnaduised/findeth harme. The slogard wold fayne haue/& cā not get his desyre: but the soule of the dyligent shall haue plenty. ¶ The xiiij. Chapter.

I

Wyse wom̃ vpholdeth her houke/ but a folysh wyfe plucketh it downe. Who so feareth the Lo;de/ walketh in the right path: & regardeth not hym that abhorreth the wayes of ꝑ Lo;de. In the mouth of the foolysh is the boostinge of lo;dshyppe, but the lyppes of ꝑ wyse wyl be warre of soch. Where no* cxẽ are there the crybbe is emptye: but where ꝑ oxẽ laboure there is moch frute. A faythfull wytnesse wyll not dyssemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye. A scornefull body seketh wysdome/ and fyndeth it not: but knowledge is easy to come by/ vnto hym ꝑ wyll vnderstande. Se ꝑ thou medle not with a foole/ & do as though thou haddest no knowledge. The wysdome of hym ꝑ hath vnderstandig is/ to take hede vnto his waye/ but the folysshnesse of ꝑ vnwyse disceaueth. Fooles make but a spo;te of synne/ but there is fauo;able loue amonge the righteous. The herte of hym that hath vnderstandynge wyll nether dyspare for any sorow/ nether be to presumptuous for any soddane ioye.

B The houses of the vngodly shalbe ouerthrowne, but ꝑ tabernacles of ꝑ ryghteous shall flo;ysh. There is a waye which some men thynke to be ryght but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. The herte is so;owfull euẽ in laughter, & the ende of myrth is heuynesse. An vnfaythfull personne shalbe fylled with his awne wayes/ but a good man wyll be warre of soche. An ignoraũt body beleueth all thynges/ but who so hath vnderstãdyng/ loketh well to his goinges. A wyse man feareth/ and departeth from euell/ but a foole goeth on presumptuously. An vnpacyent man dealeth folyshly/ but he that is well aduysed/ doth other wayes. The ignoraũt haue folysshnes in possessyõ/ but the wyse are crowned with knowledge. The euell shall bowe them selues be fo;e the good/ & the vngodly shall wayte at the do;es of the ryghteous. The poo;e is hated euẽ of his awne neyghboures/ but ꝑ ryche hath many frendꝫ.

Who so despyseth hys neyghbour/ doth amysse: but blessed is he that hath pytye of the poo;e. They ꝑ ymagyn wyckednes/ shal be disapoynted: but they that muse vpõ good thinges/ vnto soche shall happen mercy and faythfulnesse. Diligẽt labour bringeth riches/ but where many vayne wo;des are/ truly there is scarcenesse. Ryches are an o;nament vnto the wyse, but the ignoraũce of fooles is very folysshnesse. A faythfull witnesse delyuereth soules, but a lyar disceaueth them. The feare of the Lo;de is a stroge bolde/ for vnto his he wyll be a sure defence.

D The feare of the Lo;de is a well of lyfe/ to auoyde the snares of death. The increase & prosperite of ꝑ comẽs is ꝑ kynges honoure/ but the decaye of the people is the confusion of the Prince. Pacyence is a token of wysdome/ but wrath & hastye displeasure is a token of folysshnesse. A mery herte is the lyfe of the body/ but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones. He that doth a poo;e mã wrong/ blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pytye of the poo;e/ doth honoure vnto God. The vngodly is afrayed of euery parell/ but the ryghteous hath a good hope euẽ in death. Wysdome resteth in ꝑ herte of him that hath vnderstandynge/ & he wyll teache them that are vnlerned. Ryghteousnesse setteth vp the people, but wyckednesse bringeth folke to destruccyon. A discrete seruaũt is a pleasure vnto the Kynge/ but one ꝑ is not honest prouoketh him vnto wrath.

¶ The .xv. Chapter.

Softe answere putteth downe displeasure, but frowarde wo;des prouoke vnto anger. A wyse tõge commendeth knowledge/ & folysh mouth blabbeth out nothynge but folysshnesse. The eyes of the Lo;de loke on euery place/ both vpon the good and badd.

A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe/ but he that abuseth it/ hath a bro;ken mynde. A foole despyseth hys fathers correccyon/ but he that taketh hede when he is repro;ued shall haue the moare vnderstandynge.

B In the house of the righteous are greate ryches, but in ỹ encrease of ỹ vngodly there is myslodze. A wyse mouth poureth oute knowledge, but the herte of the folysh doth not so. The Lozde abhozreth the sacrifyce of the vngodly / but the prayer of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto him. The waye of the vngodly is an abhominacyon vnto ỹ Lozde: but who so foloweth righteousnes / him he loueth. He that forsaketh ỹ right strete / shalbe soze punyshed: and who so hateth correccyon / falleth in to death. The hell wherein payne is knowne vnto the Lozd / how moch moze then the hertes of men?

A scornefull body loueth not one that rebuketh hym / nether wyll he come amonge the wyse. A mery herte maketh a chearfull coũtenaũce / but an vnquyet mynde maketh it heuy. A wyse herte will seke after knowledge / but the mouth of fooles medleth with foolishnesse. All the dayes of the pooze are myserable / but a quyete herte is as a continuall feast. Better is a lytle wt the feare of the Lozde then greate treasure / foz they are not without sozowe. Better is a messe of potage wt loue / then a fatoxe wt euell wyll.

C An angrie man stereth vp strife, but he ỹ is pacient stylleth discozde. The waye of ỹ slouthfull is full of thoznes / but ỹ strete of ỹ righteous is well clensed. A wyse sonne maketh a glad father / but an vndiscrete body shameth his mother. A foole reioyseth in foolish thynges / but a wyse man loketh well to hys awne goinges. Vnadui sed thoughtes shall come to naught / but where as men are that can geue councell / there is stedfastnesse. O how ioyfull a thynge is it / a man to geue a conuenient answere? O how pleasaunt is a wozde spokẽ in due season. The waye of lyfe leadeth vnto heauẽ / that a man shulde beware of hell beneth.

D The Lozde wyll breake downe ỹ house of ỹ proude / but he shall make fast ỹ bozders of the widowe. The Lozde abhozreth the ymaginacions of ỹ wycked / but pure wozdes are pleasaũt vnto him. The couetous mã roteth vp his awne house / but who so hateth rewardes / shall liue. A ryghteous mã museth in hys mynde how to do good / but the mynde of the vngodly ymagyneth / how he maye do harme. The Lozde is farre from the vngodly / but he heareth ỹ prayer of the ryghteous. Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth ỹ herte / so doth a good name fede the bones The eare that harkeneth vnto wholsome warnynge / and enclyneth therto / shall dwell amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his awne soule: but he that submytteth him selfe to correccyon / is wyse.

A Better is the poore ỹ lyueth godly/ then the blasphemer that is but a foole. Where no discrecyon is/ there the soule is not well: & who so is swyfte on fote, stõbleth hastely. Foolishnesse maketh a mã to go out of his waye/ and then is his herte vnpacient agaynst the Lorde. Ryches make many frendes / but the poore is forsaken of his awne frendes. A false wytnesse shall not remayne vnpunished/& he ỹ speaketh lyes shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greate men/& euery man fauoureth him ỹ geueth rewards.

As for the poore / he is hated amonge all hys brethren: yee hys awne frendes forsake him, & he that geueth credẽce vnto wordes/ B getteth nothyng. He ỹ is wyse/loueth his awne soule: & who so hath vnderstandynge/ shall prosper. A false wytnesse shall not remayne vnpunyshed / & he ỹ speaketh lyes shall perysshe. Delicate eate becõmeth not a foole/much more vnsemely is it / a bonde mã to haue the rule of princes. A wyse mã putteth of displeasure/ & it is his honour to lett some fautes passe. The kynges displeasure is lyke ỹ roarynge of a Lyon / but hys frendshipe is lyke ỹ dewe vpõ ỹ grasse. An vndiscrete sonne is ỹ heuynes of his father/ and a braulynge wyfe is lyke ỹ topp of an house/where thorow it is euer droppynge.

☞ House & ryches maye a man haue by ỹ heritage of his elders/ but a discrete womã is ỹ gyfte of the Lord. Slouthfulnes bringeth slepe/& an ydell soule shall suffer honger.

¶ Who so kepeth ỹ cõmaundemẽt, kepeth his awne soule: but he ỹ regardeth not his waye/ shall dye. He ỹ hath pitie vpõ ỹ poore/ lendeth vnto ỹ Lord: & loke what he layeth out/ it shalbe payed hym agayne. Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope / but lett not thy soule be moued to slaye hym. For greate wrath bringeth harme/therfore let him go/& so mayest thou teach him more nurture.

O geue eare vnto good cõcell / & be cõtent to be refourmed/ ỹ thou mayest be wyse here ☞ after. There are many deuyces in a mans herte/neuertheles ỹ cõcell of the Lord shall stande. It is a mans worshipe to do good/& better it is to be a poore man/ then a dyssembler. The feare of ỹ Lorde preserueth ỹ life/ yee it geueth plenteousnes/without ỹ visytacyõ of any plage. A slouthfull body shuteth hys hande in to hys bosome / so ỹ he can not put it to his mouth. * If thou smytest a scornefull personne/ ỹ ignorãt shall take better hede: & yf thou reprouest one ỹ hath vnderstandyng he will be ỹ wyser. He ỹ hurteth hys father or shuteth out hys mother / is a shamefull & an vnworthy sonne. My sonne/ heare nomore the doctryne that leadeth the awaye from the wordes of vnderstandynge.

A false witnes laugheth mdgnãt to scorne/& ỹ mouth of the vngodly eateth vp wickednes. Punishmentes are ordened for the scornefull/and strypes for fooles backes.

* Prou.xxi. b a. Of this is spoke in the xpenth Chapter.b

¶The.xx.Chapter.

Wine is a voluptuous thynge/ and dronckennes causeth sedicion: who so delyteth therin / shall neuer be wyse. The kyng ought to be feared as the roarynge of a lyon/who so prouoketh him vnto anger / offendeth agaynst hys awne soule. It is a mãs honoure to kepe him selfe frõ stryfe, but they ỹ haue pleasure in brauling/are fooles euery one. A slouthfull body will not go to plowe for cold/therfore shall he go abeggyng in Sommer/and haue nothyng. Wyse councell in ỹ herte of mã is lyke a water in ỹ depe of ỹ earth/ but he ỹ hath vnderstandyng/bryngeth it forth. Many there be ỹ are called good doers/ but where shall one fynde a true faythfull mã? Who so ledeth a godly and an innocent lyfe happie shall his chyldre be whom he leaueth behynde hym. A kynge ỹ sytteth in iudgment / and loketh well aboute hym/dryueth awaye all euell. *Who can saye: my herte is cleane/I am innocẽt frõ synne? To vse two maner of weyghtes / or two maner of measures/both these are abhominable vnto the Lorde. A chylde is knowne by his conuersacyon / whether hys workes be pure & ryght. As for the hearynge of the eare & ỹ syght of ỹ eye/the Lord hath made thẽ both.

* 1.John.i.b. 10.Reg viii.c. ii. Para. vi. & Eccle.xv.c.

Delyte not thou in slepe / lest thou come vnto pouerte: but open thyne eyes, and thou shalt haue bred ynough. It is naught / It is naught(saye men)when they haue it/ but when it is gone/they geue it a good worde.

A mouth of vnderstãdyng is more worth then golde/many precious stones / & costly Jewels. Take his garmẽt that is suerty for a straunger/& take a pledge of him for ỹ vnknowne mans sake. Euery mã liketh ỹ bred that is gotten with disceate/ but at the last his mouth shalbe fylled with grauell.

Thorow councell the thynges that men dewyse deuyse go forwarde: & with discrecion ought warres to be taken in hande. Medle not with him that bewrayeth secretes / and is a sclaunderer/and discreaueth with his lippes. Who so curseth hys father and mother / hys light shalbe put out in the myddest of darcknesse. The heritage that cõmeth to hastely at the fyrst / shall not be praysed at ẏ ende.

Saye not thou: I will recompence euell/ but put thy trust in the Lorde / and he shall defende the. The Lord abhorreth two maner of weyghtes/ and a false balaunce is an euell thinge. The Lorde ordreth euery mãs goinges/for what is he / that vnderstandeth his awne wayes? It is a snare for a man to blaspheme that which is holy/and then to go aboute with vowes. A wyse kynge destroyeth the vngodly / & bryngeth the whele ouer thẽ. The lanterne of the Lord is ẏ breth of man/ & goeth thorow all the inwarde partes of the body. Mercy & faithfulnes preserue the kynge/ & with louing kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The strength of yonge men is their worshype/ & a gray head / is an honour vnto ẏ aged. Wound̄s dryue awaye euell / and so do strypes the inwarde partes of the body.

The xvi. Chapter.

The kynges herte is in the hande of the Lord, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither so euer he will. Euery mã thinketh his awne waye to be ryght, but ẏ Lorde iudgeth the hertes. To do righteousnesse and iudgmẽt is more acceptable to ẏ Lorde then sacrifyce. A presumptuous loke a proude stomacke / & the lanterne of the vngodly is synne. The deuyces of one ẏ is dyligent/ bringe plenteousnes: but he ẏ is vnadui sed/ cõmeth vnto pouerte. Who so hoordeth vp ryches vi the discreatfulnes of his tõge, he is a foole/ & lyke vnto thẽ that seke their awne death. The robberies of the vngodly shalbe their awne destrucciõ, for they wolde not do the thynge ẏ was ryght. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge, but the workes of him ẏ is cleane, are ryght. *It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe/ then vi a braulynge woma̅ in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodly wysheth euell/ and hath no pitye vpon his neyghboure.

*When the scornefull is punyshed the ignorant take the better hede: and when a wyse man is warned/he will receaue the more vnderstandyng. The righteous consyderneth the house of the vngodly/ but ẏ vngodly goo on styll after their awne wickednesse. Who so stoppeth his eare at ẏ crienge of ẏ poore/ he shall crye him selfe and not be herde. A preuy rewarde pacifyeth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bosome stylleth furiousnesse.

The iust deliteth in doynge the thynge ẏ is ryght / but the workers of wyckednesse abhorre the same. The man that wãdreth out of the waye of wysdome / shall remayne in the cõgregacion of the dead. *He ẏ hath pleasure in banckettes, shall be a poore mã: Who so deliteth in wyne and delicates, shall not be ryche. The vngodly shalbe geuen for the ryghteous, & the wicked for the iust.

*It is better to dwell in a wyldernesse, then with a chydinge and an angry woman. In a wyse mans house there is greate treasure and plenteousnesse/ but a foolysh body spendeth vp all. Who so foloweth righteousnesse & mercy, fyndeth both lyfe/ righteousnesse & honour. A wyse man wynneth the cytie of the mightie/ & as for the strẽgth that they trust in, he bringeth it downe. Who so kepeth his mouth and his tõge / the same kepeth hys soule from troubles. He that is proude & presumptuous, is called a scornefull mã, which in wrath darre worcke maliciously. The voluptuousnesse of the slouthfull is his awne death / for hys handes wyll not labour. He coueteth & desyreth all ẏ daye longe / but the righteous is alwaye geuynge & kepeth nothing backe. *The sacrifyce of the vngodly is abhominaciõ for they offre the thynge ẏ is gotten wyth wyckednes. A false witnesse shall perishe, but he ẏ wyll be content to heare, shall alwaye haue power to speake him selfe. An vngodly mã goeth forth rashly/ but the iust reformeth his awne waye. *There is no wysdome/ there is no vnderstandynge, there is no counsell agaynst the Lorde. The horse is prepared agaynst the daye of battayll / but the Lorde geueth the victory.

The.xvij. Chapter.

*Good name is more worthy then greate ryches/ & louynge fauoure is better then syluer and golde.

Whether ryches or pouerte do mete vs, it cõmeth all of God. A wyse mã seyth the plage & hydeth him selfe/ but ẏ foolysh go on styll & are punyshed. The ende of lowlynes & ẏ feare of God / is ryches, honour / prosperyte & health. Sneares & snares are in ẏ waye of the frowarde / but he ẏ wyll kepe his soule/ let him fle from soch. If thou teachest a child in his youth what waye he shulde go/ he shall not leaue it when he is olde. The ryche ruleth ẏ poore/ & ẏ borower is seruaũt to the lender. He that soweth wyckednesse shall reape sorowe/ & the rodde of his plage shall destroye him. *A louyng eye shalbe blessed for he geueth of brs bred vnto ẏ poore. Cast out ẏ scornefull mã/ & so shall stryfe go out wi hym, yee barattice & sclaunder sclaunder shall cease. ¶Who so delyteth to be of a cleane herte and of gracious lyppes/the kyng shall be his frende. The eyes of ỹ Lord preserue knowledge/but as for ỹ wordes of ỹ despytefull/he bringeth thē to naught. The slouthfull body sayeth: there is a lyon without/I myght be slayne in the strete. The mouth of an harlot is a depe pytt/wherin he falleth ỹ the Lorde is angrie with all. Foolishnes sticketh in ỹ herte of the lad/but the rod of correction dryueth it awaye. ¶Who so doth a poore mā wrōge to increase his awne ryches/geueth (cōmenly) vnto the ryche/& at the last cōmeth to pouerte him selfe. My sonne/bowe downe thyne eare/& herkē vnto the wordes of wysdome/& applye thy mynde vnto my doctryne: for it is a pleasaunt thyng yf thou kepe it in thine herte/& practyse it in thy mouth: that thou mayest alwaye put thy trust in the Lorde. Haue not I warned the bery oft̄ w̄ counceil & learnynge: ỹ I myght shewe the treuth & that thou myght the bertter answere them ỹ saye eny thynge agaynst the? ¶Se ỹ thou robbe not ỹ poore because he is weake/& oppresse not ỹ symple in iudgment: for the Lorde him selfe wyll defende their cause/& do violence vnto them that haue vsed violence. Make no frendshipe with an angrye wylfull mā/& kepe no cōpany w̄ the furious: lest thou learne hys wayes/& receaue hurte vnto thy soule. Be not thou one of thē ỹ bynde their hande vpon promyse/and are suertye for dett: for yf thou hast nothing to paye/they shall take awaye thy bed from vnder the. Thou shalt not remoue ỹ lande marcke/which thy fore elders haue sett. Seyst thou not/ỹ they whych be dylygent in their busynes stande before kynges/& not amonge the symple people?

WHen thou sytte st at ỹ table to eate w̄ a lorde/ordre thy selfe manerly w̄ the thynges ỹ are set before the. ¶Measure thyne appetyte: and yf thou wylt rule thyne awne selfe/be not ouer gredy of his meate/for meate begyleth and disceaueth. Take not ouer greate trauayle & labour to be ryche/bewarte of soch a purpose. Why wylt thou set thyne eye vpon the thinge/which sodēly vanisheth awaye? For ryches make them selues wynges. & *take their flyght lyke an Aegle into ỹ ayre. Eate not thou with the enuyous/& desyre not his meate/for he hath a maruelous herte. He sayeth vnto the: eate & drincke· where as his herte is not w̄ the. Yee ỹ morsels ỹ thou hast eatē shalt thou perdraake/& lese those swete wordes. Tell nothynge into the eares of a foole/for he wyll despyse the wysdome of thy wordes. Remoue not the olde lāde marke/ & come not within the felde of ỹ fatherlesse: For he ỹ delyuereth thē is myghtie/euen he shall defende their cause agaynst the. Apply thyne herte vnto learnyng/& thyne eare to ỹ wordes of knowledge. *¶Withholde not correctiō frō ỹ childe/for yf thou beatest him with ỹ rodde/he shall not dye therof. Thou smytest him w̄ the rodde/but thou deliueretest his soule from hell. My sonne/yf thy herte receaue wysdome/my herte also shall reioyce: yee my reynes shalbe very glad/yf thy lyppes speke the thynge ỹ is ryght. *Let not thyne herte be gelous to folowe synners/but kepe the styll in the feare of the Lord all ỹ daye longe: for the ende is not yet come & thy pacient abydynge shall not be in vayne.

My sonne/geue eare & be wyse/so shal thyne herte prospere in ỹ waye. Kepe no cōpany w̄ wyne dybbers & ryotous eaters of flesh: for soch as be dronckardes & ryotous shall come to pouerte/& he ỹ is geuē to moch slepe/shall go w̄ a ragged cote. Geue eare vnto thy father ỹ begat the/& despyse not thy mother when she is olde. Labour for to get the treuth: sell not awaye wysdome/nourture & vnderstādyng (for a righteous father is maruelous glad of a wyse sonne/and delyteth in him) so shall thy father be glad/& thy mother ỹ bare the/shall reioyce. My sonne/geue me thyne herte/& lett thyne eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. For an whore is a depe graue/& an harlot is a narow pytt. She lurketh lyke a theefe/& those ỹ be not awarre she bryngeth vnto her. Where is wo? where is sorow? where is strife? where is brauling? where are woundes without cause? where be reed eyes? Euen amonge those that be euer at the wyne/& seke oute where the best is. Loke not thou vpō the wyne/how redde it is/& what a colour it geueth in the glasse.

It goeth downe softly/but at ỹ last it byteth like a serpent/& stynge th as an Adder.

So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straunge wemen/& thyne herte shall muse vpon frowarde thynges. Yee thou shalt be as though thou slepte st in the myddest of ỹ see/or vpō ỹ toppe of the mast. They wounded me (shalt thou saye) but it hath not hurte me/they smote me/but I felt it not. When I am well wakened/I wyll go to the dryncke agayne.

¶The.xxiiij.Chapter.

Be not thou gelous ouer wycked mē/& desyre not thou to be amōg them. For their herte ymagineth to do hurte/& their lyppes talke of myschefe. These also are the a sayinges of Salomon/ which the men of Ezechiah kynge of Juda b* gathered together.

It is the honour of God to kepe a c* thynge secrete/ but the kynges honour is to search out a d* thyng.
The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, & ꝑ kynges herte is e* vnsearcheable.
Take the drosse frō ꝑ syluer, & there shal-be a cleane vessell therof.
Take awaye vngodlynesse frō the kynge/ & his seate shalbe stablished w righteousnes.
Put not forth thy selfe in ꝑ presence of the king, & preace not in to ꝑ place of greate mē.
Better is it ꝑ it be sayde vnto the: come vp hither, then thou to be set downe in the pre-sence of ꝑ prince whō thou seyst with thyne eyes. Be not hastie to go to the lawe, lest happlie thou dryue thy selfe so at ꝑ last, that thy neyghbour put ꝑ to shame. Handle thy matter w thy neyghbour him selfe & discou-er not another mās secrete: lest when men heare therof, it turne to thy dishonesure/ and lest thine euell name do not cease. A worde spokē in due season/ is lyke apples of golde in a syluer dysshe. The correccion of ꝑ wyse is to an obediēt eare/ a goldē cheyne & a Je-well of golde. Lyke as the wynter coole in the haruest/ so is a faythfull messaunger to him that sent him/ & refresheth his masters myndē Who so maketh greate boastes & geueth nothyng/ is lyke cloudes and wynde wout rayne. With pacience maye a prince be pacifyed/ & w a soft tōge maye rygorousnes be brokē. If thou fyndest hony, eate so-moch as is sufficiēt for the: lest thou be ouer full, & perbreake it out againe. Withdraw thy foote frō thy neyghbours house/ lest he be weery of the/ & so abhorre the. ¶ The.xxvi.Chapter.

A Like as snowe is not mete in sommer / nether rayne in haruest: euen so is woꝛshipe vnsemely for a foole.

Lyke as the bryde & the swalowe take their flyght and fle here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne shall not lyght vpon a man. Vnto the hoꝛse belongeth a whyppe to the Asse a brydle / and a rodde to the fooles backe. Geue not ỹ foole an answere after hys foolyshnesse lest thou become lyke vnto him: but make the foole an answere to his foolyshnesse / lest he be wyse in his awne conceate. He is lame of his fete / yee droncken is he in vanyte, that cōmitteth B eny thynge to a foole. Like as it is an vnsemely thynge to haue legges & yet to haite / euen so is a parable in the fooles mouth.

He that setteth a foole in hye dignite, that is euē as yf a mā dyd cast a pꝛecious stone vpō the galous. A parable in a fooles mouth is lyke a thoꝛne that pꝛyckth a dronckē mā in the hande. A man of experience discerneth all thynges well / but whoso hyꝛeth a foole / hyꝛeth soch one as wyll take no hede.

Lyke as the dogg turneth agayne to hys vomyte / euen so a foole begynneth hys foolyshnesse agayne a fresh. Se thou seyest a man that is wyse in his awne cōceate / there is moꝛe hope in a foole then in hym. The slouthfull sayeth: there is a leoparde in the waye, & a lyon in the myddest of the stretes.

Lyke as the doꝛe turneth about vpō the thꝛeshold, euē so doth the slouthfull welter hym selfe in his bedd. *The slouthfull body thꝛusteth hys hande in to hys bosome / and it greueth hym to put it agayne to his mouth.

The slogarde thynketh him selfe wyser, then .vii. men that sytt and teach. Who so goeth by & medleth with other mens stryfe / he is lyke one that taketh a dogg by ỹ eares.

Lyke as one shooteth deadly aꝛowes and dartes out of a pꝛeuy place, euē so doth a dissembler vpon his neyghboure. And then sayth he: I dyd it but in spoꝛte. Where no wodd is there the fyꝛe goeth out: & where the backbyter is taken awaye, there ỹ stryfe ceaseth.

*Coles kyndle heate / & wodd the fyꝛe: euē so doth a bꝛawling felowe stere vp barratrice.

A sclaunderers woꝛdes are lyke flatery / but they pearse ỹ inwarde partes of ỹ body.

Enymous lyppes & a wycked herte, are lyke a potsherde couered with syluer dꝛosse.

An enemye dissembleth with hys lyppes / and in the meane season he ymagineth myscheefe: but whē he speaketh fayꝛe / beleue him not / foꝛ there are seuen abhominacyons in his herte. Who so hꝛepeth euell wyll, secretly to do hurte; his malyce shalbe shewed befoꝛe the whole congregacyon. *Who dyggeth vp a pytt shall fall therin: and he that weltreth a stone / shall stomble vpon it hym selfe. A dyssemblynge tonge hateth one ỹ rebuketh hym / and a flatterynge mouth woꝛcketh myscheefe.

¶ The.xxvij.Chapter.

Take not thy boost of to moꝛowe / foꝛ A thou knowest not what maye happē to daye. Lett another man pꝛayse the / and not thyne awne mouth: yee other folckes lyppes / & not thine.

The stone is heuy / & the sande weyghtye: but a fooles wꝛath is heuyer then they both.

Wꝛath is a cruell thynge / & furiousnesse is a very tempest: yee who is able to abyde enuye? An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue. Faythfull are the wounded of a louer / but the kysses of an enemye are disceatfull. He that is full / abhoꝛreth an hony combe: but vnto hym that is hongrye / euery sower thynge is swete. He that oft tymes flitteth, is like a bryde that forsaketh her nest. The herte is glad of a swete oyntment & sauoure, but a stomacke ỹ can geue good councell / reioyseth a mās neyghboure.

 Hy wounded here vnderstande / chekes rebukes and reproues &c. And by kysses / prayses & flatterynges. &c.

Thyne awne frende & thy fathers frende se thou forsake not but go not in to thy bꝛothers house in tyme of thy trouble.

Better is a frende at hand / then a bꝛother farre of.

My sonne / be wyse / and thou shalt make me a glad herte: so that I shall make answere vnto my rebukers. A wyse man seynge ỹ plage wyll hyde him selfe / as foꝛ fooles they go on still & suffer harme. *Take his garment that is suerty foꝛ a straunger / & take a pledge of him foꝛ the vnknowne mās sake.

* Proue.xx.c.

He that is to hastye to pꝛayse his neyghboure aboue measure / shalbe taken as one that geueth him an euell reporte. A bꝛawlynge woman and the rofe of the house dꝛoppynge in a raynye daye / maye well be compared together.

men haue dyuerse hertes. Lyke as hell & destruccyon are neuer full, euē so the* eyes of men can neuer be satisfyed. Syluer is tryed in the moulde/& golde in the fornace, & so is a mā, when he is openly prayed to his face. Though thou shuldest bray a foole with a pestell in a morter lyke otemeel / yet wyll not his foolysshnesse go frō hym. Se that thou know the nombre of thy catell thy selfe/& loke well to thy flockes. For ryches abyde not alwaye/& the c* crowne endureth not for euer. The hey groweth, the grasse commeth vp/and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shall clothe the/ and for the goates thou shalt haue money to thy husbandry. Thou shalt haue goates mylck ynough to fede ỹ, to vpholde thy housholde, and to sustayne thy maydens.

c* Crowne for honoure & abōdaunce as in .Psal.lxxxix.e.

¶ The.xxvij.Chapter.

THe vngodly flyeth no man chasynge hym, but the rightuous stādeth styll as a lyon. Because of synne the lāde doth oft chaūge her prynce: but thorow men of vnderstandynge and wysdome a realme endureth longe.

 This sight is the feare wherof is spoken in the .xiij. Psalm b. They are afrayed where no feare is at all. Whych thynge chaūseth / when all thinges are done in vnrighte for want of the knowledge of God.

One poore man oppressynge another by violence is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the frute. They that forsake the lawe prayse the vngodly: but such as kepe the lawe, abhorre them. Wycked men discerne not the thynge that is ryght, but they that seke after the Lorde, discusse all thinges.

A poore man iedynge a godly lyfe, is better then ỹ ryche ỹ goeth in frowarde wayes.

B Who so kepeth ỹ lawe, is a chylde of vnderstandynge: but he ỹ fedeth ryotous men / shameth his father. Who so increaseth his ryches by b* vauntage & wynnynge let hym gather them to helpe the poore withall.

b* Some rede: Deceyte and vnmeasurable gaynes/ shall gather them to do almoūse to ỹ poore. That is to saye by hym that shall haue the after hym.

He that turneth awaye his eare frō hearing ỹ lawe his prayer shalbe abhorred. Who so ledeth the rychtuous in to an euell waye/ shall fall in to his awne pytt, but ỹ iust shall haue the good in possession. The rych man thynketh him selfe to be wyse / but ỹ poore that hath vnderstandynge c* / can perceaue him well ynough. When rychtuous men are in prosperite / then doth honoure florysh: but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaūgeth. He that hydeth his synnes/ shall not prosper: but who so knowledgeth them and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy.

c* Some rede: searcheth it. That is to saye to iudge better of his cōdicions & not after ỹ wayes to thinke hym wyse because he is ryche.

¶ Well is him that standeth alwaye in awe: as for hym that hardeneth his herte/he shall fall in to myschefe. Lyke as a roarynge lyon and an hongrye beare / euē so is an vngodly prynce ouer the poore people.

Where the prynce is wythout vnderstandynge/there is greate oppression & wronge: but yf he be such one as hateth couetousnesse/he shall longe raygne. He ỹ by violence sheddeth eny mans bloude / shall be a rennagate vnto his graue/and no man shall be able to succoure him. Who so leadeth a godly & an innocent lyfe / shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes/ shall once haue a fall. * He that tylleth his land/ shall haue plēteousnesse of bread: but he that followeth ydlenesse / shall haue powerte ynough. A faythfull mā is greatly to be cōmended/ but he that maketh to moch haste for to be ryche/ shall not be vngyltie. To haue respecte of persones in iudgmētis not good: And why? he will do wrōge/yee euē for a pece of bread.

* Prou.xxviij.b. Eccli.xx.d.

D He that wyll be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye/and consydereth not/ that powerte shall come vpon him. He that rebuketh a man/ shall fynde more fauour at the last/ then he that flatreth him. Who so robbeth his father and mother / and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a murtherer. He that is of a proude stomacke/ stereth vp stryfe: but he that putteth hys trust in the Lorde/ shalbe well fedd. He that trusteth in his awne herte, is a foole: but he that dealeth wysely / shalbe safe. He that geueth vnto the poore/ shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye hys eyes from soch as be in necessyte / shall suffre greate powerte hym selfe. When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hyde them selues: but whē they perysh/ the rychtuous increase.

¶ The.xxix.Chapter.

HE that is stynecked and wyll not be reformed / shall sodenly be destroyed without eny helpe. Where the rightuous haue the ouer hāde/ the people are in prosperite: but where the vngodly beareth rule, there ỹ people mourne. Who so loueth wysdome, maketh hys father a glad man: * but he that kepeth harlottes/ spendeth awaye that he hath. With true iudgment the kynge setteth vp ỹ lande/ but yf he be a man that taketh gyftes / he turneth it vpsyde downe. Who so flatreth his neyghbour, layeth a nette for his fete. The synne of the wycked is his awne snare/ but the rychtuous shall be glad and reioyse.

* Prou.xxviij.b. Luce.xv.c.

The rychtuous consydereth the cause of ỹ poore / but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge. Wycked people bringe a cite in decaye, but wyse men set it vp agayne.

B If a wyse mā go to lawe with a foole (whether he deale wyth hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest. The bloude thyrstye hate the rychtuous, but the iust* seke his soule.

* Vnderstād/ to deliuer it. Soule is here also taken for Yf thou seyst a man that is hastye to speake vnaduysed/thou mayest trust a foole more then hym. He that delycately bryn-geth vp his seruaunt frō a chyld/ shall make hym his master at length. An angry man steereth vp stryfe / and he that beareth euell wyll in his mynde/ doth moch euell. After pryde commeth a fall/*but a lowely spyrete bringeth greate worshyppe. Who so ke-peth company with a theefe / hateth his awne soule:he heareth blasphemyes / and telleth it not forth. ¶ The Wordes of Agur the sonne of Jaketh.

THe prophecye of a true faythfull man, whom God hath helped/ whō God had cōforted & norysshed. For though I am þ leest of all/ & haue no mās vnderstandynge (for I neuer lerned wysdome) yet haue I vnderstandyng / & am well informed in Godly thynges. Who hath clymmed vp into heauen? Who hath come downe frō thēce? Who hath holdē the wynd fast in his hande? Who hath cōprehended the waters in a garment? Who hath set all the endes of þ worlde? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell? * All þ wordes of God are pure & cleane/ * for he is a shyld vnto all them that put their trust in hym.

* Psal.xix.c. Deute.xij.d.

* Some rea-de/and it is.s c. and in the ende of the verse/in it: meaning the worde.

Put thou nothing therfore vnto his wordes/ lest he reproue the, and thou be foūde a lyar.

Two thynges I requyre of the, that thou wylt not denye me before I dye. Remoue fro me vanyte and lyes:geue me nether pouerte nor ryches/ only graunte me a necessary lyuynge. Lest yf I be to full/ I denye the/and saye: what is the Lorde? And lest I beinge constrayned thorow pouerte, fall vn-to stealynge and forsweare the name of my God. Accuse not a seruaunt vnto his ma-ster/ lest he speake euell of the also, and thou be hurte. He that bringeth vp an euell re-porte vpon the generacion of hys father and mother/is not worthy to be commended.

The generacyon that thynke themselues cleane, shall not be clensed from their fylthy-nesse. There are people that haue a proude loke, and cast vp their eye lydes. This peo-ples teth are swerdes / and with their chafe bones they consume and deuoure the symple of the earth and the poore from amōge men.

This generacyon (whych is lyke an horse-leche) hath two daughters: the one is called/ fetch hither, and the other bryng hither.

There be thre thinges that are neuer sa-tysfyed, and the fourth sayeth neuer hoo. The hell, a womans wombe/ and the earth hath neuer water ynough. As for fyre / it sayeth neuer / hoo. Who so laugheth hys father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaun-dement at naught: the rauens pycke out his eyes in the valleye, and deuoured be he of the yonge Aegles.

There be thre thinges to hye for me/and as for the fourth; it passeth my knowledge. The waye of an Aegle in the ayre / the waye of a serpent ouer a stone/ the waye of a shyp in the see/ and the waye of a man with a yōge woman. Soche is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke / which wypeth her mouth like as when she hath eaten, & sayeth. As for me, I haue done no harme. Thorow thre thinges the earth is dysquieted/ and the fourth may it not beare: Thorow a seruaunt that beareth rule / thorow a foole that hath greate riches, thorow an yll houswyfe, and thorow an handmayden that is heyre to her maysters. There be foure thinges in the earth the whych are very lytle; but in wys-doome they excede the wyse. The Emmettes are but a weake people yet gather they their meate together in the harueste. The Conyes are but a feble folke/ yet make they their cou-ches amonge the rockes. The grashoppers haue not a kynge yet go they forth together by heapes. The spyder laboureth with her han-des; & that in the Kynges palace.

There be thre thinges that go stylly / but the going of the fourth is the godlyest of al. A Lyon which is kyng of beastes & geueth place to no mā: A cocke ready to fight: A rāme and a kyng that goeth forth with his people. Yf thou be so folish to magnifie thyselfe or medle with any soche thinge then laye thyne

¶ The ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

¶ The boke of the Preacher / otherwyse called Ecclesiastes.

¶ All that is in this worlde is vanyte.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

THese are the wordes of the Preacher. ꝑ sonne of Dauid kynge of Ierusalē. * All is but vanyte (sayeth ꝑ preacher) all is but playne vanite. For what eis hath a man / of all the laboure ꝑ he taketh vnder the Sūne? One generation passeth awaye another cōmeth but the earth abydeth styll. The Sōne ariseth, the Sunne goeth downe / and returneth to his place / that he maye there ryse vp agayne. The winde goeth toward ꝑ South / & fetcheth his cōpase aboute vnto ꝑ North / & so turneth in to him selfe agayne. All floudes runne in to the see / & yet the see is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne / thence they come agayne. All thinges are so harde / ꝑ no man can expresse thē. * The eye is not satisfyed w̄ syght / ꝑ eare is not fylled w̄ hearynge. The thing ꝑ hath bene cometh to passe agayne: & ꝑ thing ꝑ hath bene done / is done agayne there is no new thyng vnder the Sunne. Is there eny thynge wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is newe? For it was longe agoo in the tymes ꝑ haue bene before vs. ¶ The thinge that is past, is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thynges that are for to come / shall no more be thought vpō amonge thē that come after. I my selfe the Preacher / beynge Kynge of Israel & Ierusalē, applied my mynde to seke out & search for the knowledge of all thynges ꝑ are done vnder heauē. Soch trauayle & labour hath god geuē vnto * ꝑ children of men, to exercyse thē selues therin.

¶ Thus I haue consydred all the thynges ꝑ come to passe vnder the Sunne and lo they are all but vanyte & vexacion of mynde. The croked can not be mayde straight / & ꝑ faulty can not be nombred. I cōmoned wyth myne awne herte / sayeng: lo, I am come to a great estate / & haue gotten more wysdome / then all they that haue bene before me in Ierusalem

* Heb. Vanitie of vanyties: ꝑ is a wonderfull greate vanyte: as Salet of balettes / for ethrake Salet / of which Eccle.i.a

a * Pron.xxvij.c Ecclesiast.b. Eccle.ij.b

b * That is / vnto me Some reade the children of Adam. as Gene.xi.a.

For my herte had greate experience of wysdome & knowledge / for therunto I applied my mynde: that I might knowe what were wysdome & vnderstādyng, what were errour & folyshnes. And I perceaued that this also was but a vexacō of minde: for where moch wysdome is / there is also greate trauayle & disquietnes: and the more knowledge a man hath, the more is his care.

¶ Aboundaunce of ryches / of pleasure & of buyldynge are vayne thynges.

¶ The ij. Chapter.

THen sayd I thus in myherte: Now go to, I wyll take myne ease and haue good dayes. But lo, ꝑ was vanyte also: in so moch ꝑ I sayde vnto laughter: thou art madd, and to myrth: what doest thou?

So I thought in my herte / to withdrawe my flesh frō wyne / to applie my mynde vnto wysdome, & to cōprehende folishnes vntil the tyme ꝑ (amōge all ꝑ thinges wherin they are vnder ꝑ Sūne) I myght se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

I made gorgious layre workes. I buylded me houses & plāted vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardens of pleasure / & plāted trees in thē of all maner frutes. I made poles of water / to water ꝑ grene & frutefull trees withall. I bought seruaūtes & maydēs / & had a greate housholde. As for catell & shepe / I had more substaūce of thē / then all they ꝑ were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer and golde together / euē a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me syngers and wemē which coude playe of instrumentes / to make men myrth & pastime. I gat me drynckyng cuppes also & glasses. (Shortly) I was greater & in more worshipe, then all my predecessours in Ierusalē. For wysdome remayned w̄ me: & loke whatsoeuer myne eyes desyred / I let thē haue it: & wherin soeuer myherte delited or had eny pleasure, I wyth held it not from it. Thus my herte reioyced in all ꝑ I dyd / & this I toke for ꝑ portion of all my trauayle. But when I cōsydred all ꝑ workes ꝑ my handes had wrought, & all the labours ꝑ I had taken therin: lo / all was but vanyte & vexacyon of mynde, and nothinge of eny value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consydre wysdome / errours & folyshnesse) for what is he amōge men / ꝑ might be compared to me the kyng in soch worke(?) & I sawe / ꝑ wysdo me excelleth foolishnesse / as farre as lyght doth darcknesse. * For a wyse mā beareth his eyes aboute in his head, but ꝑ foole goeth in the darcknesse. I perceaued also ꝑ they both had one ende. Then thought I in my minde: If it happen vnto ꝑ foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny moze for wyſdome: So I cõfeſſed wythin my herte/ ꝑ this alſo was but vanite. For ꝑ wyſe are euer as lytle in remẽbraũce as ꝑ foliſh/ & all ꝑ dayes for to come ſhalbe forgottẽ/ yee the wyſe mã dieth as well as ꝑ foole. Thus beganne I to be weery of my lyfe/ in ſo moch ꝑ I coude awaye w nothing ꝑ is done vnder ꝑ Sũne/ for all was but vanite & vexaciõ of mynde: Yee I was weery of al my labour/ which I had take vnder the Sũne/ becauſe I ſhulde be fayne to leaue thẽ vnto another mã/ ꝑ cõmeth after me for who knoweth / whether he ſhalbe a wyſe mã or a fole: And yet ſhalbe be lord of all my labours/ which I w ſoch wyſdome haue take vnder the Sũne. Is not this a vayne thyng:

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde frõ
all ſoch trauayle/ as I toke vnder the Sũne:
D for ſo moch as a man ſhulde weery him ſelfe
w wyſdome/ w vnderſtãding & oppoꝛtunite/& yet be fayne to leaue his labours vnto ano ther/ ꝑ neuer ſwett for them. Thys is alſo a vayne thinge and a greate myſery. For what getteth a man of all ꝑ labour & trauayle of his mynde/ ꝑ he taketh vnder ꝑ Sunne/ but heuyneſſe/ ſoꝛowe & diſquietnes all ꝑ dayes of his lyfe: In ſo moch that his herte can not reſt in ꝑ night. Is not this alſo a vayne thing:
Is it not better then for a mã to eate & dzinc-ke/ & his ſoule to be mery in his labour: Yee
I ſawe ꝑ this alſo was a gyfte of God: For who maye eate/ dzincke/ oꝛ bzinge eny thing to paſſe wythout hym: And why: he geueth vnto mã/ what it pleaſeth him: whether it be wyſdome/ vnderſtanding / oꝛ gladneſſe. But vnto ꝑ ſynner he geueth weerynes & ſoꝛow/ꝑ he maye gather & heape together ꝑ thinge/ꝑ afterwarde ſhalbe geuẽ vnto him whom it pleaſeth God. This is now a vayne thinge/yee a very diſquietneſſe & vexaciõ of mynde.
¶ All thynges come in their tyme and paſſe awaye in their tyme.

¶ The.iij. Chapter.

I Euery thynge hath a tyme / yee all

Agayne

Agayne/I sawe that all trauayle and dylygence of labourē was hated of euery man. This is also a vayne thynge/ and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foldeth his hādes together/ and eateth vp his awne flesh. One hande full (sayeth he) is better wyth rest/ then both the handes full with labourē and trauayle. Moreouer/I turned me/and beholde yet another vanyte vnder the Sonne.

There is one man/ no mo but hym selfe alone/ hauynge neyther chylde ner brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle/ hys eyes can not be satysfyed wyth ryches/ (yet doth he not remembre hym selfe/ & saye:) Sor whome I do take soch trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and mysserable thyng. Therfore two are better then one/ for they maye well enioye the profyt of their labourē. If one of them fall/ hys companion helpeth hym vp agayne: But wo is hym that is alone/for yf he fall/ he hath not another to helpe hym vp. Agayne/ when two slepe together/they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One maye be ouercome/but two maye make resistaūce: A thre folde cable is not lyghtly broken. A poore chylde beynge wyse/ is better then an olde kynge/that doteth/ and can not bewarre in tyme to come. Some one commeth out of prison/& is made a kynge: & another whych is borne in the kyngdome/commeth vnto power. And I perceaued/ yt all men liuing vnder the Sonne/go with the secōde chylde/ that commeth vp in the steade of the other.

As for the people that haue bene before him/and that come afterhim/they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thorow hym. This is also a vayne thynge & a vexacion of mynde. When thou cōmest in to ỳ house of God, kepe thyfote* & drawnye, b* that thou mayest heare: that is better then ỳ offeringes of fooles/for they knowne not what euell they do.

a* Some rede: For he is redy to heare vnderstandyng thy mouth, and to declare the sacrifices that fooles geue.

b* Some rede: rather to heare/ then to geue/as fooles offeringe sacrifice.

¶ A monicyon to bewarre of rashe communycacyon. We ought not to meruel at the oppressiō of the poore. The couetous is not satysfyed with his ryches.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

Be not hastie with thy mouth/ & let not thyne herte speake eny thynge rashly before God. For God is in heauen/ and thou vpon earth/ therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moch carefulnesse is/ there are many dreames: and where many wordes are there men maye heare fooles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to performe it. As for foluish vowes/he hath no pleasure in thē. If thou promyse eny thinge/paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe then that thou shuldest promyse/and not paye. Lete not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne/ that thou saye not before the angell: my foolyshnesse is in the faute. For thē God wilbe angrye at thy voyce/ & destroye all ỳ worckes of thyne handes. And why? where as are many dreames and many wordes/ there are also dyuerse vanityes: but loke ỳ thou feare God. If thou seyst the poore to be oppressed and wrongeously dealt wythall/ so that equyte and the ryght of the lawe is wrasted in the lande: maruell not thou at soch iudgment/for one greate man kepeth touch with another/and the myghtie helpe them selues together. The whole lande also wyth the feldes and all that is therin/is in subiection and bondage vnto the kynge. He that loueth money/wyll neuer be satisfyed with money: and who so delyteth in ryches/ shall haue no profyt therof. Is not thys also a vayne thynge? Where as moche ryches is/ there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them/sauynge that he maye loke vpō them with hys eyes? A labouryng mā sleepeth swetely/ whether it be lytle or moch ỳ he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the ryche wyll not suffice hym to slepe.

¶ A

Yet is there a sore plage/ which I haue sene vnder the sunne(namely) riches kepte to the hurte of hym that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perish with his greate mysery & trouble: and yf he haue a chylde/ it getteth nothynge. * Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wōbe so goeth he thither agayne/and carryeth nothinge awaye wyth hym of all hys labour. This is a mysserable plage/ ỳ he shall go awaye euē as he came. What helpeth it hym then/ that he hath labored in the wynde? All the dayes of hys lyfe also must he eate in the darcke/ wyth greate carefulnesse/sycknesse and sorow. Therfore me thincke it a better and a fayrer thynge/a man to eate and drynche/and to be refreshed of all hys labour/ that he taketh vnder the Sunne all the dayes of hys lyfe which God geueth hym/ for this is his portyon. For vnto whom soeuer God geueth riches/goodes and power/ he geueth it hym to enioye it/to take it for hys portion/and to be refreshed of hys labour: this is now the gyfte of God. For he thynketh not moche how longe he shall lyue, for so moch as God fylleth his herte with gladnesse.

* Iob.i.d.e. 1 Tim.vi.b

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The differaunce of a fole and a wyse man.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

I There is yet a plage vnder ỹ Sōne/ & it is a generall thynge amonge men: when God geueth a man ryches, goodes & honoure, so that he wanteth nothynge of all that hys herte can desyre: and yet God geueth hym not leue to enioye the same/ but another man spendeth them. This is a vayne thynge & a myserable plage. B If a man begett an hundred childrē/ and lyue many yeares/ so that his dayes are many in nombre / and yet can not enioye his good/ nether be buried: as for him I saye/ that an vntymely byrth is better then he. For he cōmeth to naught / & goeth his waye in to darckenes, and his name is forgotten. C Moreouer/ he seyth not ỹ Sonne/ & knoweth of no rest nether here ner there: Yee though he lyued two thousaude yeares / yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place? All the laboure ỹ a man taketh / is for hym selfe/ and yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde For what hath the wyse more then D the foole? What helpeth it the poore / that he knoweth to walcke before the lyuyng? The syght of the eyes is better, then that ỹ soule shulde so departe awaye. Howbeit this is also a vayne thynge and a dysquyetnesse of mynde. What is more excellent then mā? yet can he not in the lawe get the victory of of hym that is myghtier then he: A vayne thynge is it to cast oute many wordes / but what hath a man els?

C That with paseth oure strengthes & wittes ought we not to seke after.

C The.vij.Chapter.

I Or who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge / in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, which is vnto shadowe? Or who will tell a man/ what shall happen after him vnder ỹ Sōne: a Prou.xxij.a Eccl.a. * A good name is more worth then a precious oyntmēt, and the daye of death is bet- B ter then the daye of byrth. It is better to go in to an house of mournyng then in to a tāckettyng house. For there is the ende of all men, & he that is lyuynge taketh it to hert. It is better to be sorye then to laugh, for whē the countenaunce is heuy, the herte is ioyfull. The herte of the wyse is in the mournyng house, but the herte of ỹ folish is in the house of myrth. It is better to geue eare to the chastenynge of a wyse man / then to heare the songe of fooles. For the laughyng of foles is lyke the crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge.

Who so doeth wronge / maketh a wyse man to goo oute of his witte / & destroyeth a gentle herte. The ende of a thynge is better then the begynnyng. The pacīēt of spyrite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastely angrie in thym ynde / for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: What is the cause that the dayes of the olde tyme were better / then they that be now? for that were no wyse question. Wysdome is better then ryches / yee moch more worth then the eyesyght. For wysdome defendeth as well as monaye/ and the excellent knowledge and wysdome geueth lyfe vnto hym ỹ hath it in possession. Consydre the worcke of God / how that no man can make the thynge straight / which he maketh crooked. Vse well the tyme of prosperyte / and remembre the C tyme of myshortune: for God maketh the one by the other / so ỹ a mā can fynde nothyng els.

These .ij. thinges also haue I cōsydred in the tyme of vanyte: that ỹ iust man perisheth for his ryghtuousnes sake / and the vngodly lyueth in his wyckednesse. Therfore be thou nether to ryghtuous ner ouer wyse / that thou perish not: be nether to vnryghtuous also ner to foolysh / lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this / and not to let that go out thy hande. For ỹ he feareth God shall escape them all.

Wysdome geueth more corage vnto the wyse, then ten myghtie men of ỹ cite: * for there is not one iust vpon earth ỹ doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery worde that is spoken / lest thou heare thy seruaunt curse the: for thyne awne herte knoweth / that thou thy selfe also hast oft tymes spoken euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued beraule of wysdome: for I thought to be wyse / but she went farther from me then she was before / yee & I dispered that I might not reach vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowledge / & to seke oute science / wysdome and vnderstandyng: to knowe the foolishnesse of the vngodly / & the errour of dotynge fooles. And I founde / that a womans bytterer then death: for she is a very angle / her herte is a nett / and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape from her / but the synner wyll be taken with her. D

* 1ō. Eccl. vij.c 9. Parm. vi.g Prou. xx.b 1 Joha. i.a.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this haue I dilygently searched oute and proued / that I myght come by knowledge: wherby as yet I seke / and fynde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one / but not one woman amonge all. Lo / thys onely haue I founde / that God made man iust and right / but they seke dyuerse forcastes / where as no mā hath wysdome and vnderstandynge / to geue answere therunto.

C The kynges commaundement ought to be obeyed Gladnes is one of the chefe thynges vnder the sonne.

C The.viij.Chapter.

Wysdome

WYsdome maketh a mans face to shyne, but malyce putteth it oute of fauoure. Kepe the kynges commaundemēt (I warne the) and the othe that thou hast made vnto* God. Be not haste to go out of his syght/ and se thou cōtynue in no euell thynge: for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him/ that doeth he. Like as whē a king geueth a charge/ hys commaundement is myghtie: Euen so who maye saye vnto hym: what doest thou? Who so kepeth the commaundemēt, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mans herte discerneth tyme and maner: For euery thynge wyll haue opportunite and iudgment/ and thys is the thynge that maketh B mē full of carefulnes and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come/ for who wyll tell hym? Nether is there eny man that hath power ouer the spyrite/ to kepe styll the spyrite/ ner to haue eny power in ye tyme of death: it is not he also that can make an ende of ye battayll/ nether maye vngodlynes delyuer hym that medleth with all.

* Prou.xvij.d. Iou.ix.d

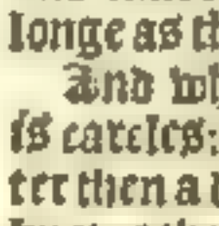
* Some reade: the Goddes: that is/ Iudges.

All these thynges haue I consydered/ and applyed my mynde vnto euery worcke that is vnder the Sonne: how one mā hath lordshype vpon another to his awne harme. For I haue oft sene ye vngodly brought to their graues/ and fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so moch that they were forgotten in the cytie/ where they were had in so hye and greate reputacyon. This is also a vayne thynge. Because now that euell worckes are not hastely punyshed, the herte of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. C But though an euell personne offende an hundred tymes/ and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure/ that it shall go well wyth thē that feare God/ because they haue hym before their eyes. Agayne/ as for ye vngodly, it shall not be well wyth hym/ nether shall he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe/ so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanyte vpon earth: There be iust men/ vnto whom it happeneth/ as though they had the worckes of the vngodly: Agayne/ there be vngodly/ with whom it goeth as though they had the worckes of the ryghtuous. This me thynck also a vayne thyng. Therfore I commende gladnesse/ because a man hath no better thynge vnder ye Sonne/ then to eate and drynke/ and to be mery: for that shal he haue of his laboure all the dayes of his lyfe/ which God geueth him vnder ye Sonne. D When I applied my mynde to learne wysdome/ and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of soch a fashion/ ye I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether daye ner nyght) I vnderstode of all ye worckes of God, that it is not impossible for a man/ to attayne vnto the worckes that are done vnder the Sonne: for though he bestowe his laboure to seke them out/ yet can he not reach vnto thē: yee though a wyse mā wolde vndertake to knowe them/ yet myght he not fynde them.

C A man wotteth not/ by the ryghtwesnes of hys awne worckes/ whether he be worthie of loue or hate. A mā ought to lyue merely with his wyfe. A prayse of wysdome.

C The.ix. Chapter.



FOr all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke oute. C The ryghtuous & wyse yee & their* worckes also are in the hande of God: & b* there is no man that knoweth ether ye loue or hate of the thynge that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth wyth the ryghtuous as wyth the vngodly: with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with him that offereth as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth wyth ye ryghtuous so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the pertured/ so happeneth it also vnto him ye is afrayed to be for sworne. Among all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sonne this is a mysery that it happeneth vnto all alyke. C This is the cause also ye the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and madd foolyshnesse is in their hertes as longe as they lyue/ vntyll they dye.

a* Some reade: vertuous.

b* Some reade: and yet knoweth nether the loue/ ner the hate: which is afore him. C The sentence syngnifieth as mothe/ as no mā knoweth whether God loue or hate any man: Vnderstande/ by the ryghtwesnes of hys awne worckes.

And why? As longe as a man lyueth/ he is carelesse: for a quick dogge (saye they) is better then a dead lyon: for they that be lyuyng/ knowe that they shall dye: but they that be dead knowe nothynge/ nether deserue they eny more For their memoriall is forgotten/ so ye they be nether loued/ hated ner enuyed: nether haue they eny more parte in ye worlde/ in all that is done vnder ye Sonne. Go thou thy waye then/ eate thy bred wyth ioye/ and drynke thy wyne wyth gladnesse/ for thy worckes please God. * Let thy garmētes be alwaye whyte/ & let thy head wāt none oyntment. Take thy selfe to lyue ioyfully with thy wyfe whom thou louest all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vayne/ ye God hath geuen the vnder the Sonne, all the dayes of thy vanite: for that is thy porcion in this lyfe/ of all thy laboure and trauayle that thou takest vnder the Sonne. Whatsoeuer thou takest C in hande to do/ that do with all thy power: for amōge the deed/ where as thou goest vnto/ there is nether worcke/ councell/ knowledge ner wysdome.

c* That is/ be not slouthfull and fytchely/ but honestly & manerly arayed.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the Sonne/ and I sawe/ that in runnyng/ it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayll/ it helpeth not to be stronge: to fedynge/ it helpeth not to be wyse: to ryches/ it helpeth not to be suttell: to be had in fauoure/it helpeth not to be connynge: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. ¶For a man knoweth not hys tyme/ but lyke as the fysshe are taken wyth the angle/ and as the byrdes are catched wyth the snare: Euen so are men take in the perilous tyme/when it commeth sodenly vpon them.

D This wysdome haue I sene also vnder the Sonne/and me thought it a greate thynge. There was a lytle cite/and a fewe within it: so there came a greate kynge and besieged it/ & made greate bulwarckes agaynst it. And in the cytie there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which wyth hys wysdome delyuered the cytie: yet was there no body/that had eny respecte vnto soch a symple man. Then sayde I: wysdome is better then strength. Neuertheles/ a symple mans wysdome is despised/and his wordes are not herde. The wyse mās councell that is folowed in silence/ is farre aboue the crienge of a captayne amonge fooles. * For wysdome is better then harnesse: but one vnthryft alone destroyeth moch good.

The. x. Chapter.

A Deed flyes & corruppe swete ointment and make it to stynke/ are lyght thynge more worth then the wysdome and honoure of a foole. The wyse mans herte is* vpon & right hāde/ but a fooles herte is vpō the left. Yea dotynge foole thynketh that euery man doth as foolyshly as hym selfe. ¶ If a princypall spyrite be geuen the to beare rule/ be not negligēt then in thyne office: for so shall greate wyckednesse be put downe/ as it were wyth a medecyne. Another plage is there/ which I haue sene vnder the sonne: namely/ the ignorāce that is commenly amonge prynces: in that a foole sytteth in greate dignyte/ and the rych are sett downe beneth: yea seruauntes ryde vpon horses, & prynces goinge vpō their fete as it were seruauntes. * But he & diggeth vp a pyt, shall fall therin him selfe: & who so breaketh downe & hedge/ a serpēt shall byte hym. Who so remoueth stones/ shall haue trauayle wt̄hall: & he & heweth wod, shalbe hurt therwith.

a ¶ That is/ to do all thynges aryght.

* Prou. xxvi. b. Eccli. xxvi. d.

When an yron is blont/and the poynt not sharpened/it must be whett agayne/ & that with myght: Euen so doth wysdome folowe C diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a serpēt that stynged without hyssyng. The wordes out a wyse mās mouth are gracious/ but & lyppes of a foole will destroye hym selfe. The begynnynge of his talkynge is foolishnes/and & last worde of his mouth is great madnesse. A foole is so full of wordes/ that a man can not tell what ende he wyll make: who wyll then warne hym to make a conclusyō? The laboure of the foolish is greuous vnto thē/ whyle they knowe not how to go in to the cytie.

Wo be vnto the (O thou realme & lande) D whose kynge is but a chylde/ & whose prynces are early at their banckettes. But well is the (O thou realme and lande) whose kyng is come of nobles/ and whose prynces eate in due season/ for strength and not for lust. Thorow slouthfulnesse & balckes fall downe/ and thorow ydle handes it rayneth in at the house. Meate maketh men to laugh/ & wine maketh them merry: but vnto money are all thynges obedient. Wisshe the kyng no euell in thy thought/ and speake no hurte of & ryche in thy preuy chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shall betraye thy voyce/ and with her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

If a man lyue many yeares/and be glad in them all/ let him remembre the dayes of darcknesse/ wh̄ych shall be many: & when they come, all thyngs D shall be but vanyte. Be glad then (O thou yonge man) in thy youth, and let thyne herte be mery in thy yonge dayes: folowe & wayes of thyne awne herte/ & the lust of thyne eyes: but be thou sure/ that God shall bringe the in to iudgment for all these thynges.

¶ From oute youthe ought we to consyder & regarde the goodnes of God.

¶ The. xii. Capter.

Put away displeasure out of thine hert/ & remoue euell frō thy body: for chyldehode & youth is but vanyte. Remembre thy maker in thy youth/ or euer the dayes of aduersitie come/ & or the yeares drawe nye/ when thou shalt saye: I haue no pleasure in them before the sunne/ the lyght/ the moone and starres be darckened/ and or the cloudes turne agayne after the rayne: when the kepers of the house shall tremble/ & when the stronge men shall bowe them selues: when the mylleres stande styll/ because they be so fewe/ & when the sight of the wyndowes shall ware dymme: when the dores in the stretes shalbe shutt/ & when the voyce of the myller shalbe layed downe: when men shall ryse vp at the voyce of the byrde/ and when all the daughters of musike shalbe brought lowe: when men shall feare in hye places/ and be afrayed in the stretes: when the Almonde tree shalbe despysed/ the grechopper borne out/ and when greate power shall breake in: when man goeth to his longe home/ and the mourners go aboute the stretes. Or euer the syluer lace be take away/ & or the golden bande be broke: Or the pot be broken at the well/ & the whele vpon the cysterne: Or dust be turned agayne vnto earth from whence it came/ & or the spirite returne vnto God/ which gaue it. All is but vanyte (saith the Preacher) all is but playne vanite.

The same Preacher was not wyse alone/ but taught the people knowledge also: he gaue goodhede/ sought out the ground and set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes/ ryght scripture/ and the wordes of trueth. For the wordes of the wyse are like pryckes and nayles that goo thorow/ wherwyth men are kepte together: for they are geuē of one shepherde onely. Therfore be warre (my sonne) that aboue these thou make the not many and innumerable bokes/ nor take dyuerse doctrynes in hande/ to weery thy body withall.

Let vs heare the cōclusyon of al thinges: Feare God/ and kepe hys cōmaundemētes/ For that toucheth all men: For God shall iudge all workes and secrete thynges/ whether they be good or euell.

¶ The fyrſt Chapter.

¶ The boyce of the Churche.

A That thy mouth wold geue me a kyſſe/ for thy breſtes are more pleaſaūt then wine/ & that becauſe of the good & pleaſaūt ſauoure. Thy name is a ſwete ſmelling oyntmēt/ therfore do the maydens loue the: yee that ſame moueth me alſo to runne after the.

¶ The ſpouſeſſe to her companyons.

The Kyng hath brought me in to his preuy chambre We wyll be glad and reioyce in the we thynke more of thy breſtes then of wyne: well is them that loue the.

¶ The boyce of the Churche in purgatorye.

B I am black (O ye daughters of Jeruſalem) lyke as the tentes of the Cedarenes / & as the hangynges of Salomon: but yet am I fayre & welfauoured withal. Marueil not at me that I am ſo black: & why? the ſunne hath ſhyned vpon me.

¶ The boyce of the Synagoge

For when my mothers chyldren had euell wyll at me, they made me a keper of the vyneyarde. Thus was I fayne to kepe a vyneyarde, which was not myne awne.

¶ The boyce of the Churche to Chriſt.

Tell me (O thou whom my ſoule loueth) where thou fedeſt/ where thou reſteſt at the noone daye: leſt I go wronge/ and come vnto the flockes of thy companyons.

¶ The boyce of Chriſt.

C Yf thou knowe not thy ſelf (O thou fayreſt amonge wemen) then go thy waye forth after the fote ſteppes of the ſhepe/ as though thou woldeſt fede thy goates beſyde the ſhepherdes tentes. There wyll I tary for the (my loue) with myne hoſt and with my charettes/ which ſhalbe no fewer then Pharaos. Then ſhall thy chekes & thy neck be made fayre/ & hanged with ſpāges & goodly iewels: a neck bande of golde wyll we make the with ſiluer botons.

¶ The boyce of the churche.

When the Kynge ſyteth at the table / he ſhall ſmell my Nard: for a bondell of Myrre (O my beloued) lyeth betwixte my breſtes. D A cluſter of grapes of Cypers / or of the vyneyardes of Engaddi art thou vnto me / O my beloued.

¶ The boyce of the Churche.

O how fayre art thou (my loue) how fayre art thou: thou haſt doues eyes.

¶ The boyce of Chriſt.

O how fayre art thou (my beloued) how well fauored art thou: Oure bed is decte with floures/ the ſyelyngs of oure houſe are of Cedre tree, & oure balkes of Cypreſſe.

¶ The .ij. Chapter.

¶ The boyce of the Churche.

I Am the floure of the felde/ & lylye of the valleys: as the roſe amonge the thornes/ ſo is my loue amonge the daughters. E

¶ The boyce of the churche.

Lyke as the appie tree amōge the trees of the wod/ ſo is my beloued amōge the ſonnes. My delyte is to ſyt vnder hys ſhadowe / for hys frute is ſwete vnto my throte. He bringeth me in to his wyne ſeller/ and loueth me ſpecyally well. Refreſh me wyth grapes/ comforte me with apples / for I am ſyck of loue. His left hand lyeth vnder my heade/ and his ryght hande embraceth me.

¶ The boyce of Chriſt.

I charge you (O ye daughters of Jeruſalem) by the Roes & hyndes of the felde/ that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her/ tyll ſhe be content her ſelfe. F

¶ The boyce of the Churche.

Me thynche I heare the boyce of my beloued: lo/ there cōmeth he hoppynge vpō the moūtaynes/ & leapyng ouer the lytle hilles. My beloued is lyke a Roo or a ponge hart. Beholde/ he ſtandeth behynde oure wall/ he loketh in at the wyndowe / and pepeth thorow the grate. My beloued anſwered and ſayde vnto me.

¶ The boyce of Chriſt.

O ſtande vp my loue/ my doue/ my beutyfull, & come: for lo, the wynter is now paſt/ & the rayne is awaye & gone. The floures are come vp in the felde / the twyſtynge tyme is come, the voyce of the turtle doue is hearde in oure lande. The fygge tree bringeth forth her figges, the vynes beare bloſſoms/ & ſue agree

a good smell. O stande vp my loue/ my beu-tyfull/ & come (O my doue) out of the caues of the rockes/ out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenaūce & heare thy voyce/ for swete is thy voyce and fayre is thy face.

¶ The voyce agaynst the heretikes.

Get vs the foxes/ yee the litle foxes that hurt ỹ vynes/ for oure vines beare blosoms.

¶ The voyce of the Churche.

My loue is myne/ and I am his (which fedeth amōge ỹ lilies/ vntill the daye breake/ and till ỹ shadowes be gone. Come againe preuely (O my beloued) lyke as a Roo or a yonge harte vnto the mountaynes.

The.iij. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of the Church which is chosen oute of the Heathen.

B I night in my bedd I sought him/ whom my soule loueth: yee diligently sought I him/ but I founde him not. I will get vp (thought I) & go aboute the cytie/ vpon the market & in all the stretes will I seke hym whom my soule loueth: but when I sought him/ I foūde him not. The watchmen that go aboute the cytie/ founde me.

¶ The Churche speakynge of Christ.

B Sawe ye not him whom my soule loueth? So when I was a lytle past thē/ I founde him whom my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, & will not let hym go vntyl I bringe him vnto my mothers house// and in to her chambre that bare me.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

I charge you/ O ye daughters of Ierusalem/ by the Roes & Hyndes of the felde/ that ye wake not vp my loue ner touche her/ tyll she be content her selfe.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge/ marueyling in it selfe at the Churche of Christ.

C Who is this/ that cōmeth out of the wyldernesse lyke pyllers of smoke/ as it were a smell of Myrre franckincense and all maner spyces of the Apotecary?

¶ [illegible]

Beholde/ about Salomons bedsted ther stande .lx. valeaūt men of the myghtye in Israel. They holde swerdes euery one/ & are experte in warre. Euery man hath his swerde vpon his thygh/ because of feare in ỹ night.

D Kynge Salomon hath made hym selfe a bedsteade of the wod of Libanus/ the pyllers are of syluer/ the coueringe of golde/ the seate of purple/ the ground pleasauntly paued for the daughters of Ierusalem.

¶ [illegible]

Go forth (O ye daughters of Siō) & behold Kyng Salomō in the crowne wherwith his mother crowned him in ỹ daye of his marriage/ & in the daye of the gladnesse of his hert.

The.iiij. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

How fayre art thou/ my loue/ how fayre art thou: thou hast doues eyes/ besyde that whych lyeth hyd within. Thy hearre lockes are lyke a flocke of shepe that be clypped/ which go fyrst vp from the washynge place: where euery one beareth two twyns/ and not one vnfrutefull amonge them. Thy lyppes are like a rose coloured ryboude/ thy wordes are louely: thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomgranate/ besides that which lieth hyd within Thy necke is like the tower of Dauid buylded with bulwarckes/ wher vpon there hāge a thousande shyldes/ yee all the weapens of the gyauntes. Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of younge roes/ which fede amonge the lylyes.

¶ The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O that I myght go to the mountayne of Myrre/ and to the hyll of franckincense: tyll the daye breake/ & tyll the shadowes be past awaye.

¶ The voyce of Christ speaking to ỹ church

Thou art all fayre O my loue & no spotte is there in the. Come to me from Libanus/ O my spouse/ come to me from Libanus: come soone the next waye from the toppe of Amana/ from the toppe of Sanir & Hermon/ frō the lyons dennes and from the mountaynes of the leopardes Thou hast woūded myhert/ O my syster my spouse, thou hast wounded my hert/ with one of thyne eyes/ & with one cheyne of thy neck. O how fayre & louely are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse: Thy brests are more pleasaunt then wyne/ & the smell of thyne ointemētes passeth all spyces. Thy lyppes/ O my spouse/ droppe as the hony combe/ yee mylcke and hony is vnder thy tonge/ and the smell of thy garmentes is like the smell of frankynsense. Thou art a well kepte garden/ O my syster, my spouse thou art a well kepte watersprynge/ a sealed wel. The frutes that spryute in the/ are lyke a very Paradyse of pōgranates with swete frutes: as Cypresse/ Nardus/ Saffrō/ Calmus/ and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre/ Aloes and all the best spyces. Thou art a well of gardens a well of lyuynge waters/ whych renne downe from Libanus.

¶ Christ calleth the Heathen.

Vp thou northwynde/ come thou southwynde/ & blowe vpon my garden/ ỹ the smell therof may be caried on euery syde: yee ỹ my beloued maye come into my garden/ & eate of the frutes & apples that growe therin.

The.v. Chapter.

¶ Christ speaketh to the Churche.

Come

COme into my garden O my ſiſter/ my Spouſe: I haue gathered my Myrre with my ſpyce. I wyll eate my hony and my hony combe / I wyll drynke my wyne and my mylcke.

¶ Chriſt ſpeaketh to the Apoſtles.

Eate / O ye frendes / drynke & be mery / O ye beloued.

¶ The voyce of the Church.

As I was aſlepe / & my hert waakynge / I hearde the voyce of my beloued / when he knocked.

¶ Chriſt to the Churche.

Open to me (ſayde he) O my ſyſter / my loue / my doue / my derlynge: for my heade is full of dewe / and the lockes of my heare are full of the nyght droppes.

¶ The voyce of the ſpouſeſſe.

I haue put of my cote / how can I do it on agayne? I haue waſhed my fete / how ſhall I tyle them agayne?

¶ The voyce of ỹ church ſpeaking of Chriſt.

But when my loue put in his hand at the hole, my herte was moued towarde hym: ſo that I rode vp to opē vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrre / & the Myrre ranne downe my fingers vpon the lock. Neuertheleſſe when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone hys waye.

Now lyke as afore tyme when he ſpake / my herte coude not longer refrayne: Euen ſo now I ſought hym / but I coude not fynde him: I cryed vpō hym / neuertheleſſe he gaue me no anſwere.

¶ The Churche complayneth of her perſecuters

So the watchmen that wente about the cite founde me / ſmote me / & wounded me: Yee they that kepte the walles / toke awaye my garment fro me.

¶ The ſpouſeſſe ſpeaketh to her cōpanyōs

I charge you therfore / O ye daughters of Ieruſalem / yf ye fynde my beloued / that ye tell hym how that I am ſyck for loue.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers / O thou fayreſt amonge wemen? Or what can thy loue do / more then other louers / ỹ thou chargeſt vs ſo ſtraytely?

¶ The Churche. anſwerynge of Chriſt.

As for my loue / he is whyte and redde coloured / a ſyngular perſonne amonge many thouſandes: his heade is the moſt fine golde / the lockes of his heare are buſhed. browne as the euenynge: His eyes are as the eyes of doues by the water brokes / waſhen w̄ mylk / and remaynynge in a plenteous place: Hys chekes are lyke a garden bedd / where in the Apotecaries plāte almanet of ſwete thinges: His lyppes droppe as the floures of ỹ moſt principall Myrre / his handes are ful of golde rynges & precious ſtones. His body is as the pure yuery / decte ouer with Saphires: His legges are as the pyllers of Marbell / ſet vpō ſokettes of golde: His face is as Libanus / and as the bewtye of the Cedre trees: Hys throte is ſwete / yee he is altogeter louely. Soche one is my loue / O ye daughters of Ieruſalem / ſoche one is my loue.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge ſpeakynge to the Churche.

Whither is thy loue gone then (O thou fayreſt amonge wemen) whither is thy loue departed / that we may ſeke hym with the?

¶ The .vj. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of the Churche.

My loue is gone downe into his garden / vnto the ſwete ſmellyng beddes / that he may refreſh him ſelfe in the garden / & gather floures. My loue is myne / and I am his / which fedeth amonge the lylyes.

¶ Chriſt to the Churche.

Thou art pleaſaunt (O my loue) euen as louelyneſſe it ſelf / thou art fayre as Ieruſalem, glorious as an armye of men / w̄ their banners. (Turne awaye thyne eyes fro me / for they make me to proude.) Thy heayre lockes are lyke a flocke of goates vpon the mount of Galaad. Thy teth are lyke a flock of ſhepe that be clypped / which go out of the waſhynge place: where euery one beareth two twyns / and not one vnfrutefull amōge them. Thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomgranate / beſydes that which lyeth hyd within. There are thre ſcore Quenes / foure ſcore concubines / & yonge wemen without nombre. But one is my doue / my derlinge. She is the onely beloued of her mother / and deare vnto her that bare her. When the daughters ſawe her / they ſayde / ſhe was bleſſed: Yee the Quenes & concubynes prayſed her.

What is he this / that peepeth out as the morynge? fayre as the moone / excellent as the ſunne / glorious as an armye of mē with their baners.

¶ Chriſt to the Synagoge.

I wente downe into the nutte garden / to ſe what grewe by the brokes / to loke yf the vineyarde floriſhed / and yf the pomgranates were ſhot forth.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the charettes of the Prince of my people made me ſodenly afrayed.

¶ The voyce of the Churche callynge agayne the Synagoge.

Turne agayne / turne agayne / O thou Sulamite / turne agayne / turne agayne / & we may loke vpon the.

¶ The

¶ The.vij. Chapter.

¶ Chryst to the Synagoge.

WHat pleasure haue ye more in the Sulamite, than when she daunseth amonge the men of warre?

¶ Chryst to the Churche.

O how pleasaunt are thy treadynges with thy shues/thou prynces daughter? Thy thyges are lyke a fayre iewel, which is wrought by a cōnyng worke master: Thy nauell is like a roūd goblet, which is neuer without drynke: Thy wombe is lyke an hepe of wheate/ sett about with lylies: Thy two brestes are like two twynnes of yōge roes: Thy neck is as it were a tower of yuory: thyne eyes are lyke the water poles in Hesebon/ beside ẏ porte of Bathrabbim: thy nose is like the tower of Libanus/ which loketh toward Damascus: That head that standeth vpon the is lyke Carmel: the hearre of thy heade is lyke the Kynges purple folden vp in plates.

O how fayre & louely art thou/ my dearlynge/ in pleasures? Thy stature is lyke a date tree, and thy brestes lyke the grapes.

¶ The spouse speakynge of the crosse.

I sayde: I wyll clymme vp into the date tree/ and take holde of his braunches.

¶ The spouse speakynge to the spousesse.

Thy brestes also shalbe as the vyne grapes/ the smell of thy nostrels lyke the smell of apples/ & thy throte lyke the beste wyne. This shalbe pure & cleare for my loue/ vpon lippes and teth shall haue their pleasure. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue/ & he shall turne hym vnto me.

¶ The [illegible] Christ.

O come on my loue/ let vs go forth into the felde, and take oure lodginge in the vyllages. In the morning wyll we ryse betymes/ and go se the vyneyarde: yf it be sprōge forth/ yf the grapes be growne/ & yf the pōgranates be shot out. There wyll I geue the my brestes: there shall the Mandragoras geue their smell beside oure doores: there/ O my loue/ haue I kepte vnto the all maner of frutes/ both new and olde.

¶ The.viij. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of the [illegible] speakynge of Christ.

THat I myght fynde the without/ and kysse the/ whom I loue as my brother which sucke the my mothers brestes: & that thou woldest not be offended/ yf I toke the/ and brought the into my mothers house: & thou myghtest teache me/ and that I might geue the drynke of spiced wyne & of the swete sappe of my pomgranates. His left hand lyeth vnder my head and his ryght hande embraceth me.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

I charge you/ O ye daughters of Jerusalem, that ye wake not vp my loue/ nor touch her, tyll she be content her selfe.

¶ The Synagoge speaking of the churche.

What is she this / that cōmeth vp frō the wyldernes, and leaneth vpon her loue?

¶ The voyce of ẏ spouse vnto ẏ spousesse.

I am the same that waked the vp amōge the appie trees/ where thy mother bare the/ where thy mother brought the in to ẏ world.

¶ The Churche speakynge to Christ.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert/ and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mighty as the death/ and gelously as the hell. Her coales are of fyre/ and a very flamme of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able to quēche loue, neither maye ẏ streames drowne it. Yee yf a mā wolde geue all the good of his house for loue/ he shulde counte it nothynge.

¶ Christ speakynge of the churche to the Synagoge.

When oure loue is tolde oure younge sister, whose brestes are not yet growne/ what shall we do vnto her?

¶ The answere of Christ for the churche.

Yf she be a wall we shall buylde a syluer bolwercke ther vpon: yf she be a tower / we shall fasten her with borders of Cedre tree.

¶ The churche answereth to the Synagoge.

I & I be a wall & my brestes like towres/ then am I as one that hath founde fauoure in his syght.

¶ The Synagoge speakynge to the church.

Salemō had a vyneyarde at Baal Hamon / this vyneyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousand peces of syluer.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

But my vyneyard/ O Salomon/ geueth the a thousand/ and two hundreth to the kepers of the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens/ O let me heare thy voyce/ that my companyons maye herken to the same.

¶ The voyce of ẏ churche [illegible] speakynge to Christ.

O get the awaye/ my loue/ as a roo or a yonge hert vnto the swete smellynge mountaynes.

¶ The worde of the Lorde endureth for euer.
Esay. xl. a.

¶ The boke of the prophete Esay.

¶ Esay prophecieth that the anger of God shall come vpon Jerusalem because of their synnes.

a ¶ Of thys synne & of the thynges done therin ye haue in the fourth of the kynges from the .xiiij. chap to the xxi. vnder the .q. of the Lamentac from the xxv. Chapter to the .xxxix.

THE prophecy of Esay the sonne of Amos / which he shewed vpon Juda & Jerusalem: In the* time of Oziah Joatham / Ahaz / and Jehezekiah kynges of Juda. Heare O heauē herken O earth, for the Lord speaketh: I haue nouryshed & brought vp children, and they are fallē awaye fro me. An ox knoweth his Lord & an Ass his maisters stall but Israell knoweth nothynge my people hath no vnderstanding. Alas for this synfull people / whych are experte in blasphemyes / a frewarde generacion, vnnaturall children. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto anger / & are gone backward. Wherfore shulde ye be plaged any more? for ye are euer fallynge awaye. The whole hede is sycke / the herte is very heuy. From the sole of the fote vnto the head / there is no whole parte in all youre body: but all are woundes botches / sores & stripes which can nether be holpen bounde vp mollyfyed / nor eased with eny ointment.

b ¶ Other wyse called Nazareth. q. Regum .v.

c ¶ The heed signifyeth the that are ordeyned to gouerne the people.

d ¶ From the sole &c. That is in the whole multytude of people is there no goodnes.

Youre lande lyeth waste / youre cytes are brent vp / youre enemyes deuoure youre lande / and ye must be fayne to stande / and loke vpō it: and it is desolate / as it were with enemies in a battell. Moreouer the daughter of Sion is left alone lyke a cotage in a vineyard lyke a watchouse in tyme of warre / lyke a besiegedcyte. And excepte the Lord of Hostes had left vs a few alyue: we shulde haue bene as Sodoma and lyke vnto Gomorra.

¶ The maner of the scripture is / to mynyster to al the frowarde and wycked Jewes by the name of straūgers and heathē because they dyd as wickedly as did the heathen: As here calleth the Sodomytes &c. And in Ezechiel xvi. a. he vpbraideth the of the synfull nacyon / wherof they came / on thys maner. Thy father was an Ammonyte &c.

Heare the worde of the Lord ye tyraūtes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of oure God thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifyces vnto me? I am discontent for the brentofrynges of wethers / and with the fatnesse of fedbeastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gootes. When ye apeare before me, who requyreth you to treade within my porches? Offre me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost laboure. I abhorre youre incēse. I maye not awaye with youre newmoones, youre Sabbathes and solempne dayes. Youre fastynges are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holy dayes and fastinges euen fro my very herte. They make me weery / I can not abyde them. Though ye holde out youre hādes yet turne I myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet heare I nothyng at all * for youre handes are full of bloude.

* Zach vñ b. Mar. vi. b. and E. ap. iij. a.

Wash you, make you cleane / put awaye youre euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doynge of euell and violence. Lerne to do ryght, applye youre selues to equyte, deliuer the oppressed / helpe the fatherlesse to his ryght, let the wydowes complaynte come before you. Now go to, saieth the Lorde, we will talke together. Is it not so? Though youre synnes be as read as scarlet, shal they not be whyter then snowe? And though they were like purple shal they not be like white wolle? Is it not so? If ye be louyng and obedyent / ye shall enioye the best thynge that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate & rebellyous / ye shalbe deuoured with the swerde: for this the Lorde hath promysed with his awne mouth.

f ¶ To turne gouernaūce into: &c. & to myxte wine with water is to deface the heuenly worde of God & to corrupte the pure iudgemēt therof for couetousnes sake: which thynge was vsed in Paules tyme / as ye maye se .ij. Corint. xi. a. more now be ye suer.

How happeneth it then that the ryghtuous cytie, which was full of equyte) is be come vnfaythfull as an whore? ryghtuousnes dwelt in it, but now murthur.  Thy Syluer is turned to drosse and thy wyne myxte with water. Thy princes are traytours and companyons of theues. Every one gyftes altogether and folowe rewardes. An for the fatherles, they helpe him not to hys ryghte / nether will they lett the wydowes causes come before them. Therfore speaketh the Lord God of Hostes & myghty one of Israel: Ah I must ease me of myne enemyes / and auenge me vpon them. And therfore shall I laye myne hād vpon the / and burne out thy drosse from the fynest and purest / and put oute all the lead / and set thy iudges agayne as they were sometyme, and thy Senatours as they were from the begynnynge. Then shalt thou be called the ryghtuous cytie, the faythfull cyte. Sion shalbe redemed with equyte / and her captyuite with ryghtuousnesse. For the trāsgressours and vngodly / and soch as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lord / must altogether be vtterly destroyed.

And excepte ye be ashamed of the oketrees wherin ye haue so delyted / and of the gardēs that ye haue chosen: ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye, & as a gardē that hath no moysture. And as for the glory of these thynges / it shalbe turned to dry strawe / and he that made them to a sparke. And they shall both burne together / so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

¶ Of the cōmynge and death of Christ: and of the callynge of the heathen.

AN Moze-

a* In the last dayes: by which is commenly sygnyfyed the tyme of Christes kōmynge & from thēce vnto the ende of the worlde as Micheah Zephanie. and Jeremy. and in many other places.

THe worde that Amos the herdman had seen vpon Juda & Jerusalem in the dayes of Vzzias kynge of Juda & in the dayes of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israel two yeare before the earthquake. And he sayde: The Lorde shall roare out of Sion & geue his voyce out of Jerusalem: that the habitacions of the shepherdes shall mourne & the toppe of Carmel shall wyther. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of Damascus & for foure I will not turne it: because they haue thresshed Galaad with threshyng instrumentes of yron. But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael: & it shall deuoure the palaces of Benadad. I will breake also the barre of Damascus & roote out the inhabitour from the valley of Auen & him that holdeth the scepter from the house of Eden: & the people of Syria shall be caryed captyue vnto Cyrene sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of Gaza & for foure I will not turne it: because they caryed away captyue a whole people to deliuer them vp vnto Edom. But I will sende a fyre into the wall of Gaza & it shall deuoure the palaces therof. I will roote out the inhabitour from Azotus & him that holdeth the scepter from Ascalon: & I will turne my hande vpon Accaron & the remnaunt of the Philistines shall perish sayeth the Lorde God. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of Tyrus & for foure I will not turne it: because they caryed away captyue a whole people & delyuered them vp vnto Edom & remembred not the brotherly couenaunt. But I will sende a fyre into the wall of Tyrus & it shall deuoure the palaces therof. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of Edom & for foure I will not turne it: because he dyd persecute his brother with the sworde & destroyed all compassion & his anger dyd teare perpetually & he kept his wrath for euer. But I will sende a fyre into Theman & it shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of the children of Ammon & for foure I will not turne it: because they haue ripped vp the women with childe of Galaad that they might enlarge their borders. I will kyndle a fyre in the wall of Rabba & it shall deuoure the palaces therof with shoutyng in the day of battell & with a tempest in the day of the whirlewynde. And their kynge shall go into captyuite he & his princes together sayeth the Lorde.

b* The Iewes take not the lawe onely for the comaundementes but also for all the promisses of God. for their iudgementes & for all that is contayned the whole olde testament.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of Moab & for foure I will not turne it: because he burned the bones of the kynge of Edom vnto lyme. But I will sende a fyre into Moab & it shall deuoure the palaces of Carioth & Moab shall dye in tumult with shoutyng & with the sounde of the trompet. I will destroye the iudge out of the myddes therof & will slee all the princes therof with him sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of Juda & for foure I will not turne it: because they haue cast away the lawe of the Lorde & haue not kept his commaundementes & their lyes caused them to erre which their fathers had walked after. But I will sende a fyre into Juda & it shall deuoure the palaces of Jerusalem. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three wickednesses of Israel & for foure I will not turne it: because they solde the iuste for money & the poore for a payre of shoes. They that treade the heades of the poore vpon the earth & turne away the way of the meke. A man & his father go in vnto one mayde that they might defyle my holy name. And they stretched out themselues vpon clothes layed to pledge by euery altare & dranke the wyne of the condemned in the house of their God. But I destroyed the Amorite before them whose heyght was like the heyght of the cedre trees & he was strong as the okes: & I destroyed his fruite aboue & his rootes beneth. I brought you also out of the land of Egipte & led you forty yeare in the wildernesse that ye might possesse the land of the Amorite. I raysed vp of your children for prophetes & of your yonge men for Nazarites. Is it not euen so o ye children of Israel sayeth the Lorde? But ye gaue the Nazarites wyne to drynke & commaunded the prophetes saying: Ye shall not prophesye. Behold I will presse you in your place as a cart is pressed that is full of shockes. And flyght shall perish from the swyfte & the myghty shall not prouyde strength for himself & the valyaunt shall not saue his life. He that handleth the bowe shall not stande & he that is swyfte of foote shall not escape & he that rydeth vpon horsebacke shall not saue his life. And he that is hardest amonge the valyaunt men shall flee naked in that day sayeth the Lorde.

c* So that they shall breake their swordes &c. Note here the great misery of the that dwell in the cite of God that is in the Church & congregacyon of the faythfull whych thynketh it not ynoughe to abstayne from battell & robbe contencion & strife &c. But do also applye the selues to honest occupacions and vnfaulty craftes: wherwith they maye feade not onely the selues but other also with them: whych thyng is sygnyfyed by these rude instrumentes sythes sycles & sawes:

Hear this worde ye children of Israel that the Lorde hath spoken vpon you & vpon all the kynred which I brought out of the land of Egipte saying: You only haue I knowen of all the kynredes of the earth therfore will I visite vpon you all your wickednesses. Can two walke together except they be agreed? Will a lyon roare in the wood when he hath no pray? Will a whelpe crye out of his denne when he hath taken nothyng? Can a byrde fall in a snare vpon the earth where no gynne is layed for her? Shall the snare leape vp from the earth when it hath taken nothyng? Shall the trompet be blowen in a cite & the people not be afrayed? Shall there be any euyll in a cite which the Lorde hath not done? Surely the Lorde God will do nothyng but he reuealeth his secrete vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. The lyon hath roared who will not feare? The Lorde God hath spoken who can but prophesye? Publish in the palaces that are at Azotus & in the palaces that are in the land of Egipte & say: Assemble your selues vpon the mountaynes of Samaria & beholde the great oppressyons that are in the myddes therof & the violences done in the myddes of the house of the Lorde. For they haue not learned to do the thyng that is right sayeth the Lorde which gather violence & robbery in their palaces. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: An aduersary shall be rounde about the land & he shall take away thy power from the & thy palaces shall be spoyled. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Like as the shepherde taketh out of the mouth of the lyon two legges or a piece of the eare: so shall the children of Israel be taken out that dwell in Samaria in the corner of a bed & vpon the couche of a bolster. Heare & testifye in the house of Jacob sayeth the Lorde God the God of hoostes: that in the day that I will visite the wickednesses of Israel vpon them I will also visite the altares of Bethel & the hornes of the altare shall be broken & fall to the grounde. And I will smyte the winter house with the summer house & the houses of yuory shall perish & the great houses shall haue an ende sayeth the Lorde.

Heare this worde ye kyne of Basan that are in the mountayne of Samaria which oppresse the poore & breake the needy which say vnto their masters: Bring & let vs drynke. The Lorde God hath sworne by his holynesse that lo the dayes shall come vpon you that he will take you away with hokes & your posterite with fysshe hokes. And ye shall go out at the breaches one before another & ye shall be cast into the palace sayeth the Lorde. Come to Bethel & do wickedly: to Galgal & encrease wickednesse: & bring your offrynges in the morninge & your tythes the thyrde day. Offer sacrifice of thanckesgeuynge of that which is leuened & crye & publish the free offrynges & willyngnesses: for so loue you to do o ye children of Israel sayeth the Lorde God. Therfore haue I also geuen you clennesse of teeth in all your cities & scarsenesse of breade in all your townes: yet haue ye not returned vnto me sayeth the Lorde. And I also withheld the rayne from you when there were yet three monethes vnto the haruest & caused it to rayne vpon one cite & not vpon another cite: one part was rayned vpon & the part whereupon it rayned not withered. So two or three cities wandred vnto one cite to drynke water & were not satisfyed: yet haue ye not returned vnto me sayeth the Lorde. I haue smytten you with blastyng & mildewe: your gardens & your vynyardes your fygge trees & your olyue trees hath the palmer worme deuoured: yet haue ye not returned vnto me sayeth the Lorde. I haue sent among you the pestilence after the maner of Egipte: your yonge men haue I slayne with the sworde & your horses haue I taken away: & the stynke of your hoostes haue I made to come vp vnto your nostrelles: yet haue ye not returned vnto me sayeth the Lorde. I haue ouerthrowen you as God ouerthrew Sodom & Gomor: & ye were as a firebrande taken out of the burnyng: yet haue ye not returned vnto me sayeth the Lorde. Therfore thus will I do vnto the o Israel: & because I will do this vnto the prepare the to mete thy God o Israel. For lo he that fourmeth the mountaynes & createth the wynde & declareth vnto man what is his thought: that maketh the morninge darcknesse & treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the Lorde God of hoostes is his name.

Heare this worde which I take vp vpon you in lamentacion o house of Israel. The virgine of Israel is fallen & shall not ryse vp any more: she lyeth forsaken vpon her owne grounde & there is none to lyft her vp. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: The cite that went out a thousande shall leaue an hundred & that went out an hundred shall leaue ten vnto the house of Israel. For thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke me & ye shall lyue. But seke not Bethel nether go into Galgal nether take your iourney to Bersabe. For Galgal shall go into captyuite & Bethel shall come to nought. Seke the Lorde & ye shall lyue lest he breake out like a fyre in the house of Joseph & deuoure it & there be none that can quench it in Bethel. Ye that turne iudgement into wormwod & caste downe righteousnesse vnto the earth: seke him that maketh the seuen starres & Orion & turneth the shadowe of death into the morninge & maketh the day darcke with nyght: that calleth for the waters of the see & powreth them out vpon the face of the earth: the Lorde is his name. That strengtheneth the robber against the myghty & bringeth the robber vpon the stronge holde. They hate him that rebuketh in the gate & abhorre him that speaketh vprightly. Therfore because ye treade downe the poore & take from him the burden of corne: ye haue buylded houses of hewen stone but ye shall not dwell in them: ye haue planted pleasaunt vynyardes but ye shall not drynke wyne of them. For I know your many trespasses & your myghty synnes: how that ye vexe the iuste & take rewarde & turne aside the poore in the gate from their right. Therfore he that is prudent shall kepe silence in that tyme: for it is an euyll tyme. Seke the good & not the euyll that ye may lyue & that the Lorde God of hoostes may be with you as ye haue spoken. Hate the euyll & loue the good & set iudgement in the gate: it may be that the Lorde God of hoostes will be mercyfull vnto the remnaunt of Joseph. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes the Lorde: In all streates shall be lamentacion & in all the wayes shall they say: Alas alas. And the husbandman shall be called to mourninge & such as can lamente to wayle. And in all vynyardes shall be lamentacion: for I will go through the myddes of the & smyte them sayeth the Lorde. Woo be vnto them that desyre the day of the Lorde. To what ende shall the day of the Lorde come vnto you? It shall be darcknesse & not lyght. As when a man flyeth from a lyon & a bere meeteth him: or when he commeth into the house & leaneth his hande vpon the wall & a serpent byteth him. Shall not the day of the Lorde be darcknesse & not lyght? Euen very darcke & no lyght at all? I hate & abhorre your feastes & I will not smell at your solemne assemblyes. Though ye offer me your burnt offrynges & your meate offrynges I will not haue them: nether will I regarde your fatte beastes of peace offrynges. Take away from me the noyse of your songes: for I will not heare the melody of your instrumentes. But let iudgement runne downe as waters & righteousnesse as a mighty stronge water. Haue ye offered vnto me sacrifice & meate offrynges in the wildernesse forty yeare o house of Israel? But ye haue borne Sichuth your kynge & Chiun the image of your starre your God which ye made to your selues. Therfore will I cause you to go into captyuite beyonde Damascus sayeth the Lorde whose name is the God of hoostes.

Woo be vnto them that are at ease in Sion & trust in the mountayne of Samaria which are named chefe of the people & vnto whom the house of Israel resorteth. Go ouer vnto Calne & beholde & from thence go into Emath the great: & get you downe to Geth of the Philistines & to all the goodly kyngdomes of these countreis: whether their border be greater then your border. Ye that put farre away the euyll day & cause the seate of violence to come nye: that lye vpon beddes of yuory & stretch out your selues vpon your couches & eate the lambes out of the flocke & the calues out of the myddes of the stalle: that synge to the sounde of the instrumentes of musyke & inuent to your selues instrumentes of musyke like Dauid: that drynke wyne in bolles & anoynte your selues with the chefe ointmentes but are not sory for the plage of Joseph. Therfore now shall they go captyue at the heade of them that go captyue & the banket of them that stretch out themselues shall be taken away. The Lorde God hath sworne by himself sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: I abhorre the excellencye of Jacob & hate his palaces therfore will I deliuer vp the cite with all that therin is. And it shall come to passe that if there remayne ten men in one house they shall dye. And a mans vncle shall take him vp & he that burneth him shall say vnto him that is by the sides of the house: Is there any more with the? And he shall answere: No. Then shall he say: Hold thy peace: for we may not make mencion of the name of the Lorde. For beholde the Lorde commaundeth & he will smyte the great house with breaches & the lytle house with clefftes. Shall horses runne vpon the rocke? Will men plowe there with oxen? For ye haue turned iudgement into gall & the fruite of righteousnesse into wormwod: which reioyce in a thyng of nought & say: Haue we not taken vnto vs strength by our owne horne? Behold I will rayse vp a nacion vpon you o house of Israel sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: & they shall trouble you from the entrynge in of Emath vnto the water brooke of the wyldernesse.

Thus hath the Lorde God shewed vnto me: Behold he fourmed grashoppers in the begynnynge of the shetynge vp of the latter corne & lo it was the latter corne after the kynges mowynges. And when they had made an ende of eatynge vp the grasse of the land I sayde: O Lorde God be mercyfull I beseke the. Who shall rayse vp Jacob for he is but a lytle one? The Lorde repented for this. It shall not be sayeth the Lorde. Thus hath the Lorde God shewed vnto me: Behold the Lorde God called to contende by fyre & it deuoured the great deepe & consumed the portion. Then sayde I: O Lorde God cease I beseke the. Who shall rayse vp Jacob for he is but a lytle one? The Lorde repented for this. This also shall not be sayeth the Lorde God. Thus hath he shewed vnto me: Behold the Lorde stode vpon a wall made by the plommet lyne & had a plommet lyne in his hande. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Amos what seest thou? And I answered: A plommet lyne. Then sayde the Lorde: Behold I will set a plommet lyne in the myddes of my people Israel & will not forgeue them any more. And the hye places of Isaac shall be destroyed & the sanctuaryes of Israel shall be made waste & I will rise vp with the sworde vpon the house of Jeroboam. Then Amasias the prest of Bethel sent vnto Jeroboam kynge of Israel & sayde: Amos hath made a conspiracy against the in the myddes of the house of Israel: the land is not able to beare all his wordes. For thus Amos sayeth: Jeroboam shall dye by the sworde & Israel shall be caryed captyue out of their owne land. Amasias sayde also vnto Amos: O thou seare go flye into the land of Juda & eate thy bread there & prophesye there. But prophesye not any more at Bethel: for it is the kynges chapell & the kynges court. Then answered Amos & sayde vnto Amasias: I was no prophete nether was I a prophetes sonne: but I was a herdman & a gatherer of wylde figges. And the Lorde toke me as I followed the flocke & the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go & prophesye vnto my people Israel. Now therfore heare the worde of the Lorde. Thou sayest: Prophesye not vpon Israel & preache not vpon the house of Isaac. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Thy wife shall be an harlot in the cite & thy sonnes & thy doughters shall fall by the sworde & thy land shall be deuyded by lyne & thou shalt dye in a polluted land & Israel shall go captyue out of their owne land.

Thus hath the Lorde God shewed vnto me: Behold a basket of ripe fruite. And he sayde: Amos what seest thou? And I answered: A basket of ripe fruite. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: The ende is come vpon my people Israel & will not forgeue them any more. And the songes of the temple shall be howlynges in that day sayeth the Lorde God: there shall be many dead bodyes in euery place & they shall cast them out with silence. Heare this ye that deuoure the poore & cause the meke of the land to fayle: saying: When will the newe moone be gone that we may sell corne? & the sabbath that we may open the wheate: that we may make the bushell small & the sycle great & falsify the balaunce by deceyte: that we may bye the poore for money & the meke for a payre of shoes & sell the refuse of the wheate? The Lorde hath sworne by the pryde of Jacob: Surely I will neuer forget any of their workes. Shall not the earth tremble for this & all they that dwell therin mourne? & all it shall ryse vp together like a flode & be troubled & fall downe as the flode of Egipte? And it shall come to passe in that day sayeth the Lorde God that I will cause the sonne to go downe at noone & darken the earth in the cleare day. And I will turne your feastes into mourninge & all your songes into lamentacion & I will bringe sackcloth vpon all loynes & baldnesse vpon all heades & make it as the mourninge for an only sonne & the ende therof as a bytter day. Behold the dayes shall come sayeth the Lorde God that I will sende a hunger in the land: not a hunger of breade nether a thyrst of water but of hearynge the wordes of the Lorde. And they shall wander from see to see & from the north vnto the east to seke the worde of the Lorde & shall not finde it. In that day shall the fayre virgines & the yonge men faynte for thirst: which sweare by the synne of Samaria & say: As thy God o Dan liueth & as the maner of Bersabe liueth: they shall fall & neuer ryse vp.

I Sawe the Lorde stande vpon the altare & he sayde: Smyte the chapytelles that the postes may shake & breake them vpon the heades of them all & I will slee the last of them with the sworde. There shall not one of them flee away: there shall not one of them escape. Though they digge into hell yet shall my hande take them out: though they clyme vp to heauen yet will I bringe them downe. Though they hyde themselues in the toppe of Carmel yet will I searche & take them out: though they be hyd from my syght in the bottome of the see yet will I commaunde the serpent & he shall bite them: though they go into captyuite before their enemyes yet will I commaunde the sworde & it shall slee them: & I will set myne eyes vpon them for euyll & not for good. And the Lorde God of hoostes is he that toucheth the earth & it shall melte & all that dwell therin shall mourne & it shall ryse vp together like a flode & be troubled as the flode of Egipte. He buyldeth his stayres in the heauen & hath founded his vawte vpon the earth: he calleth for the waters of the see & powreth them out vpon the face of the earth: the Lorde is his name. Are not ye vnto me as the children of the Ethiopians o children of Israel sayeth the Lorde? Haue not I brought vp Israel out of the land of Egipte & the Philistines from Caphtor & the Syrians from Cir? Behold the eyes of the Lorde God are vpon the synnefull kyngdome & I will destroye it from the face of the earth: saue that I will not vtterly destroye the house of Jacob sayeth the Lorde. For lo I will commaunde & will shake the house of Israel among all nacions as corne is shaken in a syue & there shall not one graine fall vpon the earth. All the synners of my people shall dye by the sworde which say: The euyll shall not ouertake nor come before vs. In that day will I rayse vp the tabernacle of Dauid that is fallen & close vp the gappes therof & I will rayse vp his ruynes & buylde it as it was in the olde tyme: that they may possesse the remnaunt of Edom & all the nacions vpon which my name is called sayeth the Lorde which doth this. Behold the dayes shall come sayeth the Lorde that the plowman shall take hold of the reaper & the treader of grapes of him that soweth seede & the mountaynes shall drop swete wyne & all the hylles shall flowe therwith. And I will turne the captyuite of my people Israel & they shall buylde the waste cities & dwell therin & shall plante vynyardes & drynke the wyne therof & make gardens & eate the fruite of them. And I will plante them vpon their owne land & they shall no more be plucked vp out of their land which I haue geuen them sayeth the Lorde God.

The prophecy that the kyngdome of Christ shall be spred ouer all the worlde & that the Iewes shall be called.

THe vision of Abdias. Thus sayeth the Lorde God concernynge Edom: We haue heard a rumour from the Lorde & a messenger is sent vnto the nacions: Ryse ye & let vs ryse vp against her to battell. Behold I will make the small among the nacions & thou shalt be greatly despised. The pryde of thyne heart hath deceyued the: thou that dwellest in the holes of the rocke & holdest the hye place of the hyll: though thou exalte thy selfe as the egle & though thou set thy nest among the starres from thence will I bringe the downe sayeth the Lorde. Though theues & robbers by nyght (how shamefully shalt thou be destroyed) would they not steale but that which they thought ynoughe? Though the vyntagers came vpon the would they not leaue some grapes? But how is Esau searched out & his hyd treasures sought vp? All the men of thy confederacy haue brought the vnto the borders: the men that were at peace with the haue deceyued the & preuayled against the: they that eate thy bread haue layed a snare vnder the: there is none vnderstandynge in him. Shall I not in that day sayeth the Lorde destroye the wyse men out of Edom & vnderstandynge out of the mount of Esau? And thy valyaunt men o Theman shall be afrayed: to the ende that euery one of the mount of Esau may be roted out by slaughter. For thy violence done vnto thy brother Jacob shame shall couer the & thou shalt perish for euer. In the day that thou stodest on the other syde: in the day that the aliauntes caryed away captyue his substaunce & strangers entred in at his gates & cast lottes vpon Jerusalem: euen thou were as one of them. But thou shouldest not haue gone vpon the day of thy brother in the day that he became a straunger: nether shouldest thou haue reioyced vpon the children of Juda in the day that they perished: nether shouldest thou haue spoken proudly in the day of their trouble. Thou shouldest not haue entred into the gate of my people in the day of their plage: nether shouldest thou haue looked on their affliccion in the day of their plage nether shouldest thou haue layed violent hondes on their substaunce in the day of their plage. Thou shouldest not haue stande in the crosse waye to cut of them that escaped: nether shouldest thou haue delyuered vp them that remayned in the day of trouble. For the day of the Lorde is at hande vpon all the nacions: as thou hast done so shall it be done vnto the: thy rewarde shall come vpon thyne owne heade. For as ye haue dronken vpon my holy mountayne so shall all the nacions drynke continually: yea they shall drynke & swalowe & shall be as though they had not ben. But vpon mount Sion shall be deliueraunce & it shall be holy & the house of Jacob shall possesse their possessions. And the house of Jacob shall be a fyre & the house of Joseph a flame & the house of Esau stubble & they shall kyndle vpon them & deuoure them: & there shall not remayne any of the house of Esau: for the Lorde hath spoken it. And they of the south shall possesse the mount of Esau & they of the playne the Philistines & they shall possesse the fyeldes of Ephraim & the fyeldes of Samaria & Benjamin shall possesse Galaad. And the captyues of this hoost of the children of Israel shall possesse the Chanaanites vnto Sarepta & the captyues of Jerusalem which are in Sepharad shall possesse the cities of the south. And there shall come vp sauyours on mount Sion to iudge the mount of Esau & the kyngdome shall be the Lordes.

The prophecy that at the commyng of Christ all strength & power shall be put forth of Jurye.

The.iii. Chapter.

EVery man can eschue a persone moued in anger/ for what doth he wysely? Euen so shall the Lorde of Hoostes take awaye from Jerusalē & Juda all possessions & power/all meat and drynke/the captayne & the soudyare/ & iudge & the prophete/the wyse & the aged man/ the worshypfull of fyfte yeare olde / & the honorable: the Senatours/ and men of vnderstandyng: the maysters of craftes & oratours. And I shall geue you chyldren to be youre princes (sayeth the Lorde) & babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euer be doyng violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynst the elder and the vyle persone agaynst & honorable. Ye one shall take a frende of his awne kynred by the bosome/ and saye: a* thou hast clothyng thou shalte be our heade/ for thou mayest kepe vs from thys fall and parell.

Then shall he sweare and saye: I can not helpe you. Moreouer/ there is nether meate ner clothynge in my house/ make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda must decaye, because that both their wordes & councels are agaynst the Lorde, they prouoke the presence of hys magesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of their countenaunce bewrayeth the/ yee they declare their awne synnes them selues/as the Sodomites/and hyde them not. Woo be vnto their soules / for they shalbe heuely rewarded. Then shal they saye: O happie are the godly / for they maye enioye the frutes of their studies. But woo be to the vngodly & vnryghtuous for they shalbe rewarded after their workes. O my people/ b* rybaudes oppresse the, & women haue rule of the.

23 a* That is thou arte better apparelled & richer then we, helpe vs with fode and other thyngs necessarye. All y curses which the prophete here recyteth / were fulfylled in the destruccyon of Jerusalem.

He his people. whō the Pharisees then oppressed: now Prestes / & suche as falsly boast the selues to be spirituall: Iustly called exactours inasmuche as they requere their rightes (as they call it) more by mennes traditiōs / then by ỹ worde of God: and do not in verie dede Lukes to God as money for them selues.

Oppressed / is: spoyled and euen shaue / so that they shuld learne o ryght. What horrible spyder or mischeuously is ther that rendereth them not somewhat?

O my people, thy leaders deceaue the / & treade out the waye of thy forestepppes. The Lord is here to comen of the matter, & standeth to geue iudgment wyth the people.

The Lorde shall come forth to reason wyth the Senatours & princes of his people, and shall saye thus vnto them: It is ye that haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the robbery of the poore is in youre house. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people and marre the faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of Hostes reuyle them.

Moreouer thus sayeth ỹ Lorde: Seinge ỹ daughters of Siō are be come so proude / and come in with stretched out neckes / and with wayne wanton eyes: seynge they come in tryppynge so nycely with their fete: Therfore shall the Lorde * shaue the heades of ỹ daughters of Sion / & make their bewtye bare in ỹ daye. In that daye shall the Lorde take awaye ỹ gorgiousnes of their rapparell / & spanges. cheynes partlettes and colares / bracelettes & hoodes ỹ goodly flowred wyde & brodered rayment brusshes & headbandes, rynges and garlandes / holydayes clothes & bales, kerchues & pynnes, glasses & smocks / bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell there shalbe stynck amonge them. And for their girdles there shalbe lowse bandes. And for wellsette heare there shalbe baldenesse. In steade of a stomacher / a sack cloth / & for their bewty wyntherydnesse & sonneburnyng. Their housbandes and their myghtye men shall perysh with the swerde in batell.

* The Sisters shal mourne & cōplayne / because not onely the housbandes shall perysh wyth the swerd but also the Iudges & gouerners of iustice. He taketh the place of iudgmēt for the Iudges: for

Whether ther be chyldē christened / or mariages made / or men come to the table of the Lorde whether the spirit be dyspised / or the deed vnexpēd / ther is euer some what required. c ¶ To shaue the heades of women is to make them confounded and ashamed / for it is shame to a woman to be shaue. 1. Cor. 11. a. So that the Prophete herby speaketh / by a borowed speache / that the Lorde shall make the daughters of Sion (by which vnderstande the wemē of Iurye) confounded & ashamed / bryng them to extreme aduersyte & pouertye / & euen to nought. Iosephus maketh mencyon that Ierusalem which was the chefe cyte therof was ones so famished that a certē womā of the cyte ate her owne chyld. ¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Of Christ and his vineparde / wyth an execracyon of couetousnes and of dronkennes.

Now well then / I wyll synge my beloued frende a songe of his vyneyarde. My beloued frende hath a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plentyous grounde. Thys he hedged / thys he walled rounde aboute / & plāted it wt goodly grape. In ỹ myddest of it buylded he a towre / and made a  wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he loked ỹ it shulde bringe him grapes, it brought forth thornes. I the powe now my cause (O ye Cytyzens of Ierusalem & whole Iuda:) Iudge I praye you betwixte me / & my vineyard. What more could haue bene done for it / that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

 By the wyne presse vnderstandeth Sathane & ministracio of the worde of God in the Church.

Well, I shall tell you how I will do with my vineyarde: I will take the b * hedge frō it / that it maye perysh, & breake downe ỹ wall, that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyll laye it waste ỹ it shall nether be twysted nor cut / but beare thornes and briers. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes / that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vineparde of the Lord of Hostes it is the house of Israel & whole Iuda his fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equyte but le there is wrōge: for rightuousnesse / lo / it is but myserye.

b * By the hedge & wall is figured the custodye of Aungels / wherwith the people of God (which is called the vineparde of the Lorde) was cōpassed aboute & defended.

Wo be vnto you ỹ ioyne one house to another / & bringe one lande so nygh vnto another tyll ye can get no more grounde. Wyll ye dwell vpō the earth alone? ¶ The Lorde of Hostes rowndeth me thus in myne eare: shal not many greater & more gorgious houses be so waste, ỹ no mā shal dwell in thē? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a Quarte / and .xxx. bushels of sede shall geue but thre.

Wo be vnto them that ryse vp early to vse them selues in dronckennes / and yet at nyght are moze superfluous wyth wyne. In those companyes are harpes and lutes/ tabzettes and pypes/ and wyne. But they regarde not the wozcke of the Lozde/ and consyder not the operacion of his handes. Therfoze commeth my folk also in captyuite, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glozy shalbe myxte wyth hunger / and their pryde shalbe marred for thyrste. Therfoze gapeth hell/ and openeth her mouth marueilous wyde: that pryde, boostynge and wysdome/ with soch as retoyse therin/ shaye descende in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall / he shalbe brought lowe/ & ye hygh lokes of the proude layde downe. But the Lozde of Hostes / that holy God: shalbe exalted & vntouched/ when he shall declare hys equyte and ryghteousnesse after this maner: Then shall ye lambes eate their apoynted foder/ & shall fede plenteously in the moũtaynes. Wo be vnto vayne persones/ that drawe wyckednes vnto thẽ/ as it were with a coorde: & synne/ as it were wt a cart rope. Which vse to speake on thys maner: let him make haste now/ and go forth with hys worcke/ that we maye se it. Lett ye counsell of the holy one of Israel come/ and drawe nye/ that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that call euell good/ & good euell: which make darcknesse lyght & lyght darcknesse / that make sower swete/ and swete sower. Wo be vnto them that are wyse in their awne syght/ and thyncke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Wo be vnto them/ that are connynge men to suppe oute wyne and experte to sett vp dronckennesse. Whose geue sentence wyth the vngodly for rewardes / but condempne the iust cause of the ryghteous.

Therfoze lyke as fyre lycketh vp ye stawe/ and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euẽ so (when their rote is full /) their blossome shall vanysh awaye lyke dust or smoke: for they despyse ye lawe of the Lord of Hostes/ and blaspheme the worde of the holy maker of Israel.

Therfoze is the wrath of the Lord kyndled also agaynst his people and he *stretcheth hys hande at them: yee he shall smyte so, that the hylles shall tremble. And their carcases shall lye in the open stretes, lyke myre. Ifter all this, the wrath of God shal not ceasse/ but he shall stretch hys hande wyder. And he shall gyue a token vnto a straunge people/ and call vnto them in a farre coũtre: and beholde / they shall come hastely wyth spede. There is not one faynt nor feble amõge thẽ/ no not a slogysh nor slepery persone. There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes/ nor lowse their lachet of his shue

* To shake: stretch forth his hand at them: is to prouoke & make readye to stryke them / & greuously to punysh the for their synnes. As after in the xiii.c. If he stretch forth his hande who wyll withdraw it agayne?

Their arowes are sharpe / and their bowes bent. Their horse hookes are lyke flynt / and their cartwheles like a stormy winde. Their crye is as it were of a lyon/ and the roaryng of thẽ lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare/ and hantch vp the praye, and no mã shall recouer it or get it from thẽ. In that daye they shalbe so fearce vpon them/ as the see. And yf we loke vnto the lande/ beholde, it shalbe all darcknesse and sorowe. If we loke to heauen: beholde / it shalbe darck wyth carefull desperacyon.

a 4. Reg. xvi. a. 2. Paralip. xxviij. a

IT happened in the tyme of Ahaz the sonne of Joatham whych was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Juda: that* Razin the kyng of Syria/ and Phakeh the sonne of Romeliah/ kyng of Israel: went vp toward Jerusalem to besege it/ but wanne it not. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde worde therof/ that Syria and Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (yee and the hertes also of his people) lyke as a tre in the felde/ that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at ꝑ head of the ouer pole/ in the fote path by the fullers grounde/ and saye vnto hym 'take hede to thy selfe and be styll/ but feare not/ nether be faynthearted/ for these two tales: that is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes/ the wrath and furiousnes of Razin the Syrian and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim & Romelies sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the/ saying: We B wyll goo downe in to Juda/ vexe them/ and bringe them vnder vs/ and set a kynge there/ euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus sayeth ꝑ Lorde God therto/ It shall not so goo forth/ nether come so to passe: for the head cytye of the Syrians is Damascus/ but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after fyue & thre score yeare/ shall Ephraim be nomore a people. And the chefe cytie of Ephraim is Samaria/ but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. And yf ye beleue not/ there shall no promyse be kepte with you.

Moreouer/ God spake vnto Ahaz/ sayng: require a token of the Lorde thy God/ whether it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde the heyght aboue. Then sayde Ahaz: I wyll require none/ nether wyll I tempte the Lorde. The Lord answered: Then heare to/ ye of ꝑ house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you/ that ye be greuous vnto men/ but ye C must greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a tokē of hym selfe: Beholde/ a virgin shall conceaue and beare a sonne/ and shall call his name* Emanuel. Butter and hony shall he eate, that he maye knowe the euell/ and chose the good. But or euer ꝑ chylde come to knowledge/ to eschue the euell and chose the good: The lande (that thou art so afrayde for) shalbe desolate of both her kynges.

* That is/ God with vs.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people/ and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme ꝑ Ephraim departed from Juda) thorowe the kynge of the Assirians For at the same tyme * shall the Lord whistle for the flies that are about the water of Egypt and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come/ and shall lyght all in the valeyes, in the bawtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges/ and in all corners.

At the same tyme shall the Lord* shaue D the hearre of the head and the fete and the beerd cleane of/ with the rasoure ꝑ he shall paye them withall beyonde the water: namely/ with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe & two sheepe. Then because of the aboundaūce of mylck, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lande shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one and were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shalbe turned to brears and thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall all ꝑ lande be come brears and thornes. And as for all hylles that now are hewen downe thou shalt not come vpon them/ for feare of brears and thornes. But the catell shall be driuen thyther/ and the sheepe shall fede there.

¶ The delyuerance of the land by Emanuel. The done of offence at which many shall stomble.

¶ The viij. Chapter.

MOreouer the Lord sayde vnto me: Take the a greate leaf/ and wryte in it/ as men do with a penne/ that the spede hym to robbe/ and haste hym to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me faythfull wytnesses Uriah the preest/ and Zacharias the sonne of Barachias. After that went I vnto the Prophetisse/ that now had conceaued & borne a sonne. ¶ The.xi. Chapter.

AFter thys there shall come a rodd forth of the kynrede of Jesse and a blossome out of his rote. The spyrite of the Lorde shall lyght vpō it: the spyrite of wysdome, and vnderstandynge: the spyrite of counsell/and strength: the spyrite of knowledge/and of the feare of God: and shall make him feruent in the feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thyng that shall be brought before his eyes/ nether reproue a matter at ꝑ fyrst hearyng: but wyth ryghtuousnesse shall he iudge the poore/and with holynes shall he reproue the symple of the worlde.

a* That is/ worldlye and earthly men/ which sekē no thinge but that which is worldly & cut ꝑ same which he calleth here wycked.

He shall smyte the a* worlde b wyth the staff of his mouth / & wyth the breath of hys mouth shall he slaye the wicked. Ryghtuousnesse shalbe the gyrdle of his loynes / trueth and faythfulnesse / the gyrdynge vp of hys raynes. Then shall the wolfe dwell with the lambe / and the Leoparde shall lye downe by the gote. Bullockes / Lyons and catell shall kepe company together so that a lytle childe shall dryue them forth. The cowe & the Bere shall fede together, & their yonge ones shall lye together. The Lyon shall eate straw like the ore or ꝑ cowe. The chylde whyle he sucketh shall haue a delyte to the serpentes nest/ and when he is weaned, he shall put his hād in to the Cockatrice denne No man shall do euell to another/no man shal destroye another/in all the *hyll of my Sanctuary. For the earth shalbe full of the knowledge of the Lorde/euen as though the water of the see flowed ouer the earth.

Then shall the gentyles enquere after ꝑ rote of Jesse, which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentyles, for his dwellynge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnaunt of hys people (whych are left alyue). From the Assirians, Egyptians, Arabians/ Moriās, Elamites/ Caldeyes/ Antiochiās and Flanders of the see. And he shall sett vp a token amonge the Gentyles / and gather together the dispersed of Israel / yee & the out castes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim and the envyte of Juda shalbe cleane rooted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euell wyll to Juda/ & Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall flye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the West / and spoyle them together that dwell towarde the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shall lett their handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The Lorde also shall dreue the tunges of the Egyptyans see, & with a myghtie wynde shall he lyft vp his hande ouer Nilus, & shall smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall he make a waye for his people / ꝑ remaynyth frō ꝑ Assirians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites/ what time they departed out of ꝑ lād of Egipt.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

O ꝑ then thou shalt saye: O Lord/ I thāke the, for thou wast displeased at me but thou hast refrayned thy wrath / & hast mercy vpon me. Beholde / God is my health in whō I trust / & am not afrayde. For the Lorde God is my strength, & my prayse / he also shalbe my refuge. Therfore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of ꝑ *wells of the Sauioure / & then shall ye saye: Let vs geue thankes vnto the Lord, & call vpō his name, & declare his counsels amonge the people, & kepe thē in remēbrauce, for his name is exellēt. Syng prayses vnto ꝑ Lord, for he doth greate thinges, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Crye oute/ & be glad thou ꝑ dwellest in Sion for great is thy prynce: the holy one of Israel.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruccyō of Babylon, the captyuyte and the commyng agayne of the people.

a* The wells of the Sauioure are the worde of God/ the doctrine of the Gospell & promyses of Christ, wherewith trembling soules & afflycted consciences are refreshed. Out of these (sayth he) that they shall drawe water/not out of mennes traditions: whych are but pytte

Babylon/Moab. The Prophecy

d The comparyth the death of Nabuchodonosor to the fallyng of Lucifer the morynge starre/ whych he raiseth the chylde of the morynge because it appeareth chefely in the morynge. e The parable ought to haue happened vnto the prynce earth wold lyke the morynge starre whych no man can take out of heaue: And thou that wast so mighty & dedtroyedst what people thou wouldest & vnto whome it was a pastyme to ouerthrowe nacions/ hast retourned soche measure as thou broughtest. Such a lyke thynge is therem Exec. xxvi. Against kyng Tyrus.

How art thou fallen frō heaue (O Lucifer) thou fayre morynge chylde: hast thou gotten a fall vnto the grounde/ thou yt not withstandyng) dydest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I wyll clyme vp into heauen and make my seate aboue the starres of God: I wyll syt vpon the glorious mount toward the North/ I wyll clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wilbe lyke the highest of all. Yet darre I saye/ that thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that se the/ shall narowly loke vpon the/ and thinke in them selues sayenge: Is this the man that brought all landes in feare, and made the kingdomes afrayde: Is this he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layde the cities to the grounde/ which let not his prisoners go home?

How happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye euery one at home in his awne palace, with worshipe, & thou art cast out of thy graue like a wilde braunch: like as dead mens rayment that are shot thorow with the swerde: as they that go downe to the stones of the depe: as a dead coarse that is troden vnder fote: & art not buried with them: Euen because that thou hast wasted thy lande and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wicked shalbe without honour for euer. There shal awaye be sought to destroye their children/, for their fathers wickednes: they shall not come vp agayne to possesse ꝯ lande/ & fyll the worlde full of castels and townes.

I will stande vp agaynst them, sayeth the Lorde of hostes and root out the name & generacion of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and will gene it to the Otters/ and will make water poddels of it. And I will swepe them out with the besome of destruccion, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lorde of Hostes hath sworne an othe, sayinge: It shall come to passe as I haue determyned: & shalbe fulfylled as I haue deuysed. The Assirias shalbe destroyed in my lande/ & vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder fote. Wherthorow his yock shall come from you/ & hys burthen shalbe taken from youre shoulders. Thys deuyce hath God taken thorow the whole worlde/ and thus is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of Hostes determen a thynge, who wyll dysanulle it? And yf he stretch forth hys hande/ who wyll holde it in agayne?

The prophecye agaynst Moab.

The.xv. Chapter.

This is the heuy burthen vpō Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the nyght season: The walles of Moab perysshed in the nyght/ & vanysshed awaye: They wente to Bayth & Dibon in ꝯ hye places, for to wepe: Moab dyd mourne from Nebo to Medeba: a All their heades were colled/ and all their beardes shauen. In their stretes were they gyrded aboute with sack cloth. In all ꝯ toppes of their houses and stretes was there nothynge, but mournynge & weppynge. Heshebon and Eleale cryed, that their voyce was heard vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleared and cryed for very sorow of their myndes: Wo is myherte for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the cyte of Zoar/ which is lyke a fayre frutefull bullock/ they went vp to Luhith, wepinge. The waye towarde Horonaim was full of lamentacyon for the hurt. The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, the grasse was wythred ꝯ herbes destroyed & what necessary grene thinge there was besyde. In lyke maner the thynge that was left them of their substaunce, they carryed it by water to Araby. The crie went ouer ꝯ whole lande of Moab frō Eglaim vnto Beer was there nothinge but mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude/ for the enemye had sent thither a bonde of men/ which as a lyon laye a wayte for the remnaunt of the lande & for them that were escaped.

But ỹ trone of youre Kyngdome is full of grace / therfore he that sytteth vpō it with faythfulnesse and truely in the house of Dauid knowe the thinge / & do hys diligence to helpe shortly / accordyng to equyte & rightuousnes. Is for Moabs pryde (shall they answere) it is well knowne. And all though they be excellent proude / arrogant / & hye mynded: yet is their strength nothynge like. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab / vnder thorow they come al to mourne: and now that they be smytten / they take their deuyce beneth by the bryckwall / and make their complaynte.

¶ The suburbes also of Helebō were made waste / & the Princes of the Gentiles hewed downe the vyneyardes of Sibma / whych were planted wyth noble grapes / and spred vnto Jazer / and wente vnto the ende of the deserte / whose braunches stretched them selues forth beyonde the see. Therfore I mourned for Jazer / & for ỹ vyneyards of Sibma wt great sorow. I poured my teares vpō Heselon and Eleale / for all their songes were layde downe / in their harueste & gatheryng of their grapes: Myrth and chere was gone out of the felde & vyneyardes / in so moch / ỹ Wherfore my bely rōbled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs sake / and myne inwarde membres / for the bryckwalles sake. For it happened thus also: when Moab sawe ỹ she was turned vpsyde downe: she went vp on hye in to her Sanctuary / to make her prayer there, but she myght not be helped. This is the deuyce / which the Lorde toke in hande at that tyme agaynst Moab. ¶ A prophecye agaynst Damascus.

¶ The xvij. Chapter.

THis is the heuy burthen vpō Damascus: Beholde Damascus shal be no more a cytye / but an heape of brosten stones. The cytyes of Aroer shalbe waste: the catell shall lye there / & noman shall fraye them awaye. Ephraim shall no more be strōge / & Damascus shall no more be a Kyngdome. And as for the glory of ỹ remnaunt of ỹ Syrians / it shalbe as the glory of the chyldrē of Israel / sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. At that tyme also shall the glory of Jacob be very poore / & hys fatnes leane. It shal happē to thē / as whē one shearyth in harueste, whych cutteth his hand full with the sickle / & whē one gatherth the eares together in the valleye / of *Raphaim / there remayneth yet some eares ouer: Or as when one shaketh an olyue tree / whych fyndeth but two or thre olyue beries aboue in the toppe & foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken.

B *Raphaim / is a valley nye vnto Jerusale / on the Northside of Jewry. Josue. xviij. & ij. Regum. v

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto his maker / & turne hys eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shall not turne to the aulters ỹ are the worke of his awne handes nether shall he loke vpon groues & ymages / which his fingers haue wrought. At the same tyme C shall their stronge cities be desolate / like as were once ỹ forsakē plowes & corne / whych they forsoke, for feare of ỹ chyldrē of Israel.

So shalt thou (O Damascus) be desolate / because thou hast forgotē God thy Sauyoure / & hast not called to remembraunce the rock of thy strēgth. Wherfore thou hast also sett a fayre plāte & graffed a straūge braūch. In the daye when thou dydest plante it / it was greate / and gaue soone the frute of thy sede: But in the daye of harueste / thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes & mysseryes.

Wo be to the multitude of moch people / that rusch in like the see & and to the braye of D folke, that rēne ouer all lyke greate waters. For though so many people increase as the flowyng waters and though they be armed / yet they flee farre of, and vanish awaye lyke the dust with the wynde vpon an hill and as the whyrle wynde thorow a storme. Though they be fearfull at nyght, yet in the morning it is gone wyth them. Thys is their porcyon / that do vs harme, and herytage of them, that robbe vs.

WO be to the lande of tyrēg shyppes / A whych is of thys syde the floude of Ethiopia: which sendeth her message ouer the see in shyppes of reedes vpō the water: and sayeth: goo soone / & do youre message vnto a straunge and harde folke: to a fearfull people, & to a people that is further then this: to a desperate and pylled folke, whose lande is deuided frō vs with ryuers of water. Yee all ye that syt in the cō- B passe of the worlde, and dwell vpon the earth: when the token shalbe geuen vpon the mountaynes / then loke vp: and when the horne bloweth / then herken to / for thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me. I sayde me downe / and pondred the matter in my house at the Noone daye whē it was hote: And there fell a mystynge shower / lyke a dew / as it happeneth in Harueste. But the frutes were not yet rype cut of / and the grapes were but younge and grene. Then one smote of /

th

the grappes wt an hoke yet he hewed downe also the bowes and the braūches / & dyd cast thē awaye. And thus they were layde waste/for the foules of the mountaynes / & for the beastes of the earth together. So that the foules sat ther vpon/ & the beastes of ẏ earth wintered there. Then shall there be a present brought vnto the Lorde of Hostes: euē that harde folke, that fearful folke & that further is then thys: that desperate and pylled folke (whose lande is deuyded frō vs wyth floudes

Lorde of Hostes: euē vnto the hyll of Syon.

For the Lorde hath made Egypte dronchen with the spryte of errour / & they shall yle it in all matters: euen lyke as a dronchē man goeth spewynge aboute. For Egypte shall lacke good councell / so that they shall not knowe what to do, neither begynnynge nor ende, ne-ther vpon the lande ner water. Then shall ẏ Egyptyās be lyke vnto women / afrayde and astonyed / at ẏ lyftyng vp of the head / which the Lorde of Hostes shall lyft vp ouer them. The land of Iuda also shall make the Egyp-cyans afrayde / who so doth but speake vpon it / shall put them in feare: And that because of the coūcell / which ẏ Lorde of Hostes hath deuyld agaynst them. Then shall the fyue cytyes of Egypte speake wyth the Cananytes tunge / & sweare by the Lorde of Hostes / & Heliopolis shalbe one of them. At the same tyme shall the Lorde of Hostes haue an auf-ter in the myddest of the lande of Egypt, with this tytle therby vnto the Lorde. This shal-be a token or testymonye vnto the Lorde of Hostes in the lande of Egypte / when they shall crye vnto him / because of those that op-presse them: that he shall sende them a Cap-tayne and a Sauyoure to delyuer them.

Moreouer / Egypte shalbe bought vnto the Lorde, & the Egyptyās also shall knowe the Lorde at the same tyme: they shall do him reuerēce with peaceofferinges / & with meat-offrynges: they shall promyse him offringes: yee and paye hym allo Thus the Lorde shall smyte Egypte and heale it agayne: & so shall they turne to the Lorde / & he also shall haue mercy vpon thē / & saue thē. Then shall there be a cōmen waye out of Egypt in to Assyria. The Assyrians shall come into Egypte / & the Egyptiās into Assyria. The Egyptyans also & the Assyrians shall both haue one Godes seruyce. Then shall Israel with honoure be the thyrde to Egypte & Assur. And the Lorde of Hostes shall blesse them / sayinge: Blessed is my people of the Egyptyans / Assur is the worke of my handes, but Israel is myne en-heritaunce.

Agaynst Egypte and Ethiopia.

¶ The.xx. Chapter.

Egypte

In some texte: And he that dwelleth in this Ile shall say Jerusalem and the lande of Juda is ruthly called an Ile/ because it was beset rounde about with enemyes & wicked nacyons/ as it had bene with the sees: therfore ought it to have trusted to the only helpe and ayde of God. The church also is an Ile/ that is troubled with diuersitoines/ and that by the onely heape of Gods in Egypte: For beleue stedfastly that the persecuters to persecute any further/ than the church may suffer/ or then is profytable for it.

In the same yeare that Tharthan came to Asdod, where Sargon the king of the Assyrians sent hym/ what tyme as he also besieged Asdod, and wanne it the same season: Then spake the Lorde vnto Esay the sonne of Amoz, saying: go & lowse of that sack cloth fro thy loynes/ & put of thy shues fro thy fete. And so he dyd/ goinge naked and barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruaut Esay goeth naked & barefote, it is a token & signifyenge of the thynge/ that after thre yeare shall come vpon Egypt & Ethiopia For euen thus shall the kynge of the Assyrians dryue both yong & olde as prisoners naked and barefote out of Egypte & Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at their wittes ende/ & ashamed one of another: the Egyptians of the Moriens/ and the Moriens of the Egyptians at the sight of their glory. Moreouer they that dwell in the Ile shall se euen the same daye: beholde this is oure hope/ to whom we fled to seke helpe/ that we might be deliuered from the kynge of the Assyrians. How shall we escape?

In a Bythe waste sea is vnderstanded Babylon. It is so called/ because of the exceadynge great cruelties & tyrannye/ wherwith it exercised the Jewes.

B Herof is there a prouerbe: Babylon is a see of euelles and eate the wast of the see/ is the most tempestious & desolate place/ and that is seyd possible to be copted thorow.

C Against Babylon Idumea and Arabia.

C The.xxj. Chapter.

Thys is the heuy burthen of the a* waste see: A grieuous vysiõ was shewed vnto me like as when a storme of wynde & rayne rusheth in from the wylderneße/ that terrible lande. Who so maye dyscreaue (sayde the voyce) let him dyscreaue: Who so may destroye/ let him destroye. Up Elam besege it O Madai/ for I wyll stylle all their groninges. With thys/ the reynes of my backe were full of payne: Pãges came vpõ me/ as vpõ a womã in her trauayle When I herde it, I was abashed: & when I loked vp I was afrayde. Myne hert pãted/ I trẽbled for feare. The b* darkenesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

Yee loone make ready the table (sayde this boyer) kepe the watch, eate & drincke. Up ye Captaynes, take you to youre shylde/ for thus the Lorde hath charged me: go thy waye/ & set a watchman, that he may tell what he seyth. And when he had wayted dylygently/ he sawe two horsmen: the one rydynge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a Camell. And the lyon cryed: Lorde/ I haue stande waytynge all the whole daye, & haue kepte my watche all the nyght. Wyth that came there one rydynge vpon a charet/ whych answered and sayde: Babylon is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, & all the ymages of her Gods, are smyttẽ to the groũde. This/ O my felowe threshers and fanners, haue I hearde of the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel, to shew it vnto you.

B Why darkenes here do some vnderstande tribulacyõ and aduersitye/ as before in the .v. & .vij. chapters & sorowe shalbe al darkenes & sorowfulnes.

C The heuy burthen of Duma.

One of Seir cryed vnto me: Watchman what hast thou espyed by night/ watchman what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watchman answered: The daye drawesketh on and the nyght is cõmyng: If youre request be earnest, then aske & come agayne.

C The heuy burthen of Arabia.

In euen ye shall abyde in the wod in the waye towarde Dedanim. Mete the thurstye with water (O ye cytezyns of Thema) mete those with bred that are fled. For they shall runne awaye from the weapen/ from the drawen swerde, frõ the bent bowe, & from the greate batell. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me/ ouer a yeare shall all the power of Cedar be gone lyke as whẽ the office of an hyred seruaunt goeth out: And the remnaũt of the good Archers of Cedar, shalbe very fewe: For the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken it.

C A prophecye agaynst Jerusalem.

C The.xxij. Chapter.

The heuy burthẽ vpon the a* valley of vysyons. What hast thou there to do that thou clymmest vp into the house toppe/ O thou cyte of miracles seducyous & wylfull? Seinge/ thy slayne men are nether kylled wyth swerde/ ner deed in batel. For all thy Captaynes gat them to their horses frõ the ordynaunce/ yet they are all together riddẽ awaye, & fled farre of. When I perceaued that I sayde: awaye fro me that I may wepe bytterly. Take no labour for to comforte me/ as touching the destruccyon of my people. For this is the daye of the Lord of Hostes wherin he wyll plage/ treade downe, & wede out the valley of vysyons/ & breake downe the walles/ wyth soch a crack/ that it shall geue a sownde in the mountaynes.

A a* Jerusalẽ is called the valley of vysyons/ because it had so many fearse that as prophetes & teachers in Goddes worde.

plorauit Dominus maxime Dñe populi

I sawe the Elamytes take the quyuers to carte & to horse/ & the walles were bare fro harneße. Thy goodly valleys were full of charettes, the horse men made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the couerynge of Juda put from thence, and then was sene the sege of the tymbre house. There shall ye se the ryftes in the walles of the cite of Dauid/ wherof there shalbe many. Ye shall gather together the waters of the lower pole/ and tell the houses of Jerusalem/ & breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a pyt betwixte the two walles of the water of the olde pole, & nothinge regarde hym that toke it in hande/ & made it. And at the same tyme shall the Lorde of Hostes call men to wepinge, mournyng/ to baldnesse & puttynge on of sack cloth. But they to fulfyl their lust & wylfulnes, slaughter oxen: they

*Sapiē.b.3 Esa.22.c.

C Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Hostes: Go in to the treasurye vnto Sobna the gouernoure, & saye vnto hym: What hast thou here to do? & from whence comest thou: that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had caused a costly tombe of stone to be made for hym selfe, & a place to lye in to be hewē out of a rock. Beholde, the Lorde shall cast the out by violence, he will deck the of another fashyon, & put vpon the a straunge cloth. He shall carye the into a farre countre, lyke a ball with his hādes. There shalt thou dye, there shall the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende: thou vylleyne of the house of the Lorde: I will shutte the out of thyne office, & put the from thyne estate.

F After this will I call my seruaunt Eliakim the sonne of Helkiah, & araye him with thy cote, and gyrde hym with thy gyrdle, and I will geue thy power in to hys hande. He shalbe a father of the cytesyns of Jerusalē, & of the hymred of Juda: I will also laye the b* keye of Dauids house vpō his shoulders, & ye he open no man shall shut: and yf he do shut, no mā shall open. I will fasten him to a nayle in the place of ỹ moost syghe faythfulnesse, & he shalbe vpō the glorious trone of his fathers house. C They shall hange vpon hym all the glory of his fathers house, of the chyldrē & chylders chyldrē, all apparell small & great, all instrumentes of measure & musyke. This shall come to passe (sayeth ỹ Lord of Hostes) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the hyghest faythfulnesse, shalbe pluckt of. And when the weyght that hangeth vpō it, shall fall, be brokē, & hewen in peces. For the Lord hym selfe hath sayde it.

b* By the keye is signified auctorite & power as in Apoc. iij. b. This is he. &c. that hath the keye &c.

C A prophecye against Tyrus, and a promes to recouere it agayne.

C The. xxiij. Chapter.

O heuy burthen vpon Tyrus. Mourne ye shippes of Tharsis, for she is thrownē downe to ỹ groūde, & cōquered of them that are come from Cethim. The indwellers of the Iland, the marchaūtes of Sidon, & they that occupyed the see (of whom thou wast full somtyme) are at a poynte. For by see were ther fruites brought vnto ỹ, & all maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen marchet of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yee & all the power of the see cōplayneth, & sayeth: O ỹ I had neuer traueled with chylde, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neyther norysshed dope nor brought vp daughter. As soone as Egypte perceaueth it, she wylbe as sorye as Tirus it selfe. Go ouer a* the see, mourne ye that dwell in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cite, which hath bene of lōge antiquite? whose natiues dwellynge farre of, cōmende her so greatly? Who hath deuised such thyng vpon Tirus the crowne of all cytyes, whose marchaūtes & Captaynes were the hyghest & principall of the worlde? Euen the Lord of Hostes hath deuysed it ỹ he may put downe all pōpe & mynysh all the glory of ỹ world. Go thorow thy lande (O thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a gyrdle more.

a* Some reade in to Tharsus: he speaketh vnto the marchauntes of Egypte & to the marchātes of the Iles: ỹ they now get thē to Tharsus, because Tyrus is destroyed.

Thus the Lorde that remoueth the kyngdomes, & hath taken in hande agaynst that myghtye Canaan to rote it out: hath stretched out hys hande ouer the b* see, and sayde: From hence forth shalt thou make no more myrth (O thou daughter of Sidon: for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethens. Stande vp therfore, and go where the enemye wyll carye the, where thou shalt also haue no rest. Beholde (for thyne ensample) the Chaldees were soche a people, that no man was lyke them. Assur buylded them: he set vp hys castels & palaces, & broke them downe agayne. And therfore mourne (ye shyppes of the see) for youre power shalbe throwne downe.

b* He meaneth Cyrus, which standeth in the see.

After that, shall the lxx yeares of Tyrus (euē as longe as their kynges lyfe was) be forgottē. And after lxx. yeares, it shall happen to Tirus as with an harlot that playeth vpon a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) and go about the cytye, thou art yet an vnknowne wenche, make pastyme wyth dyuerse balettes, wherby thou mayest come in to acquaintaūce. Thus shall it happen after lxx. yeares. The Lorde shall vyset the cytye of Tyrus, and it shall come agayne to her marchaundyse, and shall occuppye wyth all the kyngdomes that be in the worlde. But all her occuppynge and wynnynge shalbe halowed vnto the Lorde. For then shall they laye vp nothyng beby nde them nor vpō heapes: but the marchaundyse of Tirus shall belonge vnto the cytesyns of the Lorde, to ỹ stadyng and sustenynge of the hungryr, and to the clothynge of the aged.

C A prophecye vpon the tribulacyon that shall fall vpon the worlde because of synne.

C The. xxiiij. Chapter.

Beholde, the Lorde shall waste and plage the worlde, he shall make ỹ face of the earth desolate, & scatre abroade the inhabytours therof. Then shall the a* preest be as the people, the master as the seruaūt, ỹ dame lyke ỹ mayde, the seller lyke the byer, he that lendeth vpon vsury vsury/like vnto him ye boroweth vpō vsury/ the creditoure/as the detter. Yee myserably shall the worlde be wasted & clene destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determined in him selfe. The earth shalbe heuye & decaye: The face of ye earth shall perish & fall awaye/ ye proude people of the worlde shall come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her vnderwellers.

For why? they haue offended ye lawe chaūged the ordynaunces & made the *euerlastynge testamēt of none effecte. And therfore shall the curse deuoure ye earth: for they that dwell therō haue synned wherfore they shalbe brēt also and those that remayne, shall be very fewe. The swete wyne shall mourne, the grapes shalbe weake, & all ye haue bene merye in harte/ shall sighe. The myrth of tabretes shalbe layde downe, the shere of the toppfull shall cease/ & the pleasure of lutes shall haue an ende: there shall no more wyne be dronke wt myrth the beere shalbe bytter to thē that drynke it the wicked cities shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shut/ that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shall there be lyke vp a crye because of wyne, all mirth shall vanysh awaye, & all ioye of ye earth shal passe. Desolacyon shall remayne in the cyttye: and the gates shalbe smytten wyth wastnesse. For it shall happen vnto all landes & to all people/ lyke as when a man smyteth downe the olyues/ that are left vpon the tree: or seketh after grapes, whē the wyne gatherynge is out. And those same (that remayne) shall lyft vp their voyce/ & be glad/ & shall magnyfye the glory of the Lorde, euē from the see/ & prayse the name of the Lorde God of Israel / in the valeys & Flondes. We heare songes sunge to the prayse of the righteous, frō all the endes of the worlde. Therfore I must speake: O myne vnfrutefulnesse/ O my powerte. Woo is me/ all is full of synners / wheych offende of purpose and malyce. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpō the earth) there is at hande for the/ feare/ pyt and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crye/ shall fall in to the pyt. And yf he come out of the pyt/ he shalbe taken vp the snare. For the wyndowes aboue shalbe opened/ and the fondacion of the earth shall
D moue. The earth shall geue a greate crack/ it shall haue a sore ruyne/ & take an horrible fall. The earth shall stacker lyke a dronken man/ & be takē awaye lyke a tent. Her mysdedes shall lye so heuy vpō her/ that she must fall/ and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the Lord muster together the hye hoste aboue/ and the kynges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled to gether as prysoners be/ and shalbe shut in one warde & punyshed innumerable dayes. The Moone & the Sunne shalbe ashamed, whē the Lorde of Hostes shall rule them at Ierusalem vpon the mount Sion/ before & with his excellent councell.

¶ A thankesgeuyng to God for his workes.

¶ The .xxv. Chapter.

O Lorde, thou arte my God/ I wyll prayse the/ & magnyfye thy name: For thou brīgest marueilous thinges to passe, accordynge to thyne olde counsels truly & stedfastly. Thou makest of townes heapes of stone: & of hard cytes/ brode walles: The palaces of the wycked: stroyest thou out of the cyrye, that they shall neuer be buylded agayne. Therfore the very rude people must magnyfye the and the cytyes of the cruell heathen must feare the. For thou art the poore mans helpe, a strēgth for the needfull in his necessyte. Thou art a defence agaynst euell wether a shadowe agaynst the hete. But vnto the presumptuous, thou art lyke a stronge wynde/ that casteth downe the boastyng of the vngodly: thou kepest men from hete wt the shadowe of the clowdes thou cuttest of the braunches of tyrauntes.

Moreouer the Lord of Hostes shall once prepare a feast for all people vpon the hyll: A plenteous, costly / pleasaunt *feast of fat & well fede beastes of swete & most pure thynges vpon ye *hyll shall he take awaye the syde vale that hangeth before the face of all people/ and the courtynge wt with all Gentyles are couered. As for death he shall vtterly cōsume it. The Lord God shall wype awaye the teares frō all faces & take awaye the confusiō of his people thorow the whole worlde. For the Lord hym selfe hath sayde it.

At the same tyme shall it be sayde: lo/ this is oure God in whom we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the Lorde that we haue wayted for: Let vs reioyse and delite in his health. For the hand of the Lorde reasteth vpon this hyll. But Moab shalbe threshen downe vnder hym, lyke as the straw is trodē vnder fete in a dōge hyll. For he shall stretch out his handes vpō him lyke as a swymmer doth to swymme. And with the power of hys handes shall he cast downe hys hye pompe. As for his strōg holdes & hye walles: he shall bowe them/ cast them downe/ & fell them to the grounde in todust.

¶ A songe of the deliueraunce of the people.

At the same tyme shall men synge of the vyneyarde of Thulcatel. I the Lorde kepe it, and water it in due season. I watch daye and nyght & no man breake vnto it. I beare no euell wyll in my mynde. Who wyll compell me/ that I greatly forgettynge all faythfulnesse, shulde burne it vp at once wt thornes & bushes: Or who wyll enforce me to kepe or make peace? It will come to this poynte/ & Jacob shalbe rooted agayne / & Israel shall be grene, & beare floures/ & they shall fyll & whole worlde with their fruite. Smyteth he not his smyter, as euell as he is smyten hym selfe: Destroyeth he not the murtherers/ as he is murthered: Euery man recompenseth with the measure that he receaueth: He musseth vpō his fore wynde / as vpon the dayes of extreame heate. And therfore shall the iniquyte of Jacob be thus reconcyled. And so shall he take awaye all & frute of his synnes.

As for aulter stones, he shall make them all as stones beaten to poulder: the groues and Idols shall not stande. The stroge cities shalbe desolate/ and the faye cytyes shalbe left lyke a wyldernes. The catell shall fede & lye there/ & the sheape shall eate it vp. Their barues shalbe byrē their wynes which were their bewtye when they came forth: shalbe defyled. For it is a people without vnderstādynge/ & therfore he that created them / shall not fauoure thē & he & made them shall not be mercyfull to them. Yee euē the prestes and prophetes thē selues go amysse they are dronckē with wyne / & weake brayned thorow strōg drincke. They erre in seynge and in iugdment they fayle. Wherfore heare the worde of the Lorde / ye mockers that rule the Lordes people, which is at Jerusalem. For ye cōforte your selues thus: Tush death ꝑ we are at a poynte / and as for hell we haue made a condycion wyth it ꝑ though there breake out eny sore plage it shall not come vpon vs. For with disceate wyll we escape / and with symbienes wyll we defende oure selues. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde I wyll laye a stone in Sion a great stone/a costly corner stone for a sure foundacyon: ꝑ who so putteth hys trust in him shall not be confounded. Righ-teousles wyll I set vp agayne in ꝑ balaunce/ and iudgment in the weyghtes. The tempest of hayle shall take awaye your refuge. ꝑ ye haue to disceaue withall: & ꝑ ouerflowynge waters shall breake downe youre stronge holdes of dissimulacion. Thus the appoynt-ment ꝑ ye haue made wt death / shalbe done awaye: and the cōdycion that ye made with hell shall not stande When ꝑ great destruc-cion goeth thorow it shall all to treade you. It shal take you quyte a waye before it For it shall go forth early in the morninge / and contynue only that daye & that night. And ꝑ very feare only shall teach you / whē ye heare it. For the bedde shall be so narow that a mā can not lye vpō it: And ꝑ couerynge to small/ that a mā maye not wynde him selfe therin. For the Lord shal stirre forth as he dyd vpō the mōut* Perazim/and shall take on as he dyd vpon the *dale of Gibeon: that he may bringe forth his deuyce/ his straunge de-uyce: and fulfyll his worcke, his wonderfull worcke. And therfore make no mocke at it that youre captiuite increase not: for I haue herde the Lorde of Hostes saye / that there shall come a soden destruccion & plage vpon the whole earth. Take hede / and heare my voyce / ponder and marcke my wordes well. Goeth not the housbande man euer in due season earnestly to hys lande: he moweth & plowyth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne he soweth it wt fetches or cemyn. He soweth the wheate and Bar-ley in their place / Altium and Rye also in their place. And that he maye do it ryght/ his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he treadeth not ꝑ fytches out with a wayne/ nether bringeth he the cart here & there ouer the comyn/but he threshyth the fytches oute with a staffe/and the comyn with a rod. As for the wheate / he grindeth it to make bred therof/ In as moch as he can not bringe it to passe with treadynge out. For nether ꝑ bro-synge ꝑ the cart wheles make/ ner his beastes can grynde it. Thys and soch lyke thynges come of the Lorde of Hostes whych is mar-uelous in counsel/ & great in rightuousnesse.

WO be vnto the O Ariel/thou citie that Dauid wāne. Thy talkynge shall groane out of the myre. For the multytude of thyne enemyes  shalbe lyke mealdust. And the nombre of tyrauntes shalbe as the dust that the wynde taketh awaye sodenly. Thou shalt be vysited of the Lorde of Hoostes with thondre, earthquake, & wyth a greate crack / & the whyrle wynd / tempest, and with the flame of a consuminge fyre. But now the multytude of all the people / that went out agaynst Ariel: the whole hoste the stronge holdes, and segeris lyke a dreame which appeareth in the nyght. It is lyke as when an hungrye man dreameth ꝑ he is eatyng and when he awaketh he hath nothing: lyke as when a thyrstye man dreameth that he is drynckynge & when he awaketh he is faynt & his soule vnpacyent.

So is the multytude of all people ꝑ mustre them selues agaynst the hyll of Sion. But ye shalbe at youre wyttes ende, ye shalbe abashed: ye shall stacker, & rele to & fro.

 Ye shalbe droncken / but not of wyne. Ye shall fall but not thorow dronckenes: For ꝑ Lorde shal geue you an hard slepyng spryte / & holde downe youre eyes. namely your Prophetes & heades which shulde se, them shall he couer. And all visions shalbe vnto you as the wordes that stande in a sealed lettre, whē one offereth it to a mā that is lerned, & sayeth: rede vs this lettre. Then he answereth: I cā not rede it / for it is shutt. But yet be geuen to one ꝑ is not lerned or sayde vnto him: rede this lettre: Then sayeth he. I can not rede.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: For so moch as this people draweth nye me w their mouth / & prayseth me hyghly wyth their lyppes where as their herte nevertheles is farre fro me & the feare which they owe vnto me / that turne they to mens lawes & doctrynes therfore wyll I also shewe vnto thys people a maruelous terrible / & greate thing (Namely this:) I wyll destroye the wysdome of their wyse / & the vnderstandynge of their lerned men shall perysshe. And that the playne feldes (whych are sygnyfyed by Charmel) shall become rough and full of bushes. The tyme that Christ shulde come is the short tyme that he meaneth / whych the scrypture doth oft call a short tyme. Then shall the vnfrutefull / rough & woody heathenesse (which is vnderstād by Libanus) be turned vnto ꝑ relygyon of Christes cōgregacyon: church / vnto the true scrypture of the true God (which is vnderstand by Charmell) that frutefull & well tylled felde.

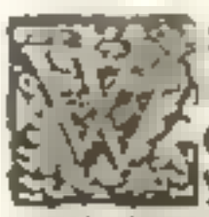
Then shall the furyous people cease / and the mockers shalbe put awaye, and all they that do wronge shalbe plucked out, soche as labour to draw men vnto synne: & that dyscreaue hym / which reproueth e*them in the gate / & soch as turne good persones to vanite. And therfore the Lord, euē the defender of Abraham) sayeth thus vnto the house of Jacob: Now shall not Jacob be ashamed / nor his face cōfounded / whē he seyth amōge his chyldren (whom my handes haue made) soch as halow my name amonge them: that they maye sanctifye the holy one of Jacob / and feare the God of Israel: and that they wyche a fore tyme were of an erroneous spryte haue now vnderstandynge / and that soch as before coulde not speake / are now lerned in my lawe.

¶ A curse agaynst them that forsake the councell of God and sticke vnto the councell of men. He treateneth the rest of the people whych after the destruccyo of Jerusalem wente in to Egypte.

¶ The .xxx. Chapter.



O be to those stynkynge chyldren sayeth ꝑ Lorde which seke coūcell, but not at me: whych take a webbe in hande, but not after my wyll: that they maye heape one synne vpon another. They goo downe in to Egypte (and aske me no councell) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and comforte in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shalbe your confusyon and the comforte in the Egyptians shadowe shalbe youre awne shame. Youre rulers haue bene at Zoan / & youre messaungers came vnto Hanes. But ye shall all be ashamed of the people ꝑ maye not helpe you / which shall not bringe you strēgth or comforte, but shame & confusyō.

Youre beastes haue borne burthens vpō their backes towarde the South, thorowe the waye that is full of parell and trouble / because of the lyon & lyones / of the Cockatrice and flutynge dragon. Yee the Mules bare youre substaunce, and the Camels brought youre treasure vpon their croked backes, vnto a people ꝑ can not healpe you. For a* Shalbe lyke meakdust: that is / shalbe so many and as vnable to be nōbred as mealdust.

b* And the nombre of tyrauntes shalbe &c. As who shulde saye: the most hrup and cruel enemyes that will be vpon you in a moment & sodenly might & shall ryghtly be ouercome of the Lorde as ꝑ dust is taken away wype with the wynde: as it happened vnto Sennacherib: Yet will it not be so then / that as I wyll now shewe the: thou shalt be vysited and punyshed of ꝑ Lorde euen as wher all thinges trible for feare of the thonder / which no man can eschue. And so when the enemyes of the holy hill ꝑ cyte is with an horrible & fearfull soūde, & storme & tempest shall ouerthrow ꝑ / & with the flame of fyre shalt thou be deuoured.

¶ That is / ye shall ordre that ye shall not were what to do. ye shalbe so cleane destitute of coūcell: not of the wyse me that ye shall drincke / for ye shall suffre extreame thyrst / and the wyne of recreacyon & myrth shall ye not taste of. Ye shall be feble & fall as ye go / ye shalbe rennagates for the confusyon feare hate and persecucyon of all men: not for dronckenes or stronge drynke whych ye shall want. Some expound thys sentence of them that be dronckē in hypocrysye & dyssymulacyon: and of them that be full of the ryghteousnes of their awne workes.

b* As though he shulde saye: It is not longe to that goodly trees (which are signifyed by Libanus) shalbe turned into playne feldes:

a* That is the which grue vnto garment / and se that euery man haue right. Ruth. iij.*

b* Ezechiel. xxxvi.

For the Egyptians helpe shalbe but vayne and lost. Therfore I tolde you also that your pryde shulde haue an ende. Wherfore go nēce and wryte them thys in their tables / & note it in a boke: that it may remayne by their posterytye / & be styll kepte. For it is an obstynate people / vnfaythfull chyldren / chyldren that wyll not heare the lawe of the Lorde.

¶ They darre saye to the Prophetes: Intromytte youre selues with nothynge / and vnto the Soothsayers: tell vs of nothynge for to come, but speake frendly wordes vnto vs / and preache vs false thinges. Creade out of the waye / go out of the path / turne the holy one of Israel from vs. Therfore thus sayeth the holy one of Israel: In as moch as ye haue cast of youre bewtye / and comforted youre selues with power and nymblenesse / & put youre confidēce therin: therfore shal ye haue thys myschefe agayne for youre destruccyō and fall / lyke as an hye wall, that falleth because of some ryft (or blast) whose breakyng cometh sodenly.

And youre destruccyon shalbe lyke as an erthen pot / which breaketh noma touchyng it; yee and breaketh so fore / that a man shall not fynde a sheuer of it to fetch fyre in / or to take water with all out of the pyt. For the Lorde God / euen the holy one of Israel hath promysed thus: With styll syttynge and rest shall ye be healed / in quyetnesse & hope shall youre strength lye. Notwythstandynge ye regarde it not, but ye wyll saye: No / for thus are we constrayned to fle vpon horses. And therfore shall ye fle / we must ryde vpon swift beastes / and therfore youre persecutoures shall yet be swyfter. A thousand of you shall fle for one / or at the most for fyue / whych do but only geue you euell wordes: vntyll ye be desolate / as a shyp mast vpō an hye mountayne / and as a beaken vpon on hyll.

Yet standeth the Lorde waytynge / that he maye haue mercy vpon you / and lyfteth hym selfe vp / that he may receaue you to grace. For the Lorde God is ryghtuous. Happye are all they that wayte for hym. For thus O thou people of Syon and ye cytizens of Ierusalem) shall ye neuer be in heuynes / for doutlesse he wyll haue mercy vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye he wyll helpe the. The Lorde geueth you the *bred of aduersytye / & the water of trouble. But thyne instructer flyeth not farre from the / yf thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructer / and thyne eares harken to hys worde / that cryeth after the and sayeth: this is the waye / go thys and turne nether to the ryght hande ner to the lefte.

Moreouer, yf ye destroye the syluer workes of youre Idoles, and cast awaye the golden coapes that ye decke them wythall (as fylthynes) & saye gett you hence: Then wyll he geue rayne to the sede that ye shall sowe in the earth / and geue you bredde of the encreace of the earth / so that all shalbe plentuous and aboundaūt. Thy catell also shall be fede in the brode medowes / yer thyne oxē and Mules that tyll the grounde / shall eate good fodder / which is purged with ỹ fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flow out of al hys mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towers shall fall / the mone shall shyne as ỹ sunne / and the sunne shyne shalbe seuenfolde / and haue as moche shyne / as in seuen dayes besyde.

In that daye shall the Lorde bynde vp the broken sores of hys people / and heale their woundes. Beholde the glory of ỹ Lord shall come from farre, hys face shall burne that noman shalbe able to abyde it / hys lyppes shall wagge for very indygnacyon / and hys tonge shalbe as a consumynge fyre. Hys breath like a vehemēt floude of water which goeth vp to the throte. That he maye take awaye the people / which haue turned themselues vnto vanyte / & the bryde of errour / that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge as ỹ vse is in ỹ night of the holy solempnyte. Ye shall reioyse frō youre herte, as they ỹ come with the pype / when they go vp to the mount of the Lorde / vnto the rock of Israel. The Lorde also shal set vp the power of hys voyce / & declare hys terrible arme, with his angry countenaūce / yee and the flame of the consumynge fyre / with earthquake tempest of wynde, & hayle stones. Then shall the Assyrians feare also / because of the voyce of the Lord / which shall smyte him with ỹ rodde. And the same rodde which the Lorde wyll sende vpon hym, shall moue the whole foundacyon: with trompet / with noyse of warre and batell to destroye. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynnynge / yee euen for Kynges also. This hath he made depe & wide / & nothyng therof is fyre and wodd innumerable / which the breath of the Lorde kyndleth / as it were a matche of brymstone.

The curseth them that forsake God / and seake for the helpe of men.

¶ The condycyons of good rulers and Officers.

1 BEholde / the kynge shall governe after the rule of rightuousnes / & ỹ princes shall rule acordyng to ỹ balaūce of equite. He shalbe vnto men, as a defence for ỹ wynde & as a refuge for ỹ tempest / lyke as ryuers of water in a thurstie place & ỹ shadowe of a greate rock in a drie lande. The eyes of ỹ seinge shal not be dymme; & ỹ eares of them ỹ heare / shall take diligent hede. The hert of the vnwise / shall attayne to knowlege / & the vnparfyte tūge shall speake plainly & distinctly. Then 2 shall the nygarde be no more called gentle / ner ỹ churle lyberall. But the churle will be churlishly mynded / & his hert will worke euell & playe ỹ ypocrite / & ymagyn abhominacyons agaynst God, to make the hungrye seane, & to withholde drynke from the thurstie: These are the perilous weapons of the couetous, these be his shamefull councels: that he maye begyle the powre with disceatfull workes yee euē there as he shulde geue sentence vp the powre. But the lyberall person ymagineth honest thinges / and cōmeth vp with honestly.

3 Up (ye rich and ydell cyties), harken vnto my voyce. Ye careliesse cities, marke my wordes. After yeares & dayes shal ye be brought in feare. O ye careliesse cyties. For Harvest shalbe out / and the grape gatherynge shall not come. O ye rych ydell cyties ye that seare no parell / ye shalbe abashed & remoued: when ye se the barennesse / the nakednesse & preparynge to warre. Ye shall knocke vpon youre brestes, because of the pleasaūt feilde / and because of the frutefull vyneyarde. My 4 peoples feilde shall bringe thornes & thistels for in euery house is voluptuousnes: and in ỹ cyties, wilfulnes. The palaces also shalbe broken and the greatly occupyde cytyes desolate. The towers and bulwerckes shalbe be come dennes for euermore, ỹ pleasure of Mules shalbe turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spyrite be poured vpō vs from aboue.

5 Then shall the wyldernesse be a frutefull feilde and the plenteous feilde shalbe reckened for a wodde. Then shall equyte dwell in the desert / & righteousnesse in a frutefull lāde. 6 And the rewarde of ryghtuousnesse shalbe peace / and her frute rest and quyetnesse for euer. And my people shall dwell in the vines of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure where there is ynough in them all. And whē 7 the hayle falleth / yt shall fall in the wodde & in the cytie. ¶ Of the tyme and kyngdome of Christ.

a * By the desert & wyldernes is signified the cõtempt of the heathen/ which were without grace/ and wythout the fruite of good & vertuous liuing. Psal cvij. is a borowed speache taken of the couhbines & vnfruteful trees of the wylderness.

BEcause the desert & wyldernes shal reioyse, the waste grounde shalbe glad and flourysh as the lylly. She shall flourysh pleasauntly/ and be ioyefull, & euer be geuyng of thanckes more & more. For the glory of Libanus, the bewty of Charmel & Saron shalbe geuẽ her. Thele shall knowe the honour of the Lorde and the magestie of oure God. And therfore strẽgthe the weake hãdes, & comforte the feble knees

Saye vnto them that are of a fearfull herte: Be of good chere/ & feare not. Behold youre God cometh, to take vengeaũce, & to rewarde God cometh his awne selfe, & wyll deliuer you. Then shall the eyes of ỳ blynd be lyghtened, & ỳ eares of the deafe opened. Then shal the lame man * leape as an hert/ & the dõme mans tunge shall geue thanckes

In the wyldernesse also there shall welles sprynge/ and floudes of water in the desert. The dryge grounde shall turne to ryuers and the thurstye to springes of water. Where as dragõs dwelt afore, there shall growe fayre flowres and grene rushes There shalbe fore pathes and comen streets this shalbe called * the holy waye. No vncleane person shall go thorow it for the Lorde him selfe shall go with them that waye and the ignoraũt shall not erre There shalbe no lyon and no rauyshynge beast shall come therin nor be there/ but men shall go there fre and safe. And the redemed of ỳ Lorde shall conuerte, and come to Syon with thanckesgeuyng. Euerlasting ioye shall they haue/ pleasure and gladnesse shal be amonge them. And as for all sorowe and heuynes it shall vanysh awaye.

b By thys leape is ment the reioysing thankefulnes & quyknes of the spirite. Esai.xxxv. is there a spechynge of the spouse that commeth boundyng vpon the mountaynes. Where he here speth the holy waye is the Church & the vocacyon of the Gentyles & Peoples & of the kyngdome of God & the faythfull. Mahomet was deafe to heare the heauenly doctryne of God dome to prayse hym lame to mynyster vnto hys neyghbours and to preache the gospell. &c. These thinges Christ hath healed with his comynge.

c The waye of the iustes & faythfull is here called the holy waye.

¶ The.xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ Jerusalem is assieged by Sennacherib/in the tyme of kynge Hezekiah.

2 king.18.19.c

IN the.xiiij. yeare of kyng Hezekiah came Sennacherib kynge of the Assyrians downe/ to laye sege vnto all the stronge cytyes of Juda.

* ij. Paralip. xxxij.a. * And the kynges ỳ Assyrians sent Rabsaketh frõ Lachis towarde Jerusalem agaynst Kynge Hezekiah, wyth a grenous Hoste/ which set him by the condyte of the ouerpole/ in the waye that goeth thorowe the fullers lande. And so there cam forth vnto him Eliakim Helkiahs sonne ỳ Prouẽt/ Sobna ỳ Scribe/ & Joah Asaphs sonne ỳ Secretary.

And Rabsaketh sayde vnto them: Tell Hezekiah/ that ỳ greate kyng of Assyria sayeth thus vnto hym: What presumpcion is thys/ that thou trustest vnto? Thou thinckest (peraduenture) that thou hast counceil & power ynough to mayntayne this warre: or els wher to trustest thou/ that thou castest thy selfe of from me? Lo/ thou puttest thy trust in a broken staff of reede (I meane Egypte) whych he that leaneth vpon, it goeth in to hys hande & shurteth hym thorowe. Euen so is Pharao the kyng of Egypt, vnto all thẽ that trust in him. But ỳ thou woldest saye to me: we trust in the Lorde oure God: Is not goodly God in deede: whose hye places & auters Hezekiah toke downe, & cõmaũded Juda & Jerusalẽ, to worshyppe only before ỳ auter. Abyde ỳ thou hast made a condycyõ wyth my lorde ỳ kyng of ỳ Assyrias, ỳ he shulde geue the two thousand horses art thou able to set men ther vp? Seyng now ỳ thou canst not resist ỳ power of ỳ smallest prynce ỳ my Lorde hath, how darrest thou trust in ỳ charett & horse mẽ of Egypt? Moreouer, thinkest thou ỳ I am come downe hither, to destroye thys lande without ỳ Lordes will? The Lord sayde vnto me go downe in to ỳ lãde/ & thou mayest destroye it.

B

Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna & Joah vnto Rabsaketh: Speake to vs thy seruauntes (we praye the) in the Syrians language, for we vnderstande it well: And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge/ lest the folcke heare/ which syeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsaketh. Thynke ye that the kynge sent me to speake this only vnto you? Hath he not sent me to them also, that sye vpon the wall? that they be not cõpelled to eate their awne donge, & drincke their awne stale with you?

C

And Rabsaketh stode forth/ and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tunge, and sayde: Now take hede, how the greate kynge of the Assirians geueth you warning. Thus sayeth ỳ kyng: Let not Hezekiah deceaue you, for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Moreouer let not Hezekiah cõforte you in ỳ Lord, whẽ he sayeth: The Lord without doute shall defende vs & shall not geue ouer this citie into the handes of ỳ kyng of the Assyrias beleue hym not. But thus sayth ỳ kyng of Assyria: obteyne my fauoure, enclyne to me: so maye euery mã enioye his vineyards & fygetrees/ & drincke the water of his cisterne: vnto the tyme that I come my selfe/ & bringe you into a lande that is like youre awne: wherin is wheate & wyne/ which is both sowen wyth sede, and planted wyth vineyardes.

Jerusalē. Let not Hezekiah dysceaue you / when he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shall delyuer vs:

Wyght the Goddes of the Gentiles kepe euery mās lande / frō the power of the kīng of the Assyrians? Where is the God of Hemath & Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hāde? Or which of all ỹ Goddes of the landes / hath delyuered their coūtre out of my power / so ỹ the Lord shuld delyuer Jerusalem fro my hande? Unto this Hezekiahs messaungers helde their tunges / & answered not one worde: for the kyng had charged thē / that they shulde geue him none answere. So came Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the Pzesident / Sobna the Scrybe / & Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary / vnto Hezekiah with rente clothes / & tolde hym the wordes of Rabsakeh.

¶ Hezekiah humbleth hym selfe before the Lorde. The armye of Sennaherib is slayne of the Aungell of the Lorde: & he hym selfe is killed of his owne sonnes.

4 Reg xix.a

When Hezekiah hearde that he rēte his clothes, & put on a sack cloth / & wēt into the tēple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the Pzesydent / Sobna the Scrybe / wyth the eldest pzeastes clothed in sack vnto ỹ Pzophet Esay the sonne of Amoz / & they sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth Hezekiah: Thys is the daye of trouble of plage, & of wzath: lyke as when a chylde cometh to the byzth / but the woman hath no power to bzynge it forth. The Lorde thy God (no doute) hath well consydered the wordes of Rabsakeh / whom hys lorde the kynge of the Assyrians hath sent / to defye & blaspheme the lyuyng God: with such wordes as the Lorde thy God hath hearde right well. And therfore lyft vp thy pzayer for the remnaunt / that yet are left. So the seruauntes of kynge Hezekiah came to Esay.

And Esay gaue them this answere: Saye thus vnto youre lorde: thus sayeth the Lorde: Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou hast hearde / wherwith the kynge of the Assyrians seruauntes haue blaspheamed me. Beholde / I wyll cause a wynde go ouer hym / as sone as he heareth it / he shall go agayne into hys countre, there wyll I destroye him with the swerde. Now when Rabsakeh returned / he founde the kynge of Assyria layenge syege to Lobnah / for he had vnderstande / ỹ he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumoure, that Thathakah kyng of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him.

And when the kynge of Assyria hearde that / he sent other messaūgers to kyng Hezekiah with this cōmaundemēt: Saye thus to Hezekiah kyng of Juda: Let not thy God disceaue the in whom thou hopest / & sayest: Jerusalē shall not be geuē in to the hādes of the kyng of Assyria. For thou knowest well how the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentyles (whō my pzogenytours cōquered) delyuered at any tyme thorow their goddes? As namely / Gozan / Haran / Rezeph / & the chyldren of Eden / which dwell at Thalassar. Where is the kynge of Hemah / & the kynge of Arphad / & the kyng of the cytye Sepharuaim, Ena and Iua? Now when Hezekiah had receaued the lettre of the messaungers / and read it / he went vp into the house of the Lorde & opened the letter before the Lorde. And Hezekiah pzayed before ỹ Lord on this maner: O Lorde of Hostes / thou God of Israel / which dwellest vpon Cherubyn. Thou art the God, that only is God of all ỹ kyngdomes of the world, for thou only hast created heauē & earth. Encline thyne eare Lorde & consydre / open thyne eyes, O Lorde / & se / & pōdre all ỹ wordes of Sennaherib / which hath sent hys embassage to blaspheme the lyuynge God. It is true / O Lorde / that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes & landes / & cast their goddes in the fyre. Notwythstandynge those were no goddes / but the worckes of mens handes / of wod or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Delyuer vs then O Lord oure God / frō the handes of Sennaherib & all kyngdomes of the earth maye knowe / that thou only art the Lorde. Then Esay the sonne of Amoz sent vnto Hezekiah / sayinge: Thus sayth ỹ Lorde God of Israel: Where as thou hast made thy pzayer vnto me / as touchyng Sennaherib / thys is the answere, that the Lorde hath geuē concernyng hym: Despised art thou & mocked [a] O daughter of Syō he hath shakē his head at the. O daughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennaherib whom hast thou defyed & blaspheamed: And agaynst whom hast thou lyfted vp thy voyce, & exalted thy proude lokes: euen agaynst the holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruaūtes hast blaspheamed the Lorde and thus holdest thou of thy selfe: I couer the hye mountaynes, & syde of Libanus with my horsmē. And there wyll I cut downe ỹ hye Cedre trees and the fayrest fyre trees. I will vp into the heygth of it, & into ỹ chefest of his tymbre woodes. If there be no water I wyl graue & drynke. And as for waters of defence / I shall drye them vp wyth the sole of myne foote. Yet (sayest thou) hast thou not hearde / what I haue taken in hande, and brought to passe of olde tyme? That same wyll I do now also: waste, destroye, & bringe stronge cities vnto a The daughter of Syon doth of the signifye the people of Jerusalem which purely geueth ouer vnto gods word that was fyrst geuē in the hill Syon Esa. xx. yeapes of stones. For their inhabitours shalbe lyke lame men, brought in feare & confounded. They shalbe lyke the grasse & grene herbes in the felde / lyke the hay vpon house toppes / & withereth a fore it be growne vp.

I knowe thy wayes / thy goinge forth and thy cõmyne home / yee & thy madnesse agaynst me. Therfore thy furiousnesse agaynst me / and thy pryde is come before me. I will put a ringe in thy nose, and a bridle bryt in thy chawes of the, & turne the aboute / euen the same waye thou camest. I will geue ye also this token (O Hezekiah) this yeare shalt thou eate that is kept in stoare / & the next yeare soch as groweth of him self / & in the thyrde yeare ye shal sowe & reape / yee ye shall plãte vyneyardes / & eatoye the frutes therof.

And soch of the house of Iuda as are escaped / shall come together / and the remnaunt shall take rote beneth / & bring forth frute aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Ierusalem / & the remaunte frõ the mount Syõ.

And this shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes bringe to passe. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde / concerynge the kynge of ye Assyrians: He shall not come in to the cytie / and shall shote no arowe in to it / there shall no shilde hurte it / nether shall they graue aboute it. The same waye that he came / shall he retourne / & not come at this cytie / saieth the Lorde. And I will kepe and saue the cytie (saieth he) for myne awne / and for my seruaunte Dauyds sake.

* Thus the angel went forth / and slewe of the Assyrians hoste, an .clxxv. thousande. And when men arose by early (at Ierusalem:) Beholde / all laye full of dced bodyes. So Sennaherib ye kyng of ye Assyrias brake vp / & dwelt at Ninive. Afterwarde it chaunsed / as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah hys god / that Adramalech & Sarazer his awne sonnes slewe him with the sweard / and fled in to the lande of Ararat. And Asarhadon his sonne reygned after hym.

Hezekiah is sycke vnto the deeth / but is yet restored by the Lorde / and lyueth .xv. yeares after: for whych benefyte he geueth thanckes.

The .xxxviij. Chapter.

In * .iiij. Reg. xx. a. ij. Para. xxxij. f

NOt longe afore thys / was Hezekiah sicke vnto ye deeth: & the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amoz came vnto him / and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Set thine house in order: for thou must dye, & shalt not escape. Then Hezekiah turned his face towarde the wall / & prayed vnto the Lorde / and sayde: Remẽbre O Lorde / that I haue walcked before ye in a* treuth and a stedfast herte / & haue done the thynge that is pleasaunt to the. And Hezekiah wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Esay: Go & speake vnto Hezekiah: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth the thys worde: I haue herde thy prayer / and consydred thy teares: beholde I wyll put fyftene yeares mo vnto thy lyfe, and delyuer the and the cytie also from the hande of the kyng of Assiria for I wyll defende the citie. And take B the this token of the Lord / that he wyll do it / as he hath spoken: Beholde / I wyll returne the shadowe of Ahaz dial / ye now is layed out with the Sunne and bringe it ten degrees backwarde. So the Sunne turned ten degrees backward, & which he was descended afore.

The thanckesgeuynge / which Hezekiah Kynge of Iuda wrote / when he had bene sycke / & was recouered.

b* I thought I shulde haue gone to ye gates of hell in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeares.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer beset the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together, and taken awaye fro me, lyke a shepherdes cotage: my lyfe is hewẽ of, lyke as a weeuer cutteth of his webb.

Whyle I was yet takynge my rest, he hewed me of, & made an ende of me in one daye.

c* I thought I wolde haue lyued vnto the morow, but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon, and made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatted I lyke a swalowe / and lyke a crane and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte vp myne eyes into the heyght: O Lorde, sayde I, violence is done vnto me / be thou suretye for me.

What shall I speake or saye, that he may this do? ye I may lyue out all my yeares / yee in the bytternesse of my lyfe?

Verely (Lorde) men must lyue in bytternesse, & all my life must I passe ouer therin: For thou raysest me vp and wakest me. But lo, I wylbe well contẽt with this bytternes.

C b. That is / I thought I shuld haue gone to my graue / and haue dyed in my best age. &c. The Hebrue worde signifyeth both hell & a graue / pitte or ditche. That maye ye perceaue in Genes. xly. g. where Jacob sayeth ye yf any mysfortune shulde happen vnto Benjamin in his journey in to Egypt with hys other brethe / hys graye heed shulde be brought with sorow vnto his graue: where the comen text. Cradeth hell / for graue. As for Hezekiah, he neither feared hel nor purgatory / as ye may well se by ye he a litell before saith: Remẽbre O Lorde / that I haue walcked before the in treuth & a stedfast herte / & haue done the thinge that is pleasaunt to the: which thynge who so doeth / meadeth not to feare any of those two places. Beseydes that / the dunce men & Sophisters them selues / which were (as most learned men thincke) the inuentoures & fynders / ye and the very makers of purgatory / saye that before the tyme of Christes cõmynge / there was no soch place: so that Hezekiah is by their sentence shylled quyte of that place: and of hell doth the sentence of the worde of God quyte hym / which sayeth: There is no condemnacyon to them that are in Christ Jesu / Roma. viij. a.

c* I thought I wolde .&c. but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon. &c. As who shuld saye: I thought to haue lyued lõger: but the Lorde tolde me as it had bene a lyon: he frusshed my bones & strength: & so troubled me with the greuous pãges of my disease / as though he wold in one daye haue made an ende of me. Soche & greuous sycknes do lerned men thincke that Dauid also laboured with / when he sayd: O Lord heale me / for all my bones are vexed. Psal. vi. a. & .xxxvij. a.

Neuertheles purgatory / as ye may well se by ye he a litell before saith: Remẽbre O Lorde / that I haue walcked before the in treuth & a stedfast herte / & haue done the thinge that is pleasaunt to the: which thynge who so doeth / meadeth not to feare any of those two places. Beseydes that / the dunce men & Sophisters them selues / which were (as most learned men thincke) the inuentoures & fynders / ye and the very makers of purgatory / saye that before the tyme of Christes cõmynge / there was no soch place: so that Hezekiah is by their sentence shylled quyte of that place: and of hell doth the sentence of the worde of God quyte hym / which sayeth: There is no condemnacyon to them that are in Christ Jesu / Roma. viij. a.

* Truth for purenes / as in the Psal. lxb. Wut to / thou hast a pleasure in ye truth &c. That is / in pureness / in true & perfecte righteousnes.

d For hell prayseth not &c. The meanynge is. If I now dye I can not prayse the in thy temple. For the dead buryed cannot loue and prayse the with their materiall tonges or herte. Neither can my breth-ner my burying be at this season for the settyng out of thy glorye. For all ydolatry wyll be searched wyth thys iudgement: And the wycked wyll impute my death to the ouerthrowyng of Jonatrye & to the puttyng downe of the braken serpēt.

Neuertheles my cōuersacyō hath so pleased the, that thou woldest not make an ende of my lyfe: so yt thou hast cast all my synnes behynde thy back.

e* For hell prayseth not the, death doth not magnyfye the.

e* They yt go downe into ỳ graue, prayse not thy trueth: but the lyuyng, yee the lyuing acknowledge the lyke as I do thys daye. The father telleth hys chyldren of thy faythfulnesse.

Delyuer vs, O Lorde, and we wyll synge prayses in thy house, all ỳ dayes of oure lyfe.

And Esay sayde: take a playster of fygges, & laye it vpon the sore, so shall it be whole.

Then sayd Hezekiah: O what a great thing is this that I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde.

e* They that go downe into the graue, ỳ apyde not thy trueth that is, hope not for ỳ. trueth of thy wordly promeses which thou hast promesed vnto such as worcke vnderstedyly in thy lawe Deutero. xxviii. They cānot reioyce of their health when all hope of recouerynge is past. But yet that a mā his lyfe-yfaulty may recouer his healthe ageine: he shall acknowledge thy goodnesse-ende as I now geue thankes vnto the, for the veneryse of my health which thou hast restored me.

¶ The. xxxix Chapter.

¶ Hezekiah is reproued of Esay because he shewed his treasure vnto the Embassadoures of Babylon.

2 Reg. xx. c.

IN the same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladams sonne kyng of Babylon, sent lettres & presentes to Hezekiah. For he vnderstode how that he had bene sick & was recouered agayne. And Hezekiah was glad therof, and shewed the the comodytes of his treasure, of syluer of gold of spyces & rootes of precyous oyles all that was in hys cubbordes & treasure houses There was not one thing in Hezekiahs house & so thorow out all hys kyngdome but he let them se it.

Then came Esay the Prophete to kyng Ezekiah, & sayde vnto hym: What haue the men sayde, & frō whence came they vnto the? Hezekiah answered: they came out of a farre countre vnto me, out of Babylō. Esay sayd: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house? Hezekiah answered: All ỳ is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothinge in my treasure but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Esay vnto Hezekiah: Vnderstande the worde of the Lord of Hostes: Beholde the tyme wyll come, that euery thynge which is in thyne house, and al that thy progenytoures haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shalbe caried to Babylon and no thinge left behynde. Thys sayeth the Lorde. Yee & parte of thy sonnes, that shall come of the, & whō thou shalt get, shalbe caried hēce, & become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons courte: Then sayde Hezekiah to Esay: Now God prospere hys awne councell which thou hast told me. He sayde more ouer: So that there be peace and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

BE of good chere my people, be of good chere (sayeth youre God) cōforte Jerusalem, and tell her: that a* her trauayle is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receaued of the Lordes hande sufficiēt correccyon for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: Prepare ỳ waye for the Lorde in the wyldernesse, make streyght the path for oure God in the deserte. Let all valleyes be exalted, & euery mountayne and hyll be leyed lowe. What lois crooked, let it be made streyght, & lett the rough places be made playne feldes. b* For the glory of the Lorde shall apeare, & all flesh shall se it for why, the mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Now crye. And I sayde: what shal I crye? Then spake it: that all flesh is grasse, and that c* all the brewtye therof is as the floure of the felde. When the grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breath of the Lorde bloweth vpon them. Moreouer the voyce cried thus: d* Go vp vnto the hyll, O Sion, thou ỳ bringest good tydynges, lyft vp thy voyce with power, O thou preacher Jerusalem. Lyft it vp without feare, & saye vnto ỳ cities of Juda: Beholde youre God, beholde the Lorde euen the Almyghtie shall come with power & beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he bringeth his treasure with him, and hys worcke go before him. He shall fede his flock lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lābes together with his arme, & cary them in hys bosome and shall kyndly intreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in hys fyst? Who hath measured heauē with his spāne, and hath comprehended all the earth of the worlde in thre fyngers: Who hath weyed the mountaynes and hylles? Who hath reformed the mynde of the Lord? Or who is of his councell to teach him? Or whō hath he asked councell, to make hym vnderstande, and to lerne him the waye of iudgmēt: to teach him science: and to enstructe him in the waye of vnderstandynge. E To whom then will ye likē God? or what symylitude wyll ye set vp vnto hym? Shall the caruer make hym a carued ymage? and shall the goldsmyth couer hym with gold/ or cast hym in to a fourme of syluer plates? Moreouer shall the ymage maker (that the poore man whych is dysposed / maye haue some thynge to set vp also) seke out & chose a tree/ that is not rottē/ and carue therout an ymage/ that mouyth not? Know ye not this? Hearde ye neuer of it? Hath it not bene preached vnto you sence the beginnyng? Haue ye not bene enfourmed of this/ sence the foundacyon of the earth was layde: That he sytteth vpon the circle of the worlde / and that all the inhabytours of the worlde are in cõ-

Where all was full of Idolatry, vayne worshippinge & of dyuelysh errours: there shall the herbes of the chosen be watered with godly wysdome, that ow the gospell and glad tydynges shall be maade Wherby wher they may both profet the selues & other. & so that they be frutefull and dernes is often thus taken as before in the xxxv. &.

may se & marcke, perceaue with their hertes & consyder that the hande of the Lorde maketh these thinges / & that the holy one of Israel bringeth them to passe. The. xlij. Chapter.

Behold now therfore / this is my seruaunte whom I wyll kepe to my selfe: myne electe / in who my soule shalbe pacified. I wyll geue hym my spyrete, that he may shewe forth iudgement & equyte amonge the Gentyles. He shall not be an outcryer / ner an hye mynded person. Hys voyce shall not be hearde in the stretes. A broysed rede shall he not breake / & the smokyng flax shall he not quench: but faythfully & truly shall he geue iudgement. He shall nether be ouerlene ner hasty / that he may restore ryghteousnes vnto the earth: and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus sayeth God the Lorde vnto him (euen he that made heauen / & spred them abrode & set forth the earth with her increse: which geueth breath vnto the people that is in it / & to them that dwell therin) I the Lorde haue called the in righteousnesse / & led the by the hande. Therfore will I also defende the / and geue the for a couenaunt of the people / & to be lyght of the Gentyles. That thou mayest open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prisoners / & them that syt in darcknesse / out of the dongeon house. I my selfe / whose name is the Lorde / which geue my power to none other, nether myne honoure to the Goddes: shewe yow these newe tydynges, and tell yow them or they come / for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therfore vnto the Lorde / a newe songe of thanckes geuynge, blowe out his prayse vnto the ende of the world. They that be vpon the see / & all that is therin / prayse him / the Iles & they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernes with her cities lyft vp her voyce / the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be glad that syt vpō rockes of stone / & let them crie downe frō the hye moūtaynes: ascribing almightynes vnto the Lorde / & magnyfying him amonge the Gentyles. The Lorde shall come forth as a gyaunte / & take a stomacke to hym lyke as a fresh man of warre. He shal roare and crye / and ouercome his enemyes.

I haue longe holden my peace (sayeth the Lorde) shulde I therfore be styll / & kepe silence for euer? I wyll crye lyke a trauelynge woman / and once wyll I destroye / & deuoure. I wyll make waste both mountayne & hyll / & dryue vp euery grene thynge that groweth theron. I wyll dryue vp the floudes of water / and dryncke vp the ryuers. I wyll bringe the blynde in to a strete / that they knowe not: & lede them in to a lore path that they are ignoraunt in. I shall make darckenesse light before them and the thinge that is croked to be streyght. These thinges wyll I do, & not forget them. And therfore let them conuerte / & be ashamed earnestly & hope in Idoles, & saye to fashyoned ymages: ye are our goddes.

Heare, O ye deafe men and sharpen youre sightes to se, O ye blynde.) But who is blinder / then my seruaunt? Or so deafe / as my messaungers, whom I sent vnto them? For who is so blinde as my people / & they that haue the rule of them? They are lyke as yf thou vnderstodest moch / & kepest nothyng: or yf one herde well, but were not obedient. The Lorde be mercyfull vnto them for his righteousnesse sake / that his worde myght be magnyfyed & praysed. But it is a myschieuous & wycked people. Their younge men belonge all to the snare and shalbe shut into prison houses. They shalbe carryed awaye captyue, and no man shall iowse them. They shalbe troden vnder fote / & no man shall labour to bringe them agayne. But who is he amonge you / that pondreth this in his mynde / that consyderth it / & taketh it for a warnynge in tyme to come? Who suffred Jacob to be trodden vnder fote / and Israel to be spoyled? Dyd not the Lorde? Now haue we synned agaynst hym / & haue had no delyte to walcke in his wayes / nether nether bene obedyent vnto his lawe. Therfore hath he poured vpon vs hys wrathfull displeasure/ & stronge batell/ which maketh vs haue todo on euery syde/ yet wyll we not vnderstande: He burneth vs vp, yet lyeth it not in to oure hertes.

¶ God promyseth to sende his Christ/ which shall deliuer hys people. He forgeueth synnes for hys awne sake.

¶ The.xliij. Chapter.

BVt now / the Lorde that made the O Jacob / & he that fashyoned the O Israel / sayeth thus. Feare not/ for I wyll defence the. I haue called the by name, thou art myne awne. When thou wentest in the water, I was by the / & the strōg floude shuld not pluck the away. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shall not kindle vpō the. For I am the Lorde thy God the holy one of Israel thy Sauyour. I gaue Egypte for thy deliueraunce the Morians & the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my sight/ & because I set by the and loued the. I pylled all men for the & delyuered vp al people for thy sake, that thou shuldest not feare/ For I was wyth the. I wyll bringe thy sede from the East and gather the together from the West. I wyll saye to the North, let go. And to ꝑ South kepe not backe: but bring me my sonnes frō farre/ and my daughters from the endes of the worlde: Namely all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created / fashyoned / and made for myne honoure.

Bringe forth that people / whether they haue eyes or be blynde deafe or haue eares. All nacyons shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But which amonge yonder goddes shall declare soche thynges, & tell vs what is to come? Let them bringe their wytnesses / so shall they be ꝛe: for then men shall heare it & saye, it is truth. But I bring you wytnesses (sayth the Lorde) euen those that are my seruauntes / whom I haue chosen: to the intent that ye myght be certyfyed and geue me faythfull credēce: yee and to cōsyder that I am he before whom there was neuer any God / and that there shalbe none after me. I am only the Lorde/ and wythout me is there no Sauyour. I geue wamyng/ I make whole/ I teach you that there shuld be no straunge God amonge you. And thys recorde must ye beare me your selues (sayth the Lorde) that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnyng/ & there is none that can take any thynge out of my hande. And what I do/ can no man chaunge.

Thus sayeth the Lord the holy one of Israel youre redemer: For youre sake I wyll sende to Babylon/ & bringe all the strōgest of them from thence: Namely/ the Chaldees that boost them of their shyppes: Euen I the Lorde youre holy one which haue made Israel, and am youre Kynge. Moreouer/ thus sayeth the Lorde (euē he that maketh a waye in the see/ & a footpath in the myghtye waters: which bringeth forth the charettes & horses/ the hoste & the power/ that they may fall a slepe & neuer ryse/ and be extincte/ like as towe is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of olde/ and regarde nothinge that is past. * Therfore behold I shall make a new thynge, & shortly shall it appeare: ye shall well knowe it I told it you afore/ but I wil tel it you agayne. I wyll make stretes in the deserte & ryuers of water in the wyldernes. * The wylde beastes shall worshyppe me: the dragon, and the Estryche For I shall geue water in the wyldernesse, and streames in the deserte: that I may geue drynke to my people / whom I chose. This people haue I made for myself, and they shall * shewe forth my prayse. For thou (Jacob) wouldest not call vpon me / but thou haddest an vniust towarde me / O Israel. * Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes for burntoffryngs, nether dydest honoure me with thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no deare spice wyth thy money, nether pouredest the fatt of thy sacrifices vpon me. Howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offrynges nether greuous in incense.

* But thou hast ladē me with thy synnes/ & wearyed me wyth thyne vngodlynes.

* Where as I yet am euen he only/ that for myne awne selfes sake do awaye thyne offences/ & forget thy synnes: so that I wyll neuer thynche vpon them. * Put me now in remembraunce, for we wyll reason together, & shew what thou hast for the to make the quyte. * Thy fyrst father offended sore/ & thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therfore I ether suspended/ or slue the chefest Prynces: I dyd curse Jacob/ and gaue Israel into reprose.

a* Therfore beholde I shall make a newe thinge &c. He meaneth that he wyll forsake ꝓ Jewes which were hys awne people, for their offences: & call the Gentyles that were Idolatrers. who he vnderstandeth by ꝓ desert & wyldernes: as before in the.xxxv. & xli.

b. The wylde beastes shall worshyppe me / the dragon. &c. Vnder the name of these beastes signifieth he also the Gentyles which were wylde, rude & beastly concernyng godly knowledge.

c. Here sayth he that he wyll tame by ꝓ preachinge of the gospel (which thinge he signifieth by waters and streames) so that they shall not hereafter be hurt in the church but shal put their shulders vnder the yoth of fayth & be ruled with the lawe of charitye.

c. To shew forth the prayse of the Lorde is to preache the remyssyō of synnes & the deliueraunce from death and hell and the greuones of euerlastyng lyfe by the mercy of God for Christes sake. After lyke maner of speakynge vseth Dauid in the Psal.xxij. where he bearynge the figure of Christ sayeth: In the myddest of the congregacyon wyll I prayse the. &c. Thus shulde the Gentyles & heathen prayse him/ which people he chose for hym selfe / as ye maye se in the text: For the Jewes (which are signyfyed by Jacob) wolde not do it/ but put their confydence in kepynge of the lawe. Thys doth the Prophet vpbraide them with/ in the person of God/ sayinge: * Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes. &c. As who shulde saye: Saye not that thou hast geuē me many sacrifices/ bothe because thou gauest the not vnto me only/ but vnto thy calues & Baalim & other Idoles: & also because I dyd neuer set greatly by them/ ner greatly requyred them. They greued me alwayes when the fayth and the deuocyon of the geuers was awaye.

The shepe of thy burntoffrynges broughtest thou not vnto me neither dydest thou glorifye me with thy sacrifices / but dydest onlye satisfye thyne awne superstitions. I compelled the not to worshyp me with thyne offrynges / but because thou so redelye offeredest soch thynges vnto Idoles after the maner of the heathen / I cõmaunded that they shulde not be offred vnto other goddes / but vnto me / of whose gyft thou receuedest them & cetera. ¶ Christ promiseth to delyuer his churche / which he hath redeamed. Idolatry & knelyng before ymages. &c. are confuted.

For I shall poure waters vpon the. &c. By the water and ryuers / vnderstande the grace of God: and by the dry ground & the thyrsty / the gentyles & heathe / which had not bene tylled and watered wyth the worde of God. O heare now / O Jacob my seruaũt / & Israel whom I haue chosen. For thus sayth the Lorde that made the, fashyoned the / & helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe: Be not afrayed O Jacob my seruaunt / thou righteous / whom I haue chosen. a * For I shall poure water vpõ the dry ground & ryuers vpõ the thurstye. I shal poure my spirite vpõ thy sede, and myne encrease vpon thy stock. They shal growe together / lyke as grasse / & as the Willies by the waters syde. b * One wyll saye: I am the Lordes Another will call vnder the name of Jacob. The thyrde shal describe wyth hys hande vnto the Lorde / and geue hym selfe vnder the name of Israel.

Moreouer / thus hath the Lorde spoken: euen the kynge of Israel / and his auenger / the Lorde of hostes: I am fyrst & the last / and without me is there no God. For what is he that euer was lyke me, which am from euerlastinge? Let him shewe his name and do where thorow he may be lykened vnto me. Let him tell you forth plainly thynges, that are past & for to come: yee & by without any feare or stoppe. For haue not I euer tolde you hytherto & warned you? Ye can beare me recorde poure selues. Is there any God excepte me? or any maker / that I shulde not knowe hym?

Wherfore all caruers of Idoles are but vayne / & their labour lost. They must beare recorde them selues / that (seyng they can neither se ner vnderstande) they shalbe confounded. Who shulde now make a God / or fashyõ an Idole, that is profytable for nothynge? Beholde / all the felowshyppe of thẽ must be brought to confusyon. Let all the workmasters of them come & stande together from amonge men: they must be abashed and confounded one with another. The smith taketh yron / and tempereth it with hoate coales / & fashioneth it with hammers & maketh it wt all the strength of his armes: yee sometyme he is faynt for very hunger / and so thurstye & he hath no more power. * The carpẽter, or ymage caruer) taketh meat of the tymbre: & spreadeth forth hys lyne: he marketh it wyth some colour: he playneth it he ruleth it / and squareth it & maketh it after the ymage of a man and according to the bewty of a man: that it maye stande in the temple.

Moreouer, he goeth out to hewe downe Cedre trees: He bringeth home Elmes and Okes and other tymbre of the wod Or els the fyre trees which he planted hym selfe & soch as the rayne hath swelled / which wod serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hymselfe withall. he maketh a fyre of it to bake bred. And afterwarde maketh a God there of / to honoure it: & an Idole to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre, with another he rosteth flesh & he maye eate roste hys bely full: with the thyrde he warmeth hym self, & sayeth: Aha I am well warmed. I haue bene at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh hym a God, and an Idole for hym selfe. He kneleth before it / he worshyppeth it he prayeth vnto it, & sayeth: deliuer me for thou art my God.

Yet men nether consider ner vnderstande, because their eyes are stopped that they can not se: and their hertes that they cannot perceaue. They ponder not in their myndes / for they haue nether knowledge ner vnderstandyng to thynke thus: I haue burnt one pece in the fyre: I haue baked bred with the coles there of I haue rosted flesh with all & eaten it: shall I now of the residue make an abhominacyon, & fall downe before a rotte pece of wod?

Israel shalbe saued here & there and all the worlde ouer are there of the Lordes people yee euẽ amonge the heathen.

¶ The .xlv. Chapter.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto Cyrus his anoynted/ whom he ledeth vp the righ hande: ꝑ the people maye fal downe before him: I will lowse the gyrdle of kings: ꝑ they shal open ꝑ gates before thyface / & not to shut their dores. I wil go before the & make ꝑ croked streyght I shall breake the brasen dores/ & burst the yron barres. I shal geue the the hyd treasure & the thinge whych is secretly kepte: ꝑ thou mayest knowe / that I ꝑ God of Israel haue called the by thy name: & that for Jacob my seruauntes sake/ and for Israel my chosen. For I called the by thy name / & ordened the or euer thou knewest me: Euen I the Lord/ before whom there is none other: for without me there is no God. I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me: that it myght be knowne from the rysynge of the sunne to the goynge downe of the same/ ꝑ all is nothing without me. For I am the Lorde/ & there is els none. It is I that created the lyght and darcknes, I make peace & trouble: yee euen I the Lorde do all these thynges. The heauens aboue shall droppe downe/ & the cloudes shall rayne ryghtuousnes. The earth shall open it self, and bringe forth health / & therby shall ryghtuousnes florish. Euẽ I the Lorde shall bringe it to passe.

a Some trade/ ye heauens/ lende downe your dew frõ aboue & let the clouds rayne &c. The Prophete desyreth that kyng Cyrus may come/ & helpe the people of Israel/ vnder Cyrus figurig Christ & vnder Israel the Churche. As though he wold saye: wold god the heauenly powers wolde so geue their grace/ as the earthly wolde not refuse to receaue it: so that hereafter our heauen be not of brasse/ for oure synnes sake: Deute xxviij b but that by ¶ Goddes grace the rayne of saluacyõ wolde fall on vs / & ryghteousnes d. oppe downe frõ heauen to make oure herte fertile & fruteful that Christ our sauyour which is the ryghtuousnes of the chosen / wolde come forth of the earth / and bringe forth the blossomes of saluacyõ. This petycion doth ꝑ Lorde promes to performe/

c Sayinge: ¶ Euen I the Lorde shall bringe it to passe.

Wo be vnto hym that chydeth wyth hys maker, the potsherde wt the potter: Sayeth the clay to the potter: What makest thou? or thy worcke serueth for nothynge: Wo be vnto him / ꝑ sayeth to his father: Why begettest thou? And to hys mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayeth the Lorde / euen the holy one & maker of Israel: Axe me of thynges for to come, concernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraũce as touchynge the worckes of my handes. I haue made the earth, & created man vpon it. Wyth myne handes haue I spred forth heauen, and geuen a cõmaundemẽt for all the Host therof. I shall make him vp wt ryghtuousnesse & dresse all hys wayes. He shall buylde my cyte / and lett out my prisoners: & ꝑ nether for gyft nor rewardes/ sayeth the Lorde of Hostes.

The Lorde hath sayde moreouer: The occupyers of Egypte the marchauntes of ꝑ Moryans and Sabees shall come vnto the with trybute / they shalbe thyne / they shall folow the & go with cheynes vpon their fete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacyon vnto the. For God without whõ there is none other God shall be with the. O how profoũde art thou O God thou God & Sauioure of Israel: Confounded be ye and put to dishonour: go hence together with shame, all ye that be worchmasters of errour: (that is worshippers of Idols) But Israell shalbe saued in the Lorde which is the euerlastinge saluacion: They shall not come to shame nor confusyon, worlde without ende.

For thus sayeth the Lord: euen he ꝑ created heauen the God that made the earth/ ꝑ fashioned it, & sett it forth: I haue not made it for naught but I made it to be enhabited Euen I the Lorde / wythout whom there is none other. I haue not spokẽ secretly, nether in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught that I sayde vnto the sede of Jacob: seke me. Haue they ony vnderstandynge/ that set vp the stockes of their Idols, & praye vnto a God/ ꝑ can not helpe them? Lett men drawe nye / let them come hyther: / and ake cosell one at another/ & shewe forth: What is he/ that tolde this before? or/ who spake of it/ euer sence the begynnynge? Haue not I ꝑ Lorde done it; wythout whom there is none other other God: the true God and Sauioure / & there is els none but I: And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of ỹ earth) so shall ye be saued / for I am God / and there is els none. I sweare by my selfe: out of my mouth cõmeth the worde of ryghtuousnesse / & that maye no mã turne: but all knees shall bowe vnto me / and all tunges shal sweare by me / sayinge: Surely in the Lorde is my ryghtuousnes and strength. To hym shall men come: but all they ỹ thynche scorne of hym / shalbe cõfounded. And the whole sede of Israel shalbe iustifyed / & prayse hym ỹ Lorde.

Idolatry is reproued. The health that cometh by Christ is prophecyed.

The. xlvj. Chapter.

a* Bell & Nabo were Idoles of the Babylonians. These sayth the Prophete shalbe ouerthrowen by the hoste of Cyrus.

NEuertheles a* Bell shall fall / and Nabo shalbe broken: whose ymages are a burthen for the beastes & cattell / to ouerlade them / and to make them weery. They shal synche downe / and fall together: for they maye not ease thẽ of their burthen, therfore must they go into captyuyte.

b* To go into their selues is to take good aduysement & call to remembraunce.

Herken vnto me / O house of Iacob and all ye that remayne yet of ỹ housholde of Israel: whom I haue borne frõ youre mothers wombe / & brought you vp from your birth / tyll ye were growen: I I whych shall beare you vnto youre last age: I haue made you / I wyll also norysh you beare you and saue you. Whom wyll ye make me lyke in fashiõ or ymage, ỹ I maye be lyke him? Ye fooles (no doute, wyll take out syluer & golde oute of youre purses, & weyre it / and hyre a goldsmith to make a God of it ỹ mẽ maye knele downe & worshippe it. Yet must he be taken on mens shoulders & borne, & set in his place, that he maye stande & not moue. Alas ỹ men shulde crye vnto him, which geueth no answere: and delyuereth not the mã ỹ calleth vpon him, from his trouble.

c* He meaneth by the Cyrus / which shulde come shortly as a byrd fleeth and destroye Babylon & set the Israelites at liberty. He shulde fulfyll that which the Lord had decreed & decreed. In him is figured Christ / which with ỹ lyght of hys worde purgeth ỹ whole world of errours & Idolatrye and setteth ỹ consciences at peace & liberty. He sayeth frome out of the east that is out of heuē: wherupõ he is called the daye spring frõ on hye. Luc. i.

Consyder this well / and be ashamed. b* Go in to youre awne selues / O ye runnagates). Remembre ỹ thynges which are past / sence the begynnynge of the worlde: ỹ I am God / and that there is els no God / yee and ỹ there is nothynge lyke vnto me. In the beginning of a thynge I shewe the ende therof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my deuyce accomplyshed / and fulfylleth all my pleasure. I call a c* byrde out of the East, and all that I take in hãde out of farre coũtres, as soone as I cõmaunde / I bringe it hither: as soone as I thynche to deuyse a thynge / I do it.

Heare me / O ye ỹ are of an hye stomack / but farre frõ ryghtuousnesse / I shall bringe forth my ryghtuousnesse. It is not farre, ỹ my health shall not tarye lõge awaye. I will laye health in Sion / & geue Israel my glorye.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst Babylon.

The. xlvij. Chapter.

SIt as for ỹ (O daughter thou virgin Babylon) a* thou shalt lyt in ỹ dust thou shalt sit vpõ ỹ grounde / & not in a trone (O thou mayden of Chaldea) Thou shalt no more be called tẽder & pleasaũt. Thou shalt bring forth ỹ b* quirne & grinde meele / put downe thy stomacher make bare thy knees & shalt wade thorow ỹ waterryuers. Thy shame shalbe discouered and thy preuyties shalbe sene. For I wyll auenge me of the, and no man shall lett me: sayeth oure redemer, which is called ỹ Lord of Hostes, the holy one of Israel.

a* To lyt in the dust is to be brought lowe to be porely arayed & decked to lyte without pope / & to fall from her estate & degree as it is sayd Jona. iij. c. The Prophete here describeth the destruccion of Babylõ vnder the figure of a proude quene: which was deliciously & tenderly brought vp / & after fell into extreame pouerte mystery & wretchednes.

b* He vnderstandeth by the querne / or (as some reade) implisseruple / poore / & vile estate & condycyõ.

Syt styll holde thy tunge / & get thee in to some darcke corner O daughter Chaldea / for thou shalt nomore be called lady of kingdomes. I was so wroth with my people ỹ I punished myne enheritaunce / & gaue thẽ in to thy power. Neuertheles, thou shewedest thẽ no mercy but euen the very aged men of thẽ didest thou oppresse tyght sore wyth thy yocke & thou thoughtest thus. I shalbe lady for euer And beside all ỹ / thou hast not regarded these thinges / nether cast what shulde come after. Heare now therfore / thou wyllfull / ỹ sittest so carelesse, & speakest thus in thine herte: I am alone / & wout me is there none: I shall neuer be wydowe, nor desolate agayne. And yet both these thinges shall come to the vpõ one daye in the twynckelyng of an eye: Namely wyddowhead, and desolacyon. They shall mightely fall vpõ the, for ỹ multitude of thy witches / & for the greate heape of thy cõiurers. For thou hast comforted thy selfe in thy deceatfulnes / and hast sayde: No man seyth me. Thyne awne wysdome & connynge hath deceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone & without me there is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpõ ỹ / & thou shalt not knowe, from whẽce it shall aryse. Myschefe shal fall vpõ ỹ, which thou shalt not be able to put of. A sodaine mystery shall come vpõ the, or euer thou be ware.

Now go to thy coniurers, and to the multitude of thy witches (whom thou hast bene acquanted withall from thy youth) yf they maye helpe the, or strengthen the. Thou hast hitherto had many councels of them / se let the heauengasers & the beholders of starres come on now and delyuer the: yee & lett them shewe / when these new thynges shall come vpon the. Beholde / they shalbe lyke strawe / which yf it be kyndled with fyre / no mã maye ryde it for the vehemence of the flame: And yet it geueth no synders to warme a man by, ner cleare fyre to syt by. Euẽ so shal they be vnto be vnto the whom thou hast ble\ occupyde from thy youth. Euery one shall shewe ꝑ hys erroneous waye/yet shall none of them defende the.

¶ The ypocrysie of the Iewes is reproued. The Lorde alone wyll be worshipped which hath chosen vs and which loueth vs to/ his awne sake.

a* By this he meaneth that ꝑ people of Israel were stubborne/frowarde/rebellyous/ vntractable/ vnruly and shameles.

b* Some reade: Beholde I haue purysyed the: but not as syluer: I haue chosen the out of ꝑ fournesse of affliccyon.

c* For myne awne sake/ For myne awne sake, he haue I done this: for ells whome wolde they pollute me: truly I will not geue my glorye to any other.

d* The same exponde it thus. I wold not suffre the wholly to perysshe: for yf I had proued and purysyed the as golde & syluer is proued and purysyed/ from which all mixture of drosse is clensed/ there shulde nothing haue remayned in the: verye fewe ye none shuld haue bene saued: but I wrought the vnder/ proued the in the fourneise of affliccyon/ that is/ I wrapped the in captiuite & bondage in Egypte/ from whych I afterwarde delyuered the. And this haue I done for myne awne sake.

HEare this O thou house of Jacob: ye that are called by the name of Israel/ ꝑ are come out of one stocke vᵖ Juda: which sweare by ꝑ name of the Lorde, & beare witnesse by the God of Israel (but not vᵖ treuth & ryght) whych are called fre men of the holy cyte/ as they that loke for conforth in ꝑ God of Israell, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thinges ꝑ I shewed you euer sence the begynnynge: haue I not brought them to passe, immediatly as they came out of my mouth/ & declared them? And they are come? Howbeit I knewe that thou art obstynate/ & that thy neck hath* an yron veyne, and ꝑ thy browes is of brasse. Neuertheles I haue euer sence ꝑ begynning shewed the of thinges for to come/ and declared them vnto the/ or euer they came to passe: that thou shuldest not saye: myne Idoll hath done it, my carued or cast ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consyder all these thinges whether it was ye ꝑ prophecyed them: But as for me, I tolde the before at the begynnynge, new and secrete thinges that thou knewest not of: And some done now not of olde tyme/ whereof thou neuer herdest/ before they were brought to passe: that thou canst not saye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be some wherof thou hast nether herde nor knowne/ nether haue they bene opened vnto thine eares afore time. For I knew that thou woldest maliciously offende/ therfore haue I called the a transgressoure/ euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my names sake/ I haue withdrawen my wrath/ & for myne honours sake I haue ouersene the/ so that I haue not rooted the out. b* Beholde I haue pourged the/ and not for money. I haue chosen the in ꝑ fyre of pouerte/ And that only for myne awne sake/ for I geue myne honoure to none other/ that thou shuldest not despyse me.

Herken vnto me O Jacob/ & Israel whom I haue called. I am euen he that is. I am ꝑ first and the last. My hande is the foundacyon of the earth & my right hande spanneth ouer the heauens. As soone as I called them they were there. Gather you all together/ & herken: Which of yonder goddes hath declared this that the Lorde wyll do by the kynge of Babylō (whome he loueth & fauoureth) and by ꝑ Caldees his arme? I my self alone haue tolde you thys before. Yee I shall call him and bringe him forth, & geue him a prosperous iourneye. Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken eny thynge darckly sence the begynnynge? when a thynge begynneth, I am there.

Wherfore the Lorde God with his spirite hath sent me And thus saieth the Lord God thine auenger/ the holy one of Israell: I am the Lord thy God/ whych teach ꝑ profitable thinges & leade ꝑ the waye/ that thou shuldest go. Yf thou wilt now regarde my cōmaundement/ thy welthynes shalbe as the water streame: & thy righteousnes as ꝑ waues flowynge in the see. Thy sede shalbe lyke as the sande in the see/ & the frute of thy body/ lyke the grauel stones therof: Thy name shall not be roted out/ nor destroyed before me. Ye shall go awaye from Babylon/ and escape the Caldees with a mery voyce. This shalbe spoke, declared abrode, & go forth vnto the ende of the worlde: so that it shalbe sayde: The Lorde hath defended his seruaūte Jacob/ that they suffred no thurste/ when they trauayled in the wildernesse. He claue ꝑ rockes a sonder, and the water gusshed out. As for the vngodly/ they haue no peace/ saieth the Lorde.

d* That is/ onely for myne awne name & glorye of myne awne gentylnes & longanymnes/ not for any of thy merytes & deseruynges/ which were none at all. For how wolde the gentyles & heathen haue polluted/ defyled & blasphemed my name yf I had rooted out myne awne people: & so haue made ꝑ treuth of the promeses whiche I had determined to fulfyll in Christ vayne & vntrue? For as well thys prayse of my treuth/ as the glory of the blessyng promysed in the seade of Abraham & David/ wyll I not geue vnto another people or nacyon. The health of the worlde shall come of the Jewes. Joh. iiij. & from none other. The glad tydynges of health shall the whole worlde receaue of no nother then of Christ/ by the preachynge of the Apostles. &c.

¶ Christ shall gather to gether all nacyōs be they neuer so farre of.

Iles, herken vnto me/ & take hede ye people frō farre: The Lord hath called me fro my byrth/ and made mencyon of my name from my mothers wombe: b* he hath made my mouth lyke a sharpe swerde, vnder the shadowe of hys hande hath he defended me/ & hyd me in his quyuer, as a good arowe & sayde vnto me: Thou art my seruaunt Israell, I wyll be honoured in the. Then answerde I: I shall lese my labeure/ I shall spende my strength in vayne. Neuertheles. I will commytte my cause and my worke vnto the Lorde my God. And now saieth the Lord, euen he ꝑ fashioned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruaunte/ that I maye bringe Jacob agayne vnto him. howbeit, Israel will not be gathered vnto him agayne. In whose syght I am greate which also is my Lord, my God and my strength. Lett it be but a small thynge/ that thou art my seruaūt/ to sett vp ꝑ kynredes of Jacob, & to restore the destruccion of Israell: yf I make the not also the lyght of the Gentiles ꝑ thou mayest be my health vnto the ende of the worlde.

The.li. Chapter.

Consolacō & cōforth is promysed vnto ꝑ faithfull.

HErken vnto me / ye that holde of ryghtuousnes / ye that seke the Lorde. Take hede vnto the stone/ wherout ye are hewen and to the graue wherout ye are dygged. Consydre Abraham youre father, and Sara that bare you: how that I called hym alone / prospered him well, & encreased him: how ꝑ Lorde comforted Syon / and repayred all her decaye: makynge her desserte as a Paradyse / & her wyldernesse as the garden of the Lorde. Wake vp / wake vp and be stronge: O thou* arme of the Lorde: wake vp lyke as in tymes past, euer & sence ꝑ world begāne.

* The arme of the Lorde here sygnifyeth Christ and the redemption of the worlde and the puttynge awaye of errours / that cometh by him. For this prayeth the prophet that it maye come.

Art not thou he, that hast wounded that proude lucifer, & hewē the dragon in peces: Art not thou euen he which hast dryed vp ꝑ depe of the see / which hast made playne the see greunde / that the delyuered myght goo thorow: That the redemed of ꝑ Lorde which turned agayne / might come with ioye vnto Syon / there to endure for euer: That myrth and gladnesse might be with thē: that sorowe & wo might flē from them: Yee I / I am euen he / that in all thynges geueth you consolacion. What art thou then / ꝑ feareſt a mortall mā the childe of mā, which goeth awaye as doeth ꝑ floure: And forgetteſt the Lorde that made the that spred out the heauens and leyde the foundacyon of the earth. But thou art euer afrayde for the syght of thyne oppressoure, which is ready to do harme: Where is the wrath of the oppressoure? It cōmeth on fast, it maketh hast to apeare: & it shall not perish, that it shulde not be able to destroye, nether shall it fayle for faute of nourishynge. I am the Lorde thy God, that make the see to be styll, and to rage: whose name is the Lorde of Hoostes I shall put my worde also in thy mouth / & defende the with the turnynge of my hande: that thou mayeſt plante the heauens / & leye the foundacyons of the earth / and saye vnto Sion: thou art my people.

Awake, awake, and stande vp O Jerusalem, thou that from the hand of ꝑ Lorde / hast dronken out the cuppe of his wrath: thou that hast supped of, and sucked out the stombringe cuppe to the botome. For amōge all the sonnes whom thou hast begotten / there is not one that maye holde the vp: and not one to leade the by the hande / of all the sonnes that thou hast norished. Both these thynges are happened vnto the / but who is sorye for it. Yee destruccyon, wastynge hunger and swerde: but who hath comforted the? Thy sonnes lye comfortles at ꝑ heade of euery strete lyke a taken venyson, & are full of ꝑ terrible wrath of ꝑ Lorde, & punishmēt of thy God. And therfore thou miserable & dronchē (howbeit not wt wyne) heare this: Thus sayeth thy Lorde: thy Lorde & God / the defender of his people: Beholde, I wil take ꝑ stombring cuppe out of thy hande, euen ꝑ cuppe wt the dregges of my wrath: ꝑ from hence forth thou shalt neuer drinke it more / & wil put it in their hande ꝑ trouble ꝑ: which haue spoken to thy soule: Stoupe downe / that we maye go ouer the: make thy body euen wt the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

 The cuppe of the Lordes wrath / sygnifyeth the affliccyon that we suffre / because we haue done agaynst ꝑ will of ꝑ Lorde: and the vengeaunce that he taketh of vs. for their offence. Psal. xxxix.

A consolacyon & comforth to the people of God.

The.lii. Chapter.

Upon vp / take thy strength vnto the: put on thyne honest rayment O Jerusalem, thou cytye of the holy one. For from thys tyme forth / there shall no vncircumcysed nor vncleane person come in the. Shake the frome the dust, aryse and stande vp / O Jerusalem. Pluck out thy neck from the bonde, O thou captyue daughter Syon. For thus sayeth ꝑ Lorde: ye are solde for naught / therfore shal ye be redemed also without eny mony.

For thus hath ꝑ Lorde sayde: My people went downe aforetyme in to Egipte / there to be straungers. After waarde dyd the syrye of the of the Assyrians oppresse them, for naught. And now what profyt is it to me (sayth the Lorde) þ my people is frely caried awaye, & brought in to bondage by their rulers and my *name euer stynll blasphemed: sayeth the Lorde. But þ my people maye knowe my name / I my selfe will speache in that daye. Beholde here am I. O how bewtifull are þ fete of the Embassytours þ bringeth þ message frō the mountayne / & proclameth peace: that bringeth the good tydyngs, & preacheth health / & sayeth vnto Sion. Thy God is the kyng. Thy watchmē shal lyft vp their voyce / wyth loude voyce shall they preach of hym: for they shall se him present, when þ Lorde shall come agayne to Sion.

Be glad, O thou desolate Jerusalem, & reioyce together: for the Lord will comforte his people he wyll deliuer Jerusalem. The Lord wil make bare *his holy arme & shewe it forth in þ syght of all the Gētiles, & all the endes of the earth shall se the sauyng health of oure God. Awaye, awaye get you out frō thence & touch no vncleane thynge. Go oute frō amonge soch. And be cleane ye þ beare þ *vessell of the Lord. But ye shall not go out with feare / nor make haste as they þ flee awaye: for the Lorde shall go before you / & the God of Israell shall kepe the watch.

Beholde, my seruaunt shall deale wysely / therfore shall he be magnyfyed / exalted and greatly honoured. Lyke as þ multitude shal wōder vpō him / because *his face shalbe so deformed & not as a mans face, & his bewtie lyke no man: Euen so shall the multytude of the Gētyles lowe vnto him & the kyngs shall shut their mouthes before him. For they that haue not bene tolde of him, shall se hym and they þ herde nothig of him, shal beholde him.

a *Of blasphemynge or dyshonouryng hys name / and what it signyfyeth / ye shall finde in Exech. xxxvi.c

b *Hys holy arme / for the ayde and helpe that is done by his holy worde: It will þ Lord make bare þ is open & declare & geue the beleefe therof to all the Gentyles & heathen / not only to the Jewes. Psal. xcviij.a. Some reade: The Lord hath made bare the arme of hys holy one. &c. they vnderstād ther by the kyngly power / & vertu of Christ.

c *That is to wete after the Chald. the deffell that was borne into Babylō & brought frō thēce agayne. Some reade Pactues. They vnderstād ther by the lawe & the goodnes & mercy of God. How & what harmes the Christen shuld beare (for vnto vs is it spokē as well as vnto the Jewes) doth S. Paul teache vs in the pistle to the Ephesians the. vi. Chapter. c.

d *Hys face shalbe so deformed & not as a mans face. &c. That is / hys bylage shalbe more deformed then other mēnes: and hys bewtye fowler then the bewtye of the sonnes of men. The whole sentence meaneth that many men shalbe astonyed when they shall se Christ oure sauyour (whych was exceadyng bewtyfull before all the sonnes of men. Psalm. xlv. a) so wyckedly and vyolently intreated of the Jewes: spytte vpon skourged / crowned wyth thorne, and all be bloudyed: yee and greatlyer humbled / contemned / and dysprysed / then euer was any mortall man.

The liij. Chapter.

The prophecyeth expressly of the passyon of oure Sauyour Jesus Christ.

1 *Romā.x.c. Johan.xij.c.

WHo geueth credence vnto oure preachyng? Or to whō is the arme of the Lorde knowne? He shall growe before the Lorde like as a braūch / & as a rote in a drye ground / he shall haue nether bewtye nor fauoure. Whē we loke vpon him / there shalbe no fayrnesse: we shall haue no lust vnto him. He shalbe the most symple / and dispysed of all / which yet hath good experience of sorowes & infirmyties. We shall reken him so symple & so vile / that we shall hyde oure faces fro him. How be it (of a treuth) he only taketh awaye oure infirmite / and beareth oure payne: Yet we shall iudge him / as though he were plaged & cast downe of God: where as he (not with stādyng) shall be wounded for oure offences / & smytten for oure wickednes. For the payne of oure punishment shalbe layde vpon him / and with his stryppes shall we be healed.

a *To turne oure awne waye is to do our awne wylles / & to satysfye our awne appetyte & to be geuē vp into our awne abhorres iustice. As it is sayde Psal. lxxxi.c. I geue them vp. &c.

As for vs / we go all astraye (lyke shepe) euery one *turneth hys awne waye. But thorowe him the Lorde pardoneth all oure synnes. He shal be payned & troubled, & shal not open his mouth. He shalbe led as a shepe to be slayne / yet shall he be as stylll as a lābe before the shearer, and not open his mouth. He shall be had awaye / his cause not herde & without eny iudgmēt: Whose generacyon yet nomā maye nombre / when he shalbe cut of frō the *b grounde of the lyuynge: Whych punishmēt shall go vpon him, for the transgression of my people. His graue shalbe geuen him with the condempned / & his crucifyenge with the theues. Where as he dyd neuer violence nor vnryght, nether hath there bene eny deceatfulnesse in his mouth.

b *The ground or lande of the lyuynge is no not yet thynge than hys present lyfe & the ground or lande wherin we lyue. Psal. xxij. b.

Yet hath it pleased þ Lorde to smyte him with infirmyte / that when he had made hys soule an offeryng for synne, he might se lōge lastynge sede. And thys deuyce of the Lorde shall prospere in his hande. With trauayle & laboure of his soule / shall he obtayne great ryches. My ryghtuous seruaunt shall wyth his wysdome iustifye & deliuer the multitude / for he shall beare awaye their synnes. Therfore wyll I geue him the multitude for his parte / & he shall deuyde the strōge spoyle because he hal geue ouer his soule to death *& shalbe reckened amonge þ trāsgressours / which neuertheles shall take awaye þ synne of the multitude / and make intercession for the myssdoers.

¶ By these blynde watchmen vnderstād the chefe Prestes the Scribes. & Pharises. yc which were the pretenders & deprauers of the lawe of God. These for fylthy lukers lake abolyshed the true seruice of God: & were the chefe causers of the forsaking of Israel. They were slouthfull and sought not that which was for the edification of the people & for the glory of God: but that which was for their awne priuate profet and pleasure. They were slouthful to rote out vice & to plante vertue/ & dylygent in the profounde & deape darke of ignorance of Idylnesse of lecherousnesse & of pryde. ¶ The.lvii. Chapter.

¶ The Iewes are rebuked for their iniurye done to Christ.

AL in ꝑ meane season the righteous perisheth/ & no man regardeth it in his hert. Good godly people are taken awaye / & no man cōsyderyth it. Namely: ꝑ the righteous is cōueyed awaye thorow ꝑ wicked: that he him selfe myght be in rest/ lye quietly vpon his bed/ & lyue after his awne pleasure. Come hither therfore ye charmers children *ye sonnes of the aduoutrer & ꝑ whore: Wherin take ye youre pleasure: Vpō whom gape ye with your mouth/ & bleare out your tonge? Are ye not children of aduoutry/ and a sede of dissimulacyon? Ye take youre pleasure vnder ꝑ okes/ & vnder al grene trees/ ꝑ childe beynge slayne in ꝑ valleys/ & dēnes of stone. Thy parte shalbe with ꝑ stony rockes by ꝑ riuer: Yee euē these shal be thy parte. For there thou hast poured meat & drynkofferinges vnto thē. Shulde I ouerse that? Thou hast made thy bed vpō hye mountaynes/ thou wentest vp thither/ & there hast thou slayne sacrifices. Behynde the doores & postes/ hast thou sett vp thy remembraunce. When thou haddest dyscouered thy selfe to another then me/ when thou wentest downe & made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou didest carue the certaynte of yonder ꝑsons, & louedest their couches, where thou sawest thē Thou wentest streight to kinges with oyle & dyuerse oyntmentes (that is) thou hast sent thy messaungers farre of / and yet art thou fallen in to the pyt therby. Thou hast had trouble for ꝑ multitude of thine awne wayes yet saydest thou neuer: I wyl leaue of. Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or health) of thy selfe/ & therfore thou beleuest not that thou art sick. For whē wilt thou be abasshed or feare seing thou hast broken thy promyse / and remembrest not me / nether hast me in thyne hert? Thinkest thou, ꝑ I also wil holde my peace (as a fore tyme) ꝑ thou fearest me not? Yee verely I will declare thy goodnes & thy workes but they shall not profyt ꝑ whē thou cryest/ let thy chosen heape delyuer ꝑ. But ꝑ wynde shall take them all awaye/ & carye them in to the ayre. I am wroth whom for his couetousnes & lust, I smyte him, I hyde me/ and am angrie/ whē he turneth him selfe / & foloweth ꝑ by waye of his awne hert. But yf I may se his right waye agayne, I make him whole/ & lede him and restore him vnto them whom he maketh ioyfull / & that were sory for him. I make the frutes of thankesgeuyng. I geue peace vnto them that are farre of/ and to thē that are nye/ saye I the Lord/ that make him whole. people that dyd ryght/ and had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They argue with me concernynge ryght iudgement/ and wyll pleate at the lawe with their God. Wherfore fast we (saye they) and thou seist it not? we put oure lyues to straytenesse/ and thou regardest it not?

a* Thys fast remayneth yet amoge ỳ Iewes for true chastenynge of the body & abstenynge frō vice will we pretende their vnderstāding: but all thinges be ỳ the Jewes doth God a great pleasure when we fast & also that we then fast when we absteyne from one thing & fall more deepely in another. And verely in thys thynge doth oure superstycyon exceede the superstycyō of the Jewes. For we neuer trade that they euer take it for a fast to absteyne frō flesh and eate ether fysh or what meate (as they call it) a* Beholde/ when ye *fast, youre lust remayneth styll: for ye done lyue vyolence to youre detters: lo ye fast to stryke a debate & to smyte hym with youre fyst that speaketh vnto you. Ye fast not as some tyme, ỳ youre voyce myght be hearde aboue. Thynke ye this fast pleaseth me that a man shuld chasten hym self for a dare/ & to wrythe his head aboute lyke an hoke in an hearry cloth & to lye vpon the earth? Shulde that be called fastyng or a daye ỳ pleaseth the Lorde? But this fastynge pleaseth not me, tyll ỳ tyme be thou lowse hym out of bondage, that is in thy daunger: ỳ thou breake the oothe of wycked bargaynes/ that thou lett the oppressed go fre/ & take from them all maner of burthens. It pleaseth not me, tyll thou deale thy bred to the hongry and bryngе the poore fatherlesse home vnto thy house whē thou seist the naked that thou couer hym/ and hyde not thy face from thyne awne flesh.

Then shall thy light breake forth as the mornyng & thy health florysh ryght shortly: thy ryghteousnesse shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

Then ỳ thou callest, the Lorde shall answere the: ỳ thou cryest he shall saye: here I am. Yee ỳ thou layest away thy burthens/ and holdest thy fyngers/ and ceasest from blasphemous talkynge, ỳ thou hast compassyon vpon the hongrye, & refreshest the troubled soule: Then shall thy light spryngе out in the darcknesse/ & thy darcknesse shalbe as the noone daye. The Lorde shall euer be thy gyde/ and satysfye the desyre of thyne herte/ and fyll thy bones wyth mary. Thou shalt be lyke a freshwatred garden/ and lyke the fountеyne of water/ that neuer leaueth runnyng. Then the places ỳ haue euer bene waste/ shalbe buylded of ỳ: there shalt thou layes foundacyō for many kynredes. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges/ & the buylder agayne of the waye of ỳ Sabbath.

Yee ỳ thou turne thy fete frō the Sabbath, so that thou do not the thynge wherych pleaseth thy selfe in my holy daye: then shalt thou be called vnto the pleasaūt/ holy/ & glorious Sabbath of the Lorde/ where thou shalt be in honoure: so that thou do not after thine awne ymagination/ nether seke thine awne wyll/ nor speake thyne awne wordes. Thē shalt thou haue thy pleasure in ỳ Lorde/ which shall carye ỳ hye aboue ỳ earth, and fede the wt the heritage of Jacob thy father: for ỳ Lordes awne mouth hath so promysed.

¶ The Lorde is myghtie to saue/ and readye to heare oure requestes.

Beholde/ the Lordes hande is not so shortened ỳt can not helpe nether is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But youre mysdedes haue separated you frō youre God/ & your synnes hyde his face frō you ỳt he heareth you not. For youre hādes are defyled wt bloud, & youre fingers wt vnrighteousnesse: Your lyppes speake lesynges/ & your tonge setteth oute wyckednes. No man regardeth righteousnes, & no mā iudgeth truly. Euery man hopeth in vayne thinges & ymagyneth disceate/ cōceaueth weerynesse/ & bryngeth forth euell. They *hyrde cockatrice egges/ & weeue ỳ spyders webb. *Who so eateth of their egges, dieth. *But ỳ one treade vpō thē, there cōmeth vp a serpent. *Their webbe maketh no clothe & they maye not couer thē wt their labours. *Their dedes are ỳ dedes of wyckednes/ & ỳ worcke of robbery is in their handes. And this is ỳ cause ỳ equite is so farre frō vs & ỳ righteousnes cōmeth not nye vs. We loke for light lo it is darcknesse: for ỳ mornynge shyne we walcke in ỳ darcke. We grope like ỳ blinde vpō ỳ wall we grope euē as one ỳ hath none eyes. We stomble at ỳ none daye as though it were towarde night: in the fallyng places lyke men ỳ are half dead. In their troubles he forsoke them not/but the angell that went forth frō his presence delyuered them: Of very loue & kyndnesse that he had vnto them/ redemed he them. He hath borne them/ and caried them vp euer/sence the worlde begāne. But after they prouoked hym to wrath and vexed hys holy mynde, he was their enemye/ & fought agaynst them hym self. Yet remembred he ỹ olde tyme of Moses & hys people: How he brought them from the water of the see, as a shepherde doth wyth hys shepe: how he had geuen hys holy spryte amonge them: how he had led Moses by the ryght hande wyth hys glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (wherby he gat hym selfe an euerlastyng name) how he led thē in ỹ depe/ as an horse is led in the playne/ ỹ they shulde not stomble. ¶ The.lxvj. Chapter.

¶ God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes hande. He despyseth sacrifyces done without mercy & fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the Ethyopiens the Sabboth is continuall.

THus sayeth the Lorde: Heauen is my sete/& þ earth is my foote stole. a* Where shall now þ house stande that ye wyll buylde vnto me? And where shall be the place / þ I will dwell in? As for these thinges, my hande hath made thē all/ & they are all created sayeth the Lorde. Which of thē shal I then regarde? Euen hym that is of a lowly troubled spirite & standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ore for me doth me so greate dishonoure as he þ kylleth a man. He that kylleth a shepe for me choketh a dogge. He þ byngeth me meat offeringes offereth swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memorial of incense prayseth the thynge that is vnright. Yet take they such wayes in hande and their soule deliteth in these abominacyons.

a* Where shall now the house stande. & c. As who shulde saye: Where to make ye me a temple of mānes hādy worke be which rule & whole worlde? Hytherto haue I suffred the temple to kepe you Jewes in a certain maner of instruccion and obedyence: and chose you one place for youre scripture/to thintent þ ye shulde not fall to the Idoles of the Gētyles. But now will I haue all Idoles banysshed/ and for Jewrye wil I chalenge vnto me þ whole worlde/ for one people all the dwellers vpon þ earth. which shalbe my worshypers in spirite & in trueth. Youre brethren that hate you and cast you out for my names sake/sayd: Lett the Lorde magnyfye himself that we maye se youre gladnesse: and yet they shalbe confounded.

For as touchyng the cytie and þ temple/ I heare the voyce of the Lorde/that wyll reward/& recompence his enemyes: lyke as when a wyfe bringeth forth a mā chyld/ or euer she suffre the payne of the byrth and anguysh of the trauayle. Who euer herde or sawe

In one daye? or are the people borne all at once / as Syon beareth her sonnes? For thus sayeth the Lorde: Am I he that maketh other to beare / and beare not myself? Am not I he that beareth / and maketh baren? sayeth thy God. Reioyse wyth Ierusalem/ and be glad wyth her / all ye that loue her. Be ioyful wyth her / all ye that mourned for her. For ye shal suche cõforte out of her breastes/ and be satisfied. Ye shal taste, and haue delite in the plentifulnesse of her power. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde / I wyll lett peace in to her / lyke a water floude / and the myght of ỳ Heythen like a flowyng streame. And when ye se thys / youre herte shall reioyse / and youre bones shall florysh lyke an herbe.

¶ Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowne amonge hys seruauntes / & his indignacyon amonge hys enemyes. For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyre / & hys charet shall be lyke a whyrl wynde / that he maye recõpence his vengeance in his wrath and his indignacyon wyth the flame of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh wyth the fyre and wyth his swerde/ and there shalbe a greate nombre slayne of the Lorde. Soch as haue made themselues holy and cleane in the gardens / & those that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce/ and other abhomynacyons/ shal be taken awaye together/ sayeth the Lorde. For I wyl come to gather all people & tõges wyth their workes and imaginacyons: these shall come / and se my glory. Unto them shal I geue a token/ and sende certayne of them (that be delyuered) amõge the Gentiles: in to Celycia/ Lycya and Lidya (where men can handle bowes) in to Italye also and Grecke lande.

¶ The Iles farre of/ that haue not herde speake of me / and haue not sene my glory/ shal preach my prayse amonge the Gentiles and shal bryng all youre brethren for an offrynge vnto ỳ Lorde / out of all people vpõ horses / charrettes and horse lytters / vpon Mules and cartes to Ierusalem my holy hyll (sayeth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldren of Israel bryng the offrynge in cleane vessels to the house of Lorde.

And I shall take out certayne of them for to be preastes and leuytes / sayeth the Lorde. For lyke as the new heauen and the new earth wyych I wyll make / shalbe fast stablyshed by me: (sayeth the Lorde) So shal youre sede and youre name contynue* and there shalbe a new Moone for the other/ and a new Sabbath for the other/ and* al flesh shal come to worshipe be fore mé (sayeth ỳ Lorde) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the carkyns of them that haue transgressed agayn me. For their wormes shall not dye/ nether shal their fyre be quẽched / & al flesh shall abhorre them.

¶ But this is there shalbe a perpetual feaste & a perpetuall reaste. ¶ They shall not then kepe their Sabboth after the maner of the Iewes nor make differẽce betwene daye & daye: but they shall kepe a cõtynuall Sabboth / & neuer do seruile workes/ that is/ synnes. Then shal they alwayes be in the tẽple/ that is/ alwayes shall they prayse God in spirite & truethe/ as wel in aduersyte as in prosperite: They shal nether resorte vnto Idoles nor any creatures/ but shall worshippe the Lorde only.

¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Esay.

¶ The boke of the Prophete Jeremye.

¶ The stoth of Jeremye / and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth him selfe & wolde refuse the office of a prophete / because he is younge and vnexpert. He is taught of the Lorde & becometh bolde. God openeth vnto him / that the destruccyon of the Jewes / by the Babylonians / is at hande. Jeremye is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes / without feare.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

a. It is necessary thynge to the vnderstanding of the Prophetes / to to knowe the storyes of the tymes wherin they prophesyed. The storyes of Jeremyes tyme perteyne in the fourth of the kynges / from the .xxii. chapter to the ende of the boke: & in the second of the Chronycles / from the xxxiiii. chapter to the ende also. He prophecyed about .xli. yeares.

b. I sanctified the &c. That is I dedycated / chose / appoynted / prepared & set the a syde / to be a Prophete vnto the people. ¶ Saynt Joh. x. g Saye ye then vnto hym who the father hath sanctified. &c. that is / hath chosen. &c.

THese are the Sermons of Jeremy the sonne of Helkiah the Preste / one of them that dwelt at Anathoth in the lande of Ben Jamin: when ꝑ Lorde had fyrst spoken wyth him a *in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda in the .xiii. yeare of hys kyngdome: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda and vntill the .xi. yeares of Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was take · eue in the fyfth Moneth. The worde of ꝑ Lorde spake thus vnto me: Before I fashioned the in thy mothers wombe, I dyd knowe the: And or euer thou wast borne b *I sanctified the / and ordened the to be a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God / I am vnmete, for I am yet but younge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so / I am to ponge: for thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto / & whatsoeuer I cōmaunde the that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces for I wylbe with the / to deliuer the / sayeth the Lorde.

And with that / the Lorde stretched oute his hande, and touched my mouth / & sayde moreouer vnto me. Beholde I put my wordes in thy mouth / and this daye do I set the ouer the people & kyngdomes: that thou mayest rote out breake of destroye & make waste: and that thou mayest buylde vp and plante After this the Lorde spake vnto me saying: Jeremy / what seyst thou? And I sayde: I se a wakyng rodde. Then sayde the Lorde: thou hast sene right / for I wyll watch diligently vpon my worde, to performe it.

It happened afterwarde / that the Lorde spake to me agayne / and sayde: What seyst thou? And I sayde: I do se a seething pot / lokynge from out of the north bryther warde.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the north shal come a plage vpon all ꝑ dwellers of the lande. For lo I wil call all the officers of the kingdomes of the north (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall come / and euery one shall sett his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in all their walles rounde a bout & thorow all the cytes of Juda. And thorow them shall I declare my iudgment vpon all the wyckednesse of those men that haue forsaken me: ꝑ haue offred vnto straūge goddes and worshypped the workes of their awne handes.

And therfore *gyrde vp thy loynes, aryse / and tell thē all, that I geue the in cōmaundment. Feare them not / I wyll not haue the to be afrayed of them. For beholde, thys daye do I make ꝑ a stroge fensed towne, an yron pyller, and a wall of stele agaynst the whole lande agaynst the kynges and mightie men of Juda agaynst the prestes and people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynst the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the: for I am with the, to deliuer the sayeth the Lorde.

¶ God rehearseth his benefytes done vnto the Jewes. Agaynst Prestes & Prophetes / or preachers that contemne & despyse God. The Jewes are destroyed / because they forsoke God / & because they ranne & whore hunted after Idoles.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

GOuer / the worde of the Lorde cōmaūded me thus: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Jerusalem / & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre the for the kyndnesse of thy youth / and because of thy stedfast loue: in that thou folowdest me thorow the wyldernesse / in an vntylled lande. Thou Israel wast halowed vnto the Lorde / and so was his fyrst frutes. All they that deuoured Israel / offended: myfortune fell vpon them / sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde / O thou house of Jacob / and all the generacion of the house of Israel. ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnfaythfulnesse founde youre fathers in me / that they wente so farre awaye fro me / fallinge to lightnesse / and beynge so vayne? ¶ They thought not in their hertes: Where haue we left the Lorde / that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte / that led vs thorow the wyldernesse / thorow a desserte & rough land / thorow a drye and a deedly lāde / yee a lande that no man had gone thorowe / and wherin no man had dwelt. And when I had

c. For a Prophete or Preacher to gyrde vp hys loynes / is boldely & constantly to resyst the false oppynions & doctryne of the wicked / & euen to reprehende in them the worde of truth (whych hateth hate) whether they wyll or no: and that not once or ewise but vntill such tyme as they either amende or elles warre angry & furious wyth it. Yea and euen to remoue by the cōmaundement of the Lorde / with ꝑ power & sygnes of his worde / & not to fet by the threatnynges of rulers / whych can do nothynge but that which god permytteth & sendeth them: therfore are they not to be fear d of any bodyly & faythfull seruaunt of the Lorde.

had brought you into a pleasaũt welbuilded lande/that ye myght enioye the frutes and al the cõmodyties of the same: ye went forth and defyled my lande/ & brought myne heritage to abhominacyon.

The Prestes them selues sayde not once: Where is the Lorde? They that haue ꝧ la we in their hãdes/ knowe me not: The shepherdes offende agaynst me. The prophetes do seruyce vnto Baal / & folowe soch thynges as shall bringe them no profyt.

¶ Wherfore I am constrayned (sayeth the Lorde) to make my complaynte vpon you/ & vpon youre childrẽ. Go in to the Iles of Cethim/and loke well: sende vnto Cedar/ take diligent hede: and se / whether soch thynges be done there/ wether the Gentiles thẽ selues deale so falsly and vntruly with their godds/ (whych yet are no goddes in dede) But my people hath geuen ouer their hye honoure/ for a thinge that maye not helpe them.

Be astonished (O ye heauẽs) be afrayde/ & abashed at soch a thinge / sayeth ꝧ Lorde. For my people hath done two euels. They haue forsaken me the well of the water of lyfe/and digged them pyttes/yee vyle & brosen pyttes/that holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaũt/or one of the household? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roare and crye then vpon hym/as a lyon? They haue made his lande waste/his cytyes are so brẽt vp/that there is no man dwellinge in them. Yee the chyldren of * * Noph and Taphnes haue defyled thy neck.

* Noph and Taphnes were two of ꝧ chef cytyes of Egypte / wherin the Hebrewes put their trust/ but in vayne.

Cometh not this vnto the / because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypte? to drynche foule water? Ether what makest thou in ꝧ waye to Assria? To drynche water of the floude? Thyne awne wickednesse shal reproue the/& thy turnynge awaye shall cõdemne the: that thou mayest knowe & vnderstande/ how euell and hurtfull a thynge it is/ ꝧ thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God/ & not feared him/sayeth the Lorde God of Hostes.

I haue euer brokẽ thy yock of olde/& burste thy bondes: yet saiest thou/I will nomore serue/but (lyke an harlot) thou rũnest about vpon all hie hilles/& amonge al grene trees where as I planted ꝧ out of noble grapes & good rotes. Howart thou turned then in to a bitter/vnfruteful/& straunge grape? Yee & ¶ that so sore: that though thou walshe the * Nitrus & make thy self to sauoure vp that swete smellinge herbe of Borith: yet in my sight thou art stayned with thy wyckednesse sayeth the Lorde thy God.

* Nitrus is a kynd of salte good to washe clothes in/& the body also.

Saye not now: I am not vnclene/and I haue not folowed the Goddes. Loke vpon thyne awne wayes in the woddes / valleys and dennes: so shalt thou knowe/what thou hast done. Thou art lyke a swyft Dromedary/that goeth easely his waye: and thy wãtonnes is lyke a wylde Asse / that vseth the wyldernesse / and that snoffeth and bloweth at his will. Who can tame the? All they that seke the/ shall not fayle/but fynde ꝧ in thine awne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy foote from nakednes and thy throte from thyrste / and thynckest thus in thy selfe: tush: I will take no sorowe/ I will loue the straunge goddes/ and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a theefe that is taken with ꝧ dede commeth to shame / euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the comen people/ their kinges and rulers/their prestes & prophetes. For they saye to a stock, thou art my father/and to a stone: thou hast begotten me / yet they haue turned their backs vpon me / & not their face. But in the tyme of their trouble when they saye: stande vp/ and helpe vs/ I shal answere thẽ: Where are now thy godds/that thou hast made ꝧ? byd them stande vp/ & helpe the in the tyme of nede? For loke how many cities thou hast (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Romai. c. Jeremy xxij. b Zach. xij. b

Wherfore then will ye goo to law we wyth me, seynge ye all are synners agaynst me/ sayeth the Lorde? It is but lost labour, that I smyte youre chyldren / for they receaue not my correccyon. Youre awne swearde destroyeth youre prophetes lyke a deuouryng lyon. If ye be the people of the Lorde / then herken vnto his worde: Am I then become a wyldernesse vnto the people of Israel? or a lãde that hath no light? Wherfore sayeth my people then: we are fallen of / and we wyll come no more vnto the? Doth a mayden forget her rayment / or a bryde her stomacher? And doth my people forget me so lõge? Why boostest thou thy wayes so lyke, to optayne ¶ fauoure ther thorowe) when thou hast yet stayned them with blasphemies?

Deute. xxiij. b Jeremy. xxv. a. Ezech. xx. a.

Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people / and that not in corners & holes only, but opẽly in al these places. Yet darrest thou saye: I am gyltelesse: Tush/his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde/ I wyll reason wyth the because thou darrest say: I haue not offended. O how euell wil it be for the/to abyde it: when it shall be knowne/ how oft thou hast gone backward? For thou shalt be confoũded/as wel of Egypte/as of the Assirians: yee thou shalt go thy waye from them / and smyte thyne handes together vpon thy head. Because the Lord shall bringe that confydence and hope of thine to naught / and thou shalt not prospere with all.

¶ God bryng merciefull calleth vnto repentaūce his people/ which he had forsaken for their whoredome with Idoles. He exhorteth Israel vnto repentaunce/ promysyng the hope of the blessednes that shulde haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God/ confessyng their offence.

¶ The.iij. Chapter.

IOmenly / when a man putteth awaye his wife and she goeth from him, & marieth with another then the question is: shulde he resorte vnto her eny more after? Is not this lande then defyled and vncleane? But as for the / *thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet turne agayne to me, saieth ỳ Lord. Lift vp thine eyes on euery syde / & loke / yf thou be not defyled. Thou hast wayted for them in the stretes / and as a murtherer in ỳ wildernesse. Therfore thy whoredome & shamefull blasphemies, is the lande defyled.

This is the cause / that the rayne & euenynge dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whores forehead / and canst not be ashamed. Els woldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp/ & led me from my youth: Wylt thou then put me awaye and cast me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdraw thy selfe cleane fro me? Neuertheles / thou speakest soch wordes / but thou art euer doinge worse and worse.

¶ *The Lord sayd also vnto me: in the tyme of Josiah the kynge: Hast thou sene what ỳ shrinking Israel hath done? how she hath runne vp vpon all the hylles, and amōge all thick trees, and there played the harlot: hast thou sene also (when she had done all thys) how I sayde vnto her: that she shulde turne agayne vnto me / & yet she is not returned? Juda ỳ vnfaythfull syster of hers also sawe this: Namely that after I had well sene the aduoutrye of the shrynchyng harlot Israel/ I put her awaye / and gaue her a bill of deuorcement.

For all this/ her vnfaythfull syster Juda was not ashamed/ but went backe & played the whore also. Yee and ỳ noyse of her whordome hath defyled the whole lande. For she hath committed her aduoutrye with stones and stockes.

Neuertheles/ her vnfaithfull sister Juda is not turned vnto me againe with her whole herte / but faynedly / sayeth the Lorde. And the Lorde sayde vnto me. The backsyder Israell is more ryghtuous / then the vnfaythfull Juda: & therfore go preche these wordes towarde the north / and saye: Thou shrynkynge Israell / turne agayne (sayeth the Lorde) and I wyll not turne my face from you, for I am mercyfull, saieth the Lorde/ & I will not alwaye beare displeasure against the: but on this condicion / that thou knowe thy greate blasphemy: Namely / that thou hast vnfaythfully forsaken the Lorde thy God/ & hast made thy self part taker of straūge Gods vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wyll to heare my voyce / sayeth the Lord. ¶ Ezechiel.xvi.c. Osee.viij.a.

*O ye shrinkyng chyldrē/ turne agayne/ sayeth the Lorde: & I wyll be maryed wyth you. For I wyll take one out of the cytye / & two out of one generacyō from amōge you/ and bryng you out of Syon: and will geue you herdemē after myne awne mynde/ which shall fede you wyth lernynge and wysdome. Moreouer/ when ye be increased and multiplyed in the lande / then (sayeth the Lorde) there shall no more boost be made of ỳ arcke of the Lords Testamēt: Noman shall thinke vpon it / neither shall any man make mencīō of it: for from thence forth it shall neither be vysyted/ nor honoured with gyftes.

Then shall Jerusalem be called the Lords seate and all Heathen shalbe gathered vnto it/ for the name of the Lordes sake / which shalbe set vp at Jerusalem. And from that tyme forth/ they shall folow no more ỳ ymagynacyon of their awne frowarde herte.

¶ Then those that be of the house of Juda / shall go vnto the house of Israel: & they shall come together out of ỳ North, into the same lande that I haue geuē your fathers. I haue shewed also/ how I toke the vp being but a childe/ & gaue the a pleasaūt lande for thyne herytage, yee & a goodly Hoste of ỳ Heathē: & how I cōmaunded the ỳ thou shuldest* call me father only/ and not to shrynke fro me. *Mat.xvij.c

But lyke as a womā playeth her louer/ so are ye vnfaythfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) sayeth the Lorde. And therfore ỳ voyce of the chyldrē of Israel was herde on euery syde/ wepinge and wailinge: for they haue defyled their waye / and forgotten God their Lorde.

¶ O ye shrinkynge childrē turne agayne (sayinge: lo / we are thyne / for thou art the Lorde oure God:) And so shall I heale youre backsydynges. Ehe hilles fall/ and all ỳ hie pryde of the mountaynes / but the health of Israell standeth only vpō God oure Lorde.

Confusyon hath deuoured oure fathers labour from oure youth vp: yee their shepe and bullockes/ their sonnes and daughters. So do we also slepe in oure confusyon/ and shame couereth vs: for we and oure fathers frō oure youth vp vnto this daye haue synned agaynst the Lorde oure God / and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord oure God.

¶ The true repentaunce & returnynge to God. He exhorteth to the circumcysyon of the herte. The destrucyon of Jewry is propheryed / for the malyce of their hertes.

¶ The. iiij. Chapter.

¶ Israel

*That is/ thou hast loued whordome/ & seduced many Idoles of the gētyles in hilles, woddes, valeyes & fyldes & in many other places as we often rede in ỳ Bible: & hast forsaken me thy husbād/ cōtrary to the maner of honest maried women wherfore thou art worthy to be deuorced, yet turne & repente & forthinke the carnallyte & I wyll not cease to receaue the agayne.

*Jere.i.a Jere.vj.a Ezech.xvj.b

A Israell/ yf thou wylt turne ỹ/then turne vnto me / sayeth the Lorde. And yf thou wilt put awaye thyne abhominacyons out of my syght/ thou shalt not be moued: And shalt sweare: The Lorde lyueth: in treuth / in equyte and rightuousnesse:and all people shall be fortunable and joyfull in him. For thus saieth the Lorde/to all Juda & Jerusalem:plowe your lande/and sowe not amonge the thornes.

Be circuncysed in the Lorde/and cut awaye the forefkynne of youre hertes / all ye of Juda/and all the indwellers of Jerusalē: that my indignacyō breake not out like fyre and kyndle/ so that no man maye quench it/ because of the wyckednes of youre ymagyna:cyons.

B Preach in Juda and Jerusalem/ crie out and speake:blowe the trōpettes in the lande crie that euery man maye heare / and saye: Gather you together / and we will go into stronge cities. Set vp the token in Syon/ spede you and make no tarienge: for I will bringe a greate plage, and a greate destruccyon from the north. For the spoyler of the Gentiles is broken vp from his place / as a lyon out of his denne, that he maye make the lande waste, and destroye the cyties/ so that no man maye dwell therin. Wherfore gyrde youre selues about w sack cloth * mourne and wepe for the fearfull wrath of ỹ Lorde shall not be withdrawen from you.

C At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) the hert of the kynge and of the prynces shall be gone/ the prestes shalbe astonished, and the prophetes shalbe sore afraied. Then sayde I: O Lord God, hast thou then deceaued this people and Jerusalem, sayenge: ye shal haue peace & now the swearde goeth thorow their lyues: Then shall it be sayde to the people & to Jerusalē: b* there cōmeth a warme wynd from the north thorow the waye of my people, but nether to fanne/ner to clense.

D c* After that shall there come vnto me a stronge wynde/ & then will I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his charrettes are lyke a stormy wynde: his horsmē are swifter then the Aegle. Wo vnto vs for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem / wash thyne herte from wyckednesse/ that thou mayest be helped. How longe shall thy noysome thoughtes remayne wyth the?

For a voyce frō Dan and from the hill of Ephraim speaketh out / and telleth of a destruction. Beholde the Heathen geue Jerusalem warninge, and preach vnto her/ that her destroyers are cōminge from farre cōtrees. They tell the cyties of Juda the same also, they shall geue them warninge in euery place like as the watchmen in the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wrath/ sayeth the Lorde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes / haue brought the vnto thys / thys is thyne awne wyckednesse & disobedyence that hath possessed thyne herte: Ah my bely, ah my bely/ (shalt thou crye) how is my hert so sore: my hert panteth within me / I can not be styll/ for I haue herde ỹ crye of the trōpettes / and peales of warre.

They crye murthur vpon murthur / the whole lande shall perysh. Immediatly my tentes were destroyed/ and my hangynges/ in the twinckelinge of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokēs of warre/ and heare the noyse of the trompettes.

Neuertheles this shall come vpon them because my people is become foolysh / and hath otterly no vnderstandynge. They are the chyldren of foolishnes/ and wythout enderstandynge. To do euell, they haue wyt ynough: but to do wel/ they haue no wysdome. I haue loked vpon the earth / and lo, it is waste and voyde. I loked towarde heauen / and it had no shyne.

I beheld the mountaynes / and they trēbled/ and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked aboute me/ and there was no body / and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well / and the plowed felde was become waste: yee all their cities were brokē downe at the presence of the Lorde / and indygnacion of hys wrath.

For thus hath the Lorde sayde: The whole lande shalbe desolate / yet wyll I not then haue done. And therfore lett the earth mourne / and lett the heauen be sory aboue: for the thinge that I haue purposed and taken vpon me to do / shall not repente me / and I wyll not go from it. The whole lande shall flie/ for the noyse of the horsmen and bowmē: they shall runne in to dennes in to woddes/ and clymme vp the stony rockes. All the cytyes shalbe voyde/ and no man dwellinge therin.

What wylt thou now do/ thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy selfe w scarlet / and deckest the wyth gold: though thou paintest thy face wyth colours / yet shalt thou trym thy selfe in vayne.

For those that hytherto haue bene thy greate fauourers/ shall abhorre the/ and go aboute to slaye the. For (me thynckth) I heare a noyse / lyke as it were of a woman trauelynge / or one labouringe of her fyrst chylde: Euen the voyce of the daughter Syon/ that casteth out her armes / and sowneth / sayenge: Ah wo is me / how sore vered & fainte is my herte, for them that are slayne?

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast correcte them for amendemēt / but they refused thy correccyō. They made their faces harder then a stone / and wolde not amende.

2 Therfore I thought in my selfe: peraduenture they are so symple & folish / that they vnderstande nothynge of the Lordes waye / and iudgmentes of oure God. 6 Lo / I will brynge a people vpon you frō farre, O house of Jsrael (sayeth the Lorde) a myghtye people / an olde people / a people whose speach thou knowest not / nether vnderstādest what they saye. Their arowes are lodane death / yee they them selues be very giaūtes. This people shall eate vp thy fruite & thy meate / yee they shall deuoure thy sonnes & thy daughters / thy shepe & thy bullockes.

7 They shall eate vp thy grapes & fyges. As for thy stronge and well fenced cyttyes / wherin thou dydest trust / they shall destroye them with the swearde. Neuertheles I will not then haue done wt you / sayeth ỳ Lorde.

8 But yf they saye: wherfore doth the Lorde E oure God all this vnto vs?

Then answere thē: because / that lyke as ye haue forsakē me / & serued straūge goddes in youre awne lande / euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge land. Preach this vnto the house of Jacob, and crie it out in Juda. and saye thus: Heare this (thou folish & vndiscrete people, * ye haue eyes / but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

* Esay. vi. b. & Joha. xi. b.

9 Feare ye not me / sayeth the Lorde? Are ye not ashamed, to loke me in ỳ face? which bynde the see with ỳ sande / so that it can not passe his boundes: For though it rage / yet can it do nothynge / and though the waues therof do swell / yet maye they not go ouer.

10 But this people hath a false and an obsti- F nate herte / they are departed & gone awaye fro me. They thincke not in their hartes: O let vs feare the Lorde oure God / that geueth vs rayne * early & late, when nede is: which kepeth euer styll the harueste for vs yearly.

* Of the early & later rayne loke in ỳ pistle of James. v. Chap. b

11 Neuertheles your myssededes haue turned these from you and youre synnes haue robbed you herof. For amonge my people are founde wicked persones / that prively laye snares & wayte for mē / to take thē & destroye thē. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes / so are their houses full of that whych they haue gottē with falshed and disceate. Herof com- G meth their greate substaunce and ryches / herof are they fat and welthy / and are runne awaye fro me with shamefull blasphemies. They mynistre not the lawe / they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause / they iudge not the poore accordynge to equite.

12 Shulde I not punish these thynges / sayeth ỳ Lorde? shulde I not be auenged of all soch people / as these be? Horrible and greuous thynges are done in the lande.

13 The Prophetes teach falsely / and the preastes folowe them / and my people hath pleasure therin. What will come therof at the last.

¶ The synnes for which Jerusalem is afflyct. Vncircūcysed eares. Couetousnes. Wilcreate. The Lord reiecteth the sacrifyces of the Jewes. The cōpynge of the Babylonians ouerthroweth agayne.

¶ The.vj. Chapter.

A GOme out of Jerusalem / ye stroge childzen of Ben Jamin: blowe vp the trompettes ye Tecuytes / sett vp a token vnto Bethcarem / for a plage and a great mysery peyeth out from the Nozth.

I wil lichen the daughter Syō to a fayze and tendze woman / and to her shall come the shepherders with their flockes. Their tentes shall they pitch rounde aboute her / and euery one shall fede* thē ꝑ are vnder his hād. Make batell agaynst her (shall they saye) B Aryse / lett vs go vp, while it is yet daye.

Alas / the daye goeth awaye / & the nyght shadowes fall downe: Arise, lett vs go vp by nyght / and destroye her stronge holdes / for thus hath the Lozde of hoostes commaūded.

Hew downe her trees / and lett vp bulwozkes agaynst Jerusalem. This is the cite that must be punished / for inherits all malyciousnes. Lyke as a condyte aboundeth in water / euen so this cytye aboundeth in wyckednes. Robbery and vnryghtuousnesse ys herde in her, sozow & woundes are euer the.e in my sight. Amende the (O Jerusalem) lest I withdrawe my herte from the / and make the desolate: & thy lande also, ꝑ no man dwell in it. For thus sayeth the Lozde of hooste.s:  The residue of Israel shalbe gathered, as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfoze turne thyne hande agayne in to the basket like ꝑ grapegatherer. Vnto whō shall I speake, whō shall I warne that he maye take hede? Their eares are so vncircuncysed that they maye not heare.

Beholde / they take the wozde of God but for a scozne / & haue no lust therto. And therfoze b* I am so full of thyne indygnacyō O Lozde) that I maye suffre no longer. Stryde out thy wzath vpon the chyldzen ꝑ are without, and vpon all ponge men. For the man must be taken prysoner wyth the wyfe / and the aged with the crepel. Their houses wyth their landes and wiues shall be turned vnto straungers / when I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitatours of this lande / saieth the Lozde. For from the leest vnto the most / they hange all vpon couetousnes: & from ꝑ prophet vnto the prest / they go all aboute with falsheed and lyes.

D And beside that / they heale the hurt of my people with swete wozdes / sayeng: peace peace / when there is no peace at all. Therfoze they must be ashamed / for they haue cōmitted abhominacyon. But how shulde they be ashamed / when they knowe nothing / neither of shame ner good nurtour? And therfoze they shall fall amōge the slayne / and in the houre when I shall vyset them, they shal be vzought downe / sayeth the Lozde.

Thus sayeth the Lozde: go in to the stretes / consydze & make inquysycyon for the olde waye: and yf it be the good and right waye / then go therym / that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye: we wil not walche therym / and I wyll sett watchmen ouer you / and therfoze take hede vnto E the voyce of the trompett. But they saye: we wyll not take hede. Heare therfoze ye Gentyles / and thou congregacyon shalt knowe / what I haue deuysed for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde / I wyll cause a plage come vpon this people / euē the frute of their awne ymagynacyons.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wozdes and to my lawe, but abhozred them. Wherfoze bringe ye me incense frō Saba / & swete smellyng Calamus frō farre countres? Youre burntofferynges displease me, and I reioyse not in youre sacrifyces. Esay 1.b. Esa. lxvi.a. & Jere. vj.c.

And therfoze thus sayeth the Lozde: beholde / I wyll make this people fall / & there shall fall from amōge them the father with the chyldzen / one neyghboure shall perysh with another.

F Moreouer thus sayeth ꝑ Lozde: Beholde / there shall come a people from the Nozth / & a greate people shall aryse from the endes of ꝑ earth / with bowes & with dartes shal they be weapened: It is a rough & fearce people / an vnmercyfull people: their voyce roareth lyke ꝑ see / they ryde vpō hozses well apoynted to the batell agaynst the / O daughter Sion. Then shall thys erye be herde: Oure armes are feble / heupnes & sozowe is come vpon vs / as vpon a woman trauelinge with chylde. No man go forth in to the feld / no mā come vpō the hye strete: for the swearde and feare of the enemye shalbe on euery syde.

Therfoze / gyrde a sack cloth aboute the G (O thou doughter of my people) syzynkle thy self in asshes mourne & wepe bytterly / as vpon thy only beloued sonne: for the destroyer shall sodenly fall vpon vs. The haue I set for a prouet of my hard people / to seke out and to trye their wayes. For they are all vnfaythfull and fallen awaye / they hange vpon fylthye lucre / they are cleane brasse & yron, for they hurte and destroye euerymans. The bellous are brēt in the fyre / the lead is consumed / the melter melteth in vayne / for the euell is not takē awaye from thē. Therfoze shall they be called naughty syluer / because the Lozde hath cast them out. * Amoz. viij.b

b* That is, I cannot but powre out the heuy sentence of thy wozde agaynst them.

Jeremye is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, whych trusteth in the outwarde seruyce of the temple, that healpeth nothynge. The euelles that shall happē to the Jewes for the despysing of their Prophetes. Scripture doth not the Lorde chefely requyre of the Jewes, but that they shuld obey his worde. Osee. 6.

¶ The.vij. Chapter.

THese are the wordes ꝑ God spake vnto Jeremy: Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house/ & crye out these wordes there/ w a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lord all ye of Juda/ that go in at thys doze/ to honoure the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell. Amende youre wayes and youre councels/ and I will lete you dwell in thys place. Trust not in false lyenge wordes/ sayenge: here is the temple of the Lorde/ here is the temple of the Lorde/ here is the temple of the Lorde.

B *For yf ye will amende youre wayes and councels, yf ye will iudge ryght betwyxte a man and hys neighboure: yf ye will not oppresse the straunger, the fatherles & the wyd dowe: yf ye will not shede innocēt bloude in this place: yf ye will not cleue to straunge goddes to youre awne destruccō: then wyl I let you dwell in this place, yee in ꝑ lande ꝑ I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede/ yee trust in councels/ ꝑ begyle you & do you no good. For whē ye haue so often murthured/ committed aduoutrie/ & periury: when ye haue offred vnto Baal/ followynge straunge & vnknowne goddes: thē come ye & stande before me in thys house/ (which hath my name geuen vnto it) & saye: Tush/ we are absolued quyte/ though we haue done all these abhominacyons.

C *Wha? thinke you thys house ꝑ beareth my name, ys a denne of theues? And these thyngs are not done priuely/ but before myne eyes sayeth the Lorde. Go to my place in *Silo / whereunto I gaue my name afore tyme, & loke wel what I dyd to ꝑ same place for the wyckednes of my people of Israell. And now though ye haue done all these dedes (sayeth the Lord) & I my self rose vp euer by tymes to warne you & to comen wyth you/ yet wolde ye not heare me: I called/ ye wolde not answere. And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Silo/ so will I do to this house/ ꝑ my name is geuē vnto (a that ye put youre trust in) ye vnto the place ꝑ I haue geuen to you and your fathers. And I shal thrust you out of my syght as I haue cast out all youre brethren the whole sede of *Ephraim.

D Therfore thou shalt not praye for thys people/ thou shalt neither geue thankes, nor byd praier for thē: thou shalt make no intercessiō to me for thē for in no wise wil I heare the. Seyst thou not what they do in ꝑ cytyes of Juda, & without Jerusalem? The chyldrē gather stickes the fathers kindle the fyre, & mothers kneade ꝑ dowghe/ to bake cakes for the quene of heauen.

They poure out drynkoffrynges vnto straūge goddes/ to prouoke me vnto wrath: Now be it they hurte not me (sayeth the Lord) but rather confounde / & shame them selues.

And therfore thus saieth ꝑ Lorde God: beholde/ my wrath and my indignacion shalbe poured out vpō this place, vpō men & catell vpon ꝑ trees in ꝑ felde & all frute of ꝑ lande/ & it shall burne so/ ꝑ no mā maye quench it.

E Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes/ the God of Israel: Yee heape by your burntoffringes with youre sacrifyces/ & eate the flesshe. But whē I brought youre fathers out of Egypt/ I spake no worde vnto thē of burntoffrynges & sacrifyces: but this I commaunded them/ sayinge: herken & obeye my voyce / & I shalbe youre God and ye shall be my people: so ꝑ ye walcke in all ꝑ wayes / which I haue cōmaunded you/ that ye maye prospere.

But they were not obediēt/ they inclyned not their eares there vnto / but went after their awne ymaginacyōs & after the mocions of their awne wicked herte/ & so turned them selues awaye/ & conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done/ frō the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypte/ vnto this daye.

F Neuertheles / I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the prophetes: I rose vp early & sent them warde/ yet wolde they not herken/ ner ofire me their eare/ but were obstynate & worse then their fathers. And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto thē but they shal not heare ꝑ: thou shalt crye vpō thē/ but they shal not answere ꝑ. Therfore shalt thou saye vnto thē: this is the people/ that nether heareth the voyce of the Lorde their God / ner receaueth his correccyon. Faythfulnes and treuth is cleane rooted out of their mouth.

G Wherfore cut of thyne heare/ & cast it awaye/ take vp a cōplaynte in the whole lāde for the Lorde shal cast awaye, & scatre ꝑ people/ ꝑ he is displeased withall. For the chyldren of Juda haue done euell in my syght / saieth the Lord. They haue set vp their abhominacions, in the house ꝑ hath my name / and haue defyled yt. They haue also buylded an aulter at *Topheth, which is in ꝑ valley of the childrē of Hennom: ꝑ they might burne their sonnes and daughters, which I neuer commaunded them / nether came it euer in my thought. And therfore beholde the dayes shall come (sayeth the Lorde) that it shall no more be called Topheth / or the valley of the chyldren of Hennom / but the valley of the slayne/ for in Topheth, they shall be buryed

¶ The destruccyon of the Jewes. The Lorde moueth the people to amendemēt/reckenyng vp their synnes. He reprehendeth the lying doctryne of the Prophetes & Priestes/and their couetousnes also.

¶ The.viij. Chapter.

AT the same tyme saieth the Lorde the bones of the kinges of Juda & bones of his princes/ & bones of & priestes and prophetes yee and the bones of the cytysens of Jerusalem/ shalbe brought out of their graues & layed agaynst the Sunne/the Moone and all the hooste of heauē: whom they loued/ whom they serued whom they ranne after / whom they sought & worshipped. They shal nether be gathered together nor buryed / but shall lye vpon the earth / to their shame and despisynge.

Luc.xxiij.e. And all they that remayne of thys wycked generacyon/ shal desyre rather to die thē to lyue: whereseuer they remayne/ & where as I scatre them/ saieth the Lorde of hoostes. This shalt thou saye vnto them also: Thus saieth the Lorde: Do men fall so / that they aryse not vp agayne? And turne they so farre awaye/ that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so farre backe / that they turne not agayne.

Jere.xx.c. They are euer the longer the more obstynate/ and will not be conuerted.

For I haue loked/ & considered: but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for hys synne/ that wyll so moch as saye: wherfore haue I done thys? But euery man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth ful/ like a wilde horse in a battayl. The Storke knoweth hys apoynted tyme/ the Turtledoue/ & Swalow & the Crane considre the tyme of their trauaile: but my people wil not knowe the tyme of the punyshment of the Lorde. How darre ye saye thē: we are wyse/ we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Beholde/ the dysceatfull pēne of the scrybes/ setteth forth lies: therfore shall the wise be confounded/ they shalbe afraied and taken: for lo/ they haue cast out the worde of the Lorde: what wysdome can then be amonge them? Wherfore/ I wyll geue their wyues vnto aleauntes / and their feldes to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folowe all fylthye lucre: and from the Prophet vnto the preest/ they deale all wyth lyes. Neuertheles/ they heale & hurte of my people with swete wordes, saying: peace, peace where there is no peace at all.

Eye for shame/ how abhominable thyng? do they? and yet they be not ashamed / yee they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacyon/ they shall fall amōge the deed bodyes, saieth the Lorde.

*Moreouer I will gather them in (sayeth the Lorde) so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vyne / nether one fygge vpon the fygge tre, and the leaues shalbe plucte of.

Then will I cause them to departe / and saye: why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs gather oure selues together & go in to & stronge cyte / there shall we be in rest: for the Lorde oure God hath put vs to sylence/ and *geue vs water myxte with gal to drincke: because we haue synned agaynst him.

We loked for peace / and we fare not the better/ we wayted for the tyme of health/ & lo / here is nothynge but trouble.

Then shal the noyse of his horses be heard from Dan, the whole lande shall be astayed at the neyenge of his stronge horses: for they shall go in / and deuoure the lande, with all that is in it: the cyties and those that dwell therin. Moreouer, *I wyll sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you (which wyll not be charmed) & they shall byte you, saieth the Lorde.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and heuynes vexeth my hert: for lo, the voyce of the crye of my people is herde from a farre countre: Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not the kyng in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye) with their ymages & foolysh straunge fashyons? The harueste is gone / the Sommer hath an ende and we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurte of my people: I am heuy and abashed for there is no more Triacle at Galaad / and there is no Physycyen / that can heale the hurte of my people.

a. Moreouer I wyll gather them. c. The meanynge is: I will gather the Jewes from all the partes of Jewry vnto Jerusalē. Where shall no fygge/ grape or other fruite remayne in the vyne.

b. Or I will geue them.

c. I will sende Cockatrices & serpentes. Here I will bring amonge you a maner of people which are vntame & cannot be charmed with enchauntynges of Cockatrices & serpentes.

¶ The complaynte & bewaylyng of the Prophete/ for the malice of & people & knowledge of God & the vncurable plage of the hert.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

WHo wyll geue my head water enough/ and a well of teares for myne eyes: & I maye wepe night and daye/ for the slaughter of my people? Wold God that I had a cotage somewhere farre frō folcke/ that I myght leaue my people/ & goo from them: for they be all aduoutrers and a shynckynge sorte. They bende their tunges lyke bowes/ to shute out lyes: Is for the trueth / they maye nothynge awaye with all in the worlde. For they go frō one wickednes to another / & holde nothynge of me sayeth the Lorde.

B Jerem. pū. b. Mich. vij. a. Yee one must kepe himselfe frō another / no man may safely trust hys awne brother: for one brother undermyneth another / & one neyghboure beggyleth another. Yee one dyssembleth with another / & they deale wyth no trueth. They haue practised their tunges to lye / & taken greate paynes to do mischefe. They haue set their stole in the middest of dissceate / and for very dyssemblynge falsehede they will not know me / sayeth the Lorde.

C Power. xviij. a. psal. xviij. a. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes: beholde / I will melte them / & trye them / for what shulde I eis do to my people? Their tunges are lyke sharpe arowes / to speake dyssceate. With their mouth they speake peaceably to their neighboure / but preuely they laye wayte for hym. Shulde I not punysh them for these thynges / sayeth the Lorde: Or shulde I not be auenged of any soche people as this? Upon the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentacion and sorowfull crye / and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wyldernes: Namely / how they are so brente vp / that no man goeth there any moore: Yee a man shall not heare one beast crye there.

D Hiere. xxvij. a Mich. iij. c. Bydes and catell are all gone frō thēce. I wyll make Jerusalem also an heape of stones / and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wyll make ꝑ cyties of Juda so waste / that no man shall dwell therin. What man is so wyse / as to vnderstande this? Or to whom hath the Lorde spokē by mouth / that he may shewe this / and saye: O thou lande / why perysshest thou so? Wherfore art thou so brent vp / & lyke a wyldernesse / that no man goeth thorow? Yee the Lorde hym selfe toloe the same vnto them / that forsoke hys lawe / and kepte not the thinge that he gaue thē in cōmaundement / neither lued therafter: but followed the wyckednes of their awne hertes / and serued straūge goddes / as their fathers taught them.

Osee. xiij. b. Deute. xxix. b. Josue. xxiij. c.

E Therfore / thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes / the God of Israel: Beholde / I wyll fede thys people with wormwod / and geue them gall to drincke. I wyll scatter thē also amōge the Heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers haue knowne: & I will sende a swearde amonge them / to persecute them / vntyll I bringe them to naught. Moreouer / thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes: loke that ye call for mournyng wyues / & sende for wyse women: that they come shortly / & singe a mournynge songe of you: that the teares may fall out of oure eyes / and that oure eye lydes maye gushe out of water.

Deute. xxviij. c. Jere. xxiij. c. For there is a lamentable noyse heard of Syon: O how are we so sore destroyed! O how are we so pyteously confounded! We must forsake oure awne naturall countre / & we are shot out of oure awne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women) and let youre eares regarde the wordes of hys mouth: & ye may lerne youre daughters to mourne / & that euery one may teach her neyghboureſſe / to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is clymmyng vp in at oure wyndowes he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the chylde before the doore / & the yonge man in the strete.

But tell thou plainely / thus sayeth the Lorde: The deed bodies of men shall lye vpō the grounde / as the donge vpon the felde / & as the heye after the mower / and ther shalbe no man to take them vp. Moreouer / thus sayeth the Lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in hys wysdome / nor the stronge man in hys strength / nether the rych man in hys ryches: But who so wyll reioyse / let him reioyse in this / ꝑ he vnderstandeth / & knoweth me: for I am ꝑ Lorde, which do mercy / equyte and ryghtuousnes vpon the earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in soch thynges, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde the tyme cōmeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyll vysyte * all thē, whose foreskynne is vncircumcysed. The Egyptyans / the Jewes / the Edomytes, the Ammonites / the Moabites / and the shauen Madianites, that dwell in the wildernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircūcysed in the flesh / but all the house of Israel are vncircumcysed in the herte.

* All that is / as well the Jewes as the Gentyles: for the one is as fre as the other. The Jewes are cleane as well as the heathē as touching the herte / although they be circumcysed as touchyng ꝑ flesh. Therfore are they here rechened amōge the vncircumcysed.

G The constellacyōs of the starres are not to be feared. Of the weakenes of Idoles / and of the power of God. Of euell curates.

Esay. xlvij. a. Learne not the maner of the Heathen / & be not afrayed for the tokens of heauen: for the Heathen are afrayed of soch: yee all ꝑ customes & lawes of the Gentyles are nothynge / but vanyte. They hewe downe a tree in the wod with the handes of the worcheman, and fasshyon it wt the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer / they fasten it with nayles and hāmers / ꝑ it moue not. It standeth as syke as ꝑ palme tree / it cā neither speake ner go, but must be borne. Be not ye afrayed of soch / for they cā do neither good ner euel. All their cōnynge is but vanyte: namely/ wod/ syluer/ which is brought out of Tharsis/ and beatē to plates: and golde from Ophir/ a worcke ꝑ is made with ꝑ hande of the craftesman & the caster/ clothed with yelow sylck & scarlet: euen so is the worcke of their wyse men altogether. But the Lorde is a true God/ a lyuynge God/ and an euerlastynge kyng. If he be wroth/ the earth shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indignacion.

* This verse is wrytten in Chalde to shewe by the Jewes to the Gētyles of Chalde their confusyon.

* As for their goddes/ it maye well be sayde of thē. they are goddes/ ꝑ made neither heauen ner earth: therfore shall they perysh frō the earth/ & frō all thynges vnder heauē But (as for oure God) he made the earth wt his power, and with his wysdome hath he fynished the whole cōpasse of the worlde/ with his discrecion hath he spred out the heauēs.

¶ At his voyce the waters gather together in the ayre/ he draweth vp the cloudes from the vttemost partes of ꝑ earth: he turneth lyghtenynge to rayne/ & bringeth forth ꝑ windes out of their treasures: His wysdome maketh all men fooles. Neuertheles/ Jacobs portion is not soch: but it is he/ that hath made all thynges/ & Israell is the rodd of his inheritaunce: The Lorde of hoostes is his name. Put awaye thyne vnclennesse out of ꝑ land, thou that art in the stronge cities. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde/ I wyll now thrust out the inhabitours of this land a greate waye of/ and trouble them of soch a fashion/ that they shal no more be founde.

Alas how am I hurte? Alas/ how paynefull are my scourges vnto me? For I conseyue this sorow by my self/ & I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed/ & all my coardes are broken. My childrē are gone fro me/ & can no where be foūde. Now haue I none to spreade out my tente/ or to sett vp my hangynges. For the herdmen haue done folishly/ that they haue not sought ꝑ Lord. Therfore haue they dealt vnwysely wyth their catell/ and all are scatred abrode. Beholde/ ꝑ noyse is harde at hande/ and greate sedicyon out of the north: to make the cyties of Juda a wyldernesse/ and a dwellinge place for Dragōs. Now I knowe (O Lorde) ꝑ it is not in mās power to ordre hys awne wayes/ or to rule hys awne steppes and goynges. Therfore chasten thou vs/ O Lorde, but with fauoure And not in thy wrath/ brynge vs not vtterly to naught. Poure out thyne indignacyō rather vpon the Gentiles, that knowe the not/ and vpon the people ꝑ call not on thy name: And that because they haue consumed/ deuoured and destroyed Jacob/ and haue roted out hys glory.

¶ A mysse of thē that obey not the worde of Godde ꝑ ymeate. The people of Juda folowynge the steppes of their fathers, worshyppeth straunge Goddes. The Lorde sayeth that he wyll not heare the Jewes/ & forbyddeth also Jeremy to praye for them.

¶ The xj. Chapter.

THis is another Sermon/ which ꝑ Lorde commaunded Jeremy for to preach, saying: Heare ꝑ wordes of the couenaunt/ and speake vnto all Juda and to all them that dwell at Jerusalē. And saye thou vnto thē: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: Cursed be euery one that is not obedyent vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: which I cōmaunded vnto youre fathers what tyme as I brought them out of Egypte, from the * yron fornace/ saying: Be obedyent vnto my voyce/ & do accordyng to all that I cōmaunde you: so shal ye be my people, and I wyll be youre God/ and wyll kepe my promyse that I haue sworne vnto youre fathers: Namely/ that I wolde geue them a lande wherin floweth with mylck and hony/ as ye se, it is come to passe vnto thys daye. Then answered I, and sayde. Amen. It is euen so Lorde/ as thou sayest it.

* Egypt was vnto them an yron fornace/ for the greate angwyshe, greefe/ sorowe/ and carefulnes of herte/ wherin they there suffred. iij. Esdr. iij. c

Then ꝑ Lorde sayde vnto me again: preache this in ꝑ cities of Juda & rounde about Jerusalem, & saye: Heare the wordes of this couenaūt, ꝑ ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exorted youre fathers/ euer sence the tyme ꝑ I brought them out of the Lande of Egipte/ vnto this daye. I gaue them warnynge by tymes/ sayenge: herken vnto my voyce: Neuertheles/ they wolde not obeye me, nor enclyne their eares vnto me/ but folowed the wycked ymagynacyons of their awne hertes. And therfore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe/ which they (not wyth vnderstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is fownde out, that whole Israell and all these citizens of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of their forefathers/ which had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lyke wyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes/ and worshypped them. The house of Israell and Juda haue broke̅ my couenaunt, which I made wyth their fathers.

¶ Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde/

I wyll sende a plage amonge you / whych ye shall not be able to escape: and though ye crye vnto me / I will not heare you. Then shall the townes of Juda and the cytezyns of Jerusalem go / and call vpon their goddes vnto whom they made their oblacions: but they are not able to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as many cyties as thou hast / O Juda / so many Goddes hast thou also: And loke how many stretes there be in the (O Jerusalem) so many shamefull aulters haue ye lett vp / to offre vpon them vnto Baal. But praye not thou for thys people / vyd nether prayse ner prayer for them / for though they crye vnto me in their trouble / yet will I not heare them.

b * He speaketh vnto the Jewes whiche in their sekenesse went to sup-plicate vnto false goddes / and therwith pheined God: And yet thought they to haue re-deemed their wyckednesse w the offrynges of their hallow kes & sacrifices which are here called holy flesh.

b * O thou beloued, why doest thou so shamefull greate blasphemyes in my house: euc as though that holy flesh myght absolue the specially when thou hast made thy boost of thy wyckednes. The Lorde called the a grene olyue tre a fayre one a frutefull one / a goodly one: but now that there is a cõtrary reporte of the ayrode he will burne the vp / and destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hoostes that planted the hath decyded a plage for ỹ (O thou house of Israel & Juda) for ỹ euell that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrath, in that ye dyd sacrifice vnto Baal.

c * Wodd vn-derstode, be-cause he pur-posed. Some ex-pounde yerby the wodd' of ỹ offices of affec-cions which wic-kes deuysed to worke the pro-phet in for his tellynge of the trueth.

This (O Lorde) haue I lerned of the / and vnderstãde it, for thou hast shewed me their ymaginacions. But I (as a mete lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowinge / ỹ they had deuised soch a counceil agaynst me sayenge: We will destroye hys wode with * wodd & fruite therof / and cut him out of the b * lande of ỹ lyuinge: that his name shal neuer be thought vpon. Therfore I wyll beseche the now O Lord of hoostes thou rightuous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: lett me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I cõmitted my cause. The Lorde therfore spake thus of ỹ cytezyns of Anathoth that sought to slaye me, sayenge: Preach not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde / or els thou shalt dye of oure handes. Thus I saye) spake the Lord of hoostes: Beholde I will visit you. Youre yonge men shall perysh wyth the swearde / your sonnes & your daughters shall vtterly dye of honger / so that none shall remayne. For vpõ ỹ cytezyns of Anathoth will I bring a plage / the yeare of their visitacion.

d * What the land of the ly-uing signifieth is shewed in Esay. 38.

¶ The Prophete marueleth greatly at the prosperite of the wycked / although he confesse God to be rightuous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh agaynst Curates and preachers that se-duce the people. The Lorde threateneth destruccyon vnto the nacyons that bordered vpon Jewry / whych troubled and vexed it.

¶ The .xij. Chapter.

Lorde thou art more righteous, I cuen that I shulde dyspute with ỹ: Neuertheles, let me talke wyth the in thynges resonable. * How happeneth it / that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous? and that it goeth so well vn them which with out eny shame) offende & lyue in wyckednesse? Thou plantest them / they take rote, they growe and bringe forth frute. They boost moch of the / yet doest thou not punish them. But thou Lorde / to whom I am well knowne, thou that hast sene / and proued my herte take them awaye / lyke as a flock is caryed to the slaughter house / and apointe them for the daye of slaughter.

* Job xxiij. Psalm. lxxiij.

How longe shall the lande mourne, and all the herbes of the felde perysh, for the wyckednes of them that dwell therin? The catell and the byrdes are gone yet saye they: tush / God wyll not destroye vs vtterly.

a * Seing thou art weery in running with ỹ fote men, how wilt thou then runne with horses? In a peaceable sure lãde thou mayest be safe but how wilt thou do in the furyous pryde of Jordane? For thy brethren and thy kynred haue all together despised the & cried out vpon the in thine absence. Beleue them not though they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne awne dwellyng place / & left myne heritage. My life also ỹ I loue so well haue I geuen into the handes of myne enemyes. Myne heritage is become vnto me / as a Lyon in the wod. It cried out vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me / as a speckled byrde a byrde of dyuerse colours is vpon it Gobence, and gather all ỹ beastes of the felde together, that they maye eate it vp.

a * This spake the wicked of the Prophete by the waye of rebuke. Al-though they had sayde by a parable. Wher thou wast but in a pleasaunt towne / thou couldest not beare the persecucyõ of thyne awne cytezyns and houshold folkes. How wylt thou then bea-re the prynces & chefe rulers of Juda / & the Lordes of Jerusalem? And after by perelous sure lãde is vnderstande

Dyuerse herdmen haue broke downe my vyneyarde and troden vpon my portiõ. Of my pleasaunt portiõ they haue made a wil-dernes & deserte. They haue layed it waste: and now that it is waste it sygheth vnto me. Yee the whole lande lyeth waste, and no mã regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heth euery waye, for the swearde of ỹ Lord shall consume from the one ende of ỹ lande to ỹ other and no flesh shal haue rest. They shall sowe wheate and reepe thornes. They shall take heritage in possession but it shall do them no good. And ye shalbe confounded of youre awne wynnynges / because of the greate wrath of the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euell neighbours / that laye hande on myne heritage / which I haue geuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wil pluck them (namely Israel) out of their lande / & put out ỹ house of Juda of Juda frō amonge thē. And when I haue rooted them out/ I wylbe at one wyth them agayne/and will haue mercy vpon them: & brynge thē agayne/ euery man to hys awne heritage/and in to hys land. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll lerne the wayes of them/to sweare by my name: The Lorde lyueth: lyke as they lerned my people to sweare by Baal) then shall they be tekened amonge my people. But yf they will not obeye/then wyll I rote out the same folke/ and destroye them/sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The destruccyon of the Jewes is prefygured/ and their sparplynge abrode. Why Israel was reiected to be the people of God/ & why they were forsaken.

¶ The .xiij. Chapter.

Jer.a. A prophecye done by an outwarde sygne/ as it is sayd in.xix.xxv.f

MOreouer/ thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: go thy waye/ & get the a lynen breche/ & gyrde it aboute thy loynes/ and let it not be wet. Then I got me a breche/ accordynge to the cōmaundement of the Lorde, & put it about my loynes. After this/ the Lorde spake vnto me agayne: Take the breche that thou hast prepared & put about the/ & gett the vp/ and go vnto Euphrates/ & hyde it in a hole of the rock. So went I/ and hyde it/ as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lord spake vnto me: Vp/ & get the to Euphrates/ & fet the breche from thēce/ which I cōmaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates/ & dygged vp/ & toke the breche from the place where I had hyd it: & beholde/ the breche was corrupt/ so that it was profytable for nothynge.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thus
B sayeth the Lorde: Euen so wyll I corrupte ꝑ pryde of Juda/ & the hye mynde of Jerusalē. This people is a wycked people/ they wyll not heare my worde/ they folowe the wicked Jere.viij.c. xi. Deut.xxix.c. ymaggynacyōs of their awne herte/ & hange vpon straunge Goddes them haue they serued & worshypped: & therfore they shalbe as this breche/ that serueth for nothynge. For as straytely as a breche lyeth vpon a mans loynes/ so strately dyd I bynde ꝑ whole house of Israel. & the whole house of Juda vnto me sayeth the Lorde: that they myght be my people: that they myght haue a glorious name: ꝑ they myght be in honoure: but they wolde not obeye me. Therfore saye thys ryddle before them/ & saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: Euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne. And they shall saye: thinckest thou we knowe not/ that euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne? Then shalt thou saye vnto thē: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde/ I shall fyll all ꝑ inhabytours of this lande with dronckēnes/ the Kynges that syt vpon Dauids stole/ the Prestes and Prophetes/ with all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I wyll shute them one agaynst another/ yee the fathers against the sonnes/ sayeth the Lorde.

I wyll not pardon thē/ I wyll not spare
C them/ ner haue pytye vpō them: but destroye thē. Be obedyēt, geue eare/ take no dysdayne at it/ for it is the Lorde hym selfe that speaketh. Honoure the Lorde youre God herein/ or he take hys lyght from you/ and or euer youre fete stomble in darckenesse at the hyll: lest when ye loke for the lyght/ he turne it in to the shadowe & darckenesse of death. But yf ye wyll not heare me/ that geue you secrete warnyng/ I will mourne for my whole hert for youre stubburnesse. Pyteously wyll I Jerem. xxxix Thren.i.a. wepe, & the teares shall gusshe out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shall be caryed awaye captyue. Tell the kynge and the rulers: Humble youre selues/ sett you downe lowe/ for the crowne of youre glory shal fall from your head. The cities towarde ꝑ south shalbe shut vp/ and no man shall open them. All Juda shall be caried awaye captyue/ so that none shall remayne.

Lyft vp youre eyes/ & beholde them/ that
D come from the North: Lyke a fat flocke shal they fall vpon the. To whō wylt thou make thy mone when they come vpō the? for thou Jeremy. xxx.d & xlix.b. & Esai.xxi.a. hast taught them thy selfe/ and made them maysters ouer ꝑ. Shal not sorowe come vpō the/ as on a woman trauayling with childe? And yf thou wolde saye thē in thyne herte: Wherfore come these thinges vpō me? Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemyes/ shall thy hynder partes and thy fete be discouered. For lyke as the man of Inde maye chaunge hys skynne/ & the cat of the mountayne her spottes: so maye ye that be exercysed in euel/ do good. Therfore will I scatre you/ lyke as the stobble ꝑ is taken awaye with the south wynde. This shal be youre porcyon/ and the porcyon of your measure/ wher with ye shal be rewarded of me/ sayeth the Lorde: because ye haue forgotten me, and put youre trust in disceatfull thinges. Therfore shall I turne Osee.ij.b. thy clothes ouer thy head/ and discouer thy thyghes/ ꝑ thy preuities maye be sene/ thy aduoutry/ thy deedly malice. thy beastlinesse and thy shamefull whordome. For vpon the feldes and hylles I haue sene thy abhominacions. Wo be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wilt thou euer be clensed emy more?

¶ Of the derth that shulde come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people askyng mercy of the Lorde. The vnfaythfull people are not hearde. Of prayer/ fastinges of false prophetes that seduce the people.

¶ The .xiiij. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde shewed vn- I to Jeremy concernynge the derth of the fruites. Juda shall mourne/ mē shal not go moch more thorow his gates: the lande shal be nomore had in reputacion/ & crie of Jerusalem shal breake out. The lordes shall sende their seruauntes to fetch water/ & when they come to the welles, they shall fynde no water, but shal carye their vessels home emptye . They shall be ashamed and confounded/ & shall couer their heades. For the grounde shalbe dried vp / because there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also shalbe ashamed/ & shal couer their heades . The hynde shall forsake the yōge fawne/ & he bringeth forth in the felde because there shalbe no grasse . The wylde Asses shal stande in the Mosse/ and drawe in their wynde lyke the Dragons / their eyes shall fayle for want of grasse.

B Doutles oure awne wickednesse re warde vs: But Lorde do thou accordinge to thy name/ though oure transgressyons and synnes be many . For thou art the comforte & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. * Why wilt thou be as a straunger in the Lande/ and as one that goeth ouer the felde / & commeth in only to remayne for a night? Why wilt thou make thy self a cowarde and as it were a gyaunte that yet maye not helpe?  For thou art ours (O Lorde, and we beare thy name/ therfore forsake vs not.

* Why wilt thou be as a straunger. &c. As who saye. Thou beyng vnkt thy self vnto vs as a straunger, & as a wayfaring man: for thou lettest not by vs/ nether dysplayest thy strengthes to helpe vs.

 Some rede/ but thou, O Lorde, art in the myddest of vs: & thy name is called vpon of vs.

Then spake the Lorde/ concernynge this people that haue pleasure to go so nymbly vnto their fete/ and leaue not of / and therfore displease the Lorde: in so moch / that he wyll now bringe agayne to remēbraunce al their myssededes/ and punysh all their synnes. Yee euen thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalt not praye to do this people good . For though they fast / I wyll not heare their praiers. And though they offre burnt offrings & sacrifices/ yet wyll not I accepte thē . For I will destroye them with ye swearde/ honger and pestilence. Then answerde I: O Lorde God/ the prophetes saye vnto them: Tush/ ye shal se no swearde/ and no honger shal come vpon you/ but the Lord shall geue you continuall rest in this place.

C And the Lorde sayde vnto me: The prophetes preachyes vnto them in my name. I haue not spoken wyth them / nether gaue I them eny charge/ nether dyd I sende thē: yet they preach vnto you false visiōs/ charmynge vanite/ & disceatfulnesse of their awne hert. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde: As for those prophetes that preach in my name (whom I neuertheles haue not sent) and that saye: Tush! there shall nether batel ner honger be in this lande: wyth swearde and with hōger shall those prophetes perysh/ and the people to whom they haue preached shalbe cast out of Jerusalem/ dye of honger/ and be slayne wyth the swearde (and there shalbe no man to burye them) both they and their wyues/ their sonnes and their daughters. For thus wyll I poure their wyckednes vpon them. D This shalt thou saye also vnto them: Myne eyes shall wepe without ceasynge daye and nyght. For my people shalbe destroyed wyth great harme / and shall perysh wyth a great plage. For yf I go in to the felde/ lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men: & if I come in to the cytye/ lo, they be all famesshed of honger.

Yee their prophetes also and prestes shal be led in to an vnknowne lande.

Hast thou then vtterly forsaken Juda? (sayde I) Dost thou so abhorre Syon? Or hast thou so plaged vs/ that we can be healed nomore? We loked for peace / and there commeth no good: for the tyme of health / & lo, here is nothynge but trouble. We knowlege (O Lorde) all oure mysdedes / and the synnes of oure fathers / that we haue offended the . Be not displeased/ O Lorde) for thy names sake / forgett not thy louynge kyndnes: Remembre the trone of thyne honoure/ breake not the coueuaunt/ that thou hast made wyth vs. Are there eny amonge the goddes of the Gentiles/ that sende rayne or geue the showers of heauen? Dost not thou it O Lorde oure God / in whom we trust? Yee Lorde, thou dost all these thinges.

¶ The Lorde wyl not heare Moses or Aaron/ if they praye for the people/ but wyl wrappe them in many mysteryes. The cause of soche greate mysteryes.

¶ The xv. Chapter.

THen spake the Lorde vnto me / I and sayde: Though Moses & Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to thys people. Dryue them awaye / that they maye go out of my syght. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shall we go? Then tell them: The Lorde geueth you thys answere: Some vnto death/ some to the swearde / some to honger / some into captyuyte. For I wyl bryng foure plages vpon them sayeth ye Lord. The swearde shall strangle them / the dogges shall deuoure them / the foules of the ayre/ and beastes of the earth shall eate them vp / and destroye them. I wyll scatter them aboute also in all kyngdomes & landes to be plaged/ because of Manasseh the sonne of Hezekiah kynge of Juda, for the thinges that he dyd in Jerusalem.

Jeremy. xv. & xvi. & Ezech. xiv.

B Who shall then haue pyte vpon the / O Jerusalem? Who shall be sorye for the? Or who shal make intercessiō/ to optayne peace for the? seyng thou goest fro me/ and turnest backwarde / sayeth the Lorde? Therfore I will stretch out myne hād agaynst the/ to destroye the/ & I wyll not be intreated. I wyll scatre the abrode wyth ye fanne in euery syde of the of the lande: I wyll waste my people and destroye them / for they haue had no lust to turne from their awne wayes. I wyll make their wyddowes mo in nōbre / then ꝑ sandes of the see. Upon the mothers of their chyldren / I shall bringe a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodenly and vnawarres, shal I sende a feare vpon their cyties. She ꝑ hath borne vij. chyldren / shall haue none / her herte shal be full of sorowe.

The Sunne shall sayle her in the cleare daye / when she shalbe cōfounded and sayne for very heuynesse. As for those ꝑ remayne / I wyll delyuer them vnto the swearde of their enemyes / sayth the Lorde. O mother / alas that euer thou dydest beare me, an enemye and hated of the whole lande: Though I neuer lente ner receaued vpon vsury / yet all men speake euell vpon me. And the Lord answered me: Lede not I ꝑ then vnto good? Come not I to the / whē thou art in trouble: & helpe the / when thyne enemye oppresseth the? Doth one yron hurte another / or one metall that commeth from the North / another? As for youre ryches & treasure / I wyll geue them out in to a praye / not for eny money / but because of all your synne / ꝑ ye haue done in all youre coastes. And I will bringe you with youre enemyes in to a lande / that ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kyndled in my indignacyon / shall burne you vp.

O Lorde (sayde I then) thou knowest all thinges, therfore remembre me / & vyset me / delyuer me fro my persecuters: receaue not my cause in thy longe wrath / yet thou knowest, ꝑ for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When I had found thy wordes / I ate them vp gredely: they haue made my herte ioyfull & glad for I call vpon thy name / O Lorde God of Hostes. I dwell not amōge the scorners, neither is my delyte therin: but I dwell only in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast fylled me with bytternes. Shall my heuynes endure for euer? Are my plages then so greate that they maye neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a water / that failleth / and can not continue? Upon these wordes / thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: If thou wylt turne agayne / I shall set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wylt take out the thynge that is precious from ꝑ vile / thou shalt be euen as myne awne mouth. They shall conuerte vnto the, but turne not thou vnto thē: & so shall I make the a stōge wall of stele agaynst this people. They shal fyght agaynst the / but they shall not preuayle. For I my selfe will be wt the / to helpe the, and delyuer the sayeth the Lorde. And I wyll rydd the out of the handes of the wycked / and delyuer the out of the hande of tirauntes.

¶ The prophecyeth the mysterye of the Jewes. Sheweth that the worshyppinge of Idoles / the contempt of Gods lawe / is the cause of their mysery. Prophecyeth the captiuyte of Babylon / & their delyuerance frō thence agayne. The callyng of ꝑ Gentiles.

Moreouer / thus sayde the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt take ꝑ no wyfe, I ner beget chyldren in thys place. For of the chyldren that are borne in this place / of their mothers ꝑ haue borne them / and of their fathers that haue begottē them in thys lande / thus sayeth the Lorde: They shal dye an horrible deeth, no mā shal mourne for them ner burye them / but they shall lye as donge vpō the earth. They shall perish thorow the swearde and honger / and their bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the earth. Agayne / thus sayeth the Lorde: Go not vnto thē / that come together for to mourne and wepe: for I haue takē my peace frō this people (sayeth the Lorde) yee my fauoure & my mercy. And in this lande shall they dye / olde and yonge / & shall not be buryed: no man shall bewepe them / no man shall clyppe or shaue him self for them. B

There shal not one vyset another / to mourne with thē for their deed / or to cōforte thē. One shall not offre another the cuppe of cōsolacyon, to forget their heuynes for father & mother. Thou shalt not go in to their feast house / to syt downe / moch lesse to eate or drincke with thē. For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: * Beholde I shal take awaye out of this place, the voyce of myrth and gladnesse the voyce of the bryde grome and of the bryde: yee ꝑ that in youre dayes that ye maye se it.

* The minister of the prophetes comfyseth & vttereth to condemne / & after to relate & comfort the faythfull no Jeremy doth here in this chapter / and as it vseth the whole scripture throwe.

Now when thou shewest frys people all these wordes and they saye vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lorde deuysed all thys greate plage for vs? Or what is ꝑ offence & synne / that we haue done agaynst the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them this answere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me (sayeth ꝑ Lorde) & haue cleued vnto straūge goddes / whom they haue honoured & worshypped: but me haue they forsaken / & haue not kepte my lawe. And ye wt youre shamefull blasphemyes / haue exceaded the wyckednes of youre fathers. For euery one of you foloweth the frowarde & euell ymagynacion of his awne herte, and is not obedīēt vnto me.

Therfore wyll I cast you oute of thys land in to a lande that ye and youre fathers know not: and there shall ye serue straunge goddes daye and nyght / where wyll I shewe you no fauoure. Behold therfore (sayeth the Lorde)

Lorde) the dayes are come / that it shall no more be layed: The Lorde lyueth / whych brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: but / it shal be sayde / the Lord lyueth, that brought the chyldren of Israell from the North / and from all landes where I had scatred them. For I wyl bringe them agayne in to the lande / that I gaue vnto their fathers.

D b Vp these sticke ye vnderstande the host of the Lorde which ledde the Iewes. & sygnifyeth awaye their rulers. At foure sondryed nyghtes were foure of their kynges taken iustly euery tyme some of the chefe of the people with all. But at the last in the tyme of Sedechias was all the rest of the people hunted out of those cruell hunters the Chaldees. in. Reg. xxv. a. b Reade the note in the. xxv. chap folowynge at the letter. c.

Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) I will sende out many * fyshers to take them, & after ye will I sende out many hunters to hunte the out from all mountaynes and hylles & out of ye caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face / neither can their wycked dedes be kepte close out of my syghte. But first wyll I sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blasphemies and synnes / wherwyth they haue defyled my lande: Namely, with their stinckyng Idols and abhominacions wherwith they haue fylled myne heritage. O Lorde / my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto ye from the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verely our fathers haue cleued vnto lyes their Idols are but vayne & vnprofitable. How can a man make vnto his goddes, which are not able to be goddes. And therfore I wyll once teach them (sayeth the Lorde / I wyll shewe them my hande & my power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

¶ The frowardnesse of the Iewes. Cursed be those that put their confydence in man / & those blessed that trust to God. The synnes here is wycked. God is the searcher of the hert. The spryng waters are forsake. The obseruynge of the Sabboth is commaunded.

¶ The. xvii. Chapter.

IOure synne (O ye of the tribe of Iuda) is writte in the table of your hertes, & grauē vpon the coges of your aulters wt a penne of yron & with an adamāt clawe: that your chyldrē also maye thinke vpon your aulters / wodes thicke trees hie hylles, mountaynes & feldes. Wherfore, I wyll make all your substaunce & treasure be spoyled for the greate synne that ye haue done vpō your hie places thorow out all the coostes of your lande. Ye shall be cast out also from the heritage, that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the heuy bondage of your enemyes in a lād that ye knowe not. For ye haue myngled fyre to my indignacyon, whych shall burne euermore. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in man, & * that taketh flesh for his arme: & be whose herte departeth from the Lorde. He shall be lyke the heeth / that groweth in ye wildernes. As for the good thinge that is for to come he shall not se it. but dwell in a drye place of the wylderness, in a salt & vnoccupied lande. * O blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lorde / and whose hope is the Lorde hym selfe. * For he shalbe as a tre / that is planted by the water syde: which spreadeth out ye rote vnto moystnesse / whom the heate can not harme, when it commeth / but his leaues are grene. And though there growe but lytle frute because of drouth / yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth frute. Amonge all thynges lyuing / mā hath the most disceatfull and vnsercheable herte.

Who shall then knowe it? Euen I the Lorde search out the grounde of the herte / & trye the reynes / and rewarde euery man accordinge to hys wayes / and accordynge to the frute of his councels.

The dysceatfull maketh a nest / but bringeth forth no yonge. He commeth by ryches / but not ryghtuously. In ye middest of his life must he leaue them behinde him / and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose trone is most glorious / excellent and of most antyquite / whych dwellest in the place of oure holy rest: Thou art the comforte of Israell. All they that forsake the / shalbe confounded: all they that departe from the / shalbe wrytten in earth / for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very condyte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me / O Lord, and I shall be whole: saue thou me / and I shalbe saued / for thou art my prayse. Behold, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lorde? Lett it come. Whereas I neuertheles lefynge the flock in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence. For I neuer desyred eny mās deeth / ¶ this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not now terrible vnto me, O Lorde / for thou art he in whom I hope / when I am in pareil. Let my persecuters be cōfounded, but not me: let them be afrayed / and not me. Thou shalt bringe vpō them the tyme of their plage / and shalt destroye them right sore.

Agayne / thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder the gate / where thorow the people and the kynges of Iuda go out and in / yee vnder all the gates of Ierusalem / and saye vnto them: Heare ye worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda / and all thou people of Iuda / and all ye cytesyns of Ierusalem / that go thorow thys gate: Thus the Lorde commaundeth: Take hede for youre lyues / ye ye carye no burthē vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorow the gates of Ierusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of youre houses in the Sabboth. b * Ye shall do no labour therin / but halowe the Sabboth, as I cōmaunded youre fathers.

¶ God sheweth by the exemple of a potter, that it is in his power to destroye the despysers of his worde, & to helpe the agayne when they amend. The conspiracie of the Jewes agaynst Jeremy. His prayer agaynst his aduersaryes.

THis is another communication, that God had vnto Jeremy, saying: Aryse, and go downe in to the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Now when I came to the Potters house, I founde him makynge his worcke vpon a wheele. The vessell that the Potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes: So he beganne a new, & made another vessell accordynge to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel sayeth the Lorde? Beholde ye house of Israell: ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the Potters hande.

When I take in hande to roote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye eny people or kingdome: yf that people (agaynst whom I haue thus deuysed) conuerte from their wickednes: Immediatly, I repēte of the plage that I deuysed to bringe vpon thē. Agayne when I take in hande, to buylde or to plāte a people or a kyngdome: yf the same people do euell before me, and heare not my voyce: Immediatly, I repēte of the good, that I deuyse to do for them.

Speake now therfore vnto whole Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuysynge a plage for you, and am takynge a thynge in hande agaynst you.

Therfore let euery man turne from his euell waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good and do ryght. But they saye: Non ore of this, we wyll folowe oure awne ymaginacyons, and do euery man accordynge to the wylfulnesse of his awne mynde.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Ask amōge the Heathen yf eny mā hath herde soch horryble thynges, as the daughter of Syon hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpō the stony rockes of Libanus) moysten the feldes? Or maye the sprynges of waters be so grauen awaye, that they runne no more, geue moysture, nor make frutefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifyce vnto vayne Goddes. And whyle they folowed their awne wayes they are come out of the hye strete, and gone in to a sote waye not vsed to betrodē. Where thorow they haue brought their lande in to an euerlastyng wyldernesse and scorne: So that whosoeuer trauayleth therby, shalbe abashed, and wagge their heades. With an East wynde will I scatter them before their enemyes. And whē their destruccō cōmeth, I wyll turne my backe vpō thē, but not my face. Then sayde they: come, let vs ymagyn somethynge agaynst this Jeremy. Do they not recompence euell for good, when they dygg a pyt for my soule? Remembre how I stode before the, to speake for them, and to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

Therfore let their chyldrē dye of hunger, and lett them be oppressed with the swearde. Let their wyues be robbed of their children, and become widdowes: lett their husbandes be slayne,

WHen* Phashur ỹ preast / ỹ sonne of Emer / chefe in the house of the Lorde / herde Jeremy preach so stedfastly: he smote Jeremy, & put him in the stockes / that are by the hye gate of Ben Jamin / in ỹ house of the Lorde. The nexte daye folowyng Phashur brought Jeremy out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremy vnto hym: The Lorde shall call the nomore Phashur, that is excellent & increasynge) but Magor (ỹ is fearfull & afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde. behold, I wyll make the afrayed the thy selfe, and all that fauoure the: which shall perysh with the swearde of their enemyes, euen before thy face.

*Phashur was the hye bysshop of the temple, the ryngleader of false Prophetes / the chefe heretike taker / ỹ is the ouerthrower of true godlynesse. The dygnite of preasthoode geue vnto him he abused. And I wyll geue whole Juda vnder the power of the kyng of Babylon, which shall carie some vnto Babylon prisoners, & slaye some with the swearde. Moreouer, all the substaunce of this lande / all their precyous and gorgeous worckes all costlynesse, & all the treasure of the Kynges of Juda: wyll I geue in to ỹ handes of their enemyes, which shall spoyle them / and carie them vnto Babilon But as for ỹ (O Phashur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babilon with all thine houshold / & to Babilon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye and be buryed: thou & all thy fauourers to whom thou hast preached lyes O Lorde thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, & makest me stronge agayne. All the daye longe am I despysed, & laughed to scorne of euery man: because I haue now preached preached lõge agaynst malicious tyrãny/ & shewed them of destruccion. For the which cause they cast the worde of the Lorde in my teeth/and take me euer to the worst.

Wherfore/I thought from hence forth/ not to speake of him/nor to preach eny more in hys name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my hert and in my bones/which whē I wolde haue stopped/ I might not. For why/I herde so many derisyons and blasphemies/ yee euen of myne awne companions/and of soch as were conuersaunte with me: which wente aboute/to make me afrayed/sayinge: vpon him/let vs go vpon him/ to feare hym/ and make hym holde his tonge: & we maye ouercome him/ and be auenged of him.

But the Lorde stode by me/lyke a myghtie giaunte: therfore my persecuters fell/ & couilde do nothing. They shall be sore cõfoũded/for they haue done vnwysely/ they shall haue an euerlastynge shame. And now/ O Lorde of Hostes/ thou ryghtuous sercher (which knowest reynes & the very hertes:) let me se them punished/for vnto the I commytte my cause.

Synge vnto the Lorde, and prayse hym/ for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed/from the hande of the violente. *Cursed be the daye, wherin I was borne: vnhappye be the daye/wherin my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man/ that brought my father tydinges, to make him glad saying: thou hast gotten a sonne. Lett it happen vnto that man/as to the cyties which the Lorde turned vpsyde downe (wtout he had herde lõg the wicked rumoure of thē) because he slewe me not, as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe, & because my mother was not my graue her selfe, that hyr wight might not haue come out, but remayned styll in her. The prophecyeth that Zedechiah shall be taken/ and the cytye burned.

The.xxi. Chapter.

Here are the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy what time as kynge Zedechiah sent vnto hym Pashur the sonne of Melchiah/& Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah preaste/ saying: Aske counceil at the Lorde (we prayethe) of oure behalfe/for Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon besegeth vs/ yf the Lorde (peraduenture) will deale wyth vs/ accordynge to his maruelous power/ & take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremy. Geue Zedekiah this answere. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: beholde/ I will turne backe the weapens, that ye haue in youre handes/ wherwith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babylon & the Caldees/ which besege you rounde aboute & walles, & I will bringe thē together in to the myddest of this cytie, and I my selfe will fight agaynst you/ wt an outstretched hande/ & with a mightie arme/ in greate displeasure and terrible wrath: & wyll smyte them that dwell in this citie: yee both man & catell shall dye of the pestilence.

And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shall delyuer Zedekiah the kynge of Juda/ & hys seruaũtes, his people (& soch as are escaped in the cytie/from the pestilence/ swearde/ & honger) in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon: yee in to the handes of their enemyes, in to the hãdes of those that folowe vpon their lyues, which shall smyte thē with ẏ swearde: they shall not pytie thē/ they shall not spare them/ they shall haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde/ I laye before you the waye of lyfe and deeth. Who so abydeth in this cytie, shall perish: either wt ẏ swearde/ with honger/or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte/ & besege it he shall saue his lyfe, and a shall wynne his soule for a pray. For I haue sett my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth ẏ Lorde) to plage it and to do it no good. It must be geuen in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon and be brent with fyre.

His soule/ that is/ hys lyfe/ shall be vnto him as a prye: because he should vtterly haue lost it/ yf he had bidde in Jerusalem: & by flyinge vnto the Chaldees he should wynne it/ as a man winneth a pray in battell.

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda/ saye thus: Heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus saieth ẏ Lorde: Ministre ryghtuousnes, and that soone, deliuer the oppressed from vyolent power: or elles my terrible wrath breake out lyke a fyre and burne so, that no man maye quẽch it, because of the wyckednes of youre ymaginacions. Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) I will come vpõ you ẏ dwell in the valleys/ rockes & felde, & saye: Tush: who will make vs afrayed? or who will come into oure houses? For I will vyset you (sayeth the Lorde) because of the wickednes of your inuencions/ and will kyndle soch a fyre in youre wod/ as shall consume all/ that is aboute you.

The exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghtuousnes. Why Jerusalem is brought into captyuyte. The death of Sellum the sonne of Josua is prophecyed.

The.xxij. Chapter.

Thus sayde the Lorde also: Goo I downe in to the house of the kyng of Juda/ and speake there these wordes/ and saye: Heare ẏ worde of the Lorde, thou kyng of Juda that sytteste in the

in the kyngly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people/that go in & out at this gate. Thus the Lord commaundeth: kepe equyte and ryghtuousnesse / delyuer the oppressed from the power of the violent: do not greue ner oppresse the straunger/ the fatherlesse ner the wydow/ and shede no innocent bloude in this place.

And yf ye kepe these thinges faythfully/ then shall there come in at the doore of thys house kynges/to syt vpō Dauids seate: they shall be carped in Charettes and ryde vpon horses/both they & their seruauntes/& their people. But yf ye wyll not be obedient vnto these commaundemētes/ I sweare by myne awne selfe (sayeth the Lord) this house shall be waste. For thus hath the Lord spokē vpō the kynges house of Juda: Thou art ꝑ head/ as Galaad is in Libanus: What wylt thou laye of it/yf I make the not so waste (& thy cyties also) that no man shall dwell therin? I wyll prepare a destroyer with his weapēs for the / to hew downe thy specyall Cedre trees/and to cast them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cytie/ shall speake one to another: Wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto thys noble cytye? Then shall it be answered: * because they haue brokē the couenaunt of the Lord their God/ & haue worshipped & serued straunge goddes. Mourne not ouer the deed & be not wo for them/but be sory for him that departeth awaye. for he commeth not agayne and seeth his natyue countre no more. For thus sayeth the Lorde/ as touchynge  Selum the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda / whych raygned after his father and is carped oute of this place: He shall neuer come hyther agayne for he shall dye in the place / whyther vnto he is led captiue, and shall se this lande no more. Wo worth him / that buyldeth hys house with vnrighteousnes and his parlers with the good ꝑ he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours labour/ner payeth him his hyre. He thynketh in him selfe: I wyll buylde me a wyde house, & gorgeous parlers: he causeth windowes to be hewen therin and the syelynges and geastes maketh he of Cedre / and paynteth them with Zenober. Thinckest thou to raigne / now ꝑ thou prouokest me to wrath with the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drynke/and prosper well as longe as he dealt vp equite and ryghtuousnesse? Yee when he helped the oppressed and poore to their ryght then prospered he well.

Frō whence came this / but only because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lorde. And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde against Joachim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda: They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to do, alas brother/alas syster: Neither shall they syye vnto hym: Alas syr, alas for that noble prynce. But as an Asse shall he be buried corrupte and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clymme vp the hyll of Libanus, O thou daughter Sion, lyft vp thy voyce vpon Basan crye from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou sayedest: I wyll not heare. And thys maner hast thou vsed from thy youth / that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmē shalbe dryuen wyth the wynde / and thy derlynges shalbe caryed awaye in to captyuite: Then shalt thou be brought to shame & cōfusyon, because of all thy wickednes: thou ꝑ dwellest vpon Libanus, & makest thy nest in the Cedre trees. O how greate shall thy mourning be when thy sorowes come vpon the / as a woman trauelynge with chylde.

Moreouer / I wyll sende the / and thy mother that bare the / in to a straunge lād, where ye were not borne/ and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye will desyre to returne vnto / ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This man Conaniah shall be lyke an ymage robbed & torne in peces, which pleaseth no man/ for all hys apparell. Wherfore both he & hys sede shalbe sent awaye, and cast out in to a lāde/ that they knowe not.

B holde, the tyme cōmeth/ sayeth the Lorde. that I will rayse vp the ryghtuous braunche of Dauid/ which shall beare rule/ and discusse matters wt wysdome/& shall sett vp equyte & righteousnes agayne in the earth.

In his tyme shall Juda be saued and Israell shall dwell without feare. And thys is the name that they shall call hym: euen the Lorde oure ryghtuous maker. And therfore beholde/ the tyme cōmeth/ sayeth the Lorde/ that it shall no more be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lord lyueth/ which brought forth/ and led the sede of the house of Israell/ out of the North lande/ and from all countrees where I had scatred them/& they shall dwell in their awne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes/ all my bones shake: I am become lyke a droncken man (that by reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the Lorde/ and of hys holy wordes: Because the lād is full of aduouterers/ where thorow it is destroyed and mourneth/ & the pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Yee the waye that men take/ is wycked/ & their gouernaunce is nothing lyke the holy C worde of the Lorde. For the prophetes & the prestes them selues are polluted ypocrytes/ and their wyckednes haue I founde in my house/ sayeth the Lorde. Wherfore/ their waye shall be slyppery in the darcknesse/ where in they maye stacker and fall. For I will bring a plage vpon them/ euen the yeare of their visytacyon, sayeth the Lord. I haue sene foly amonge the Prophetes of Samaria/ that they preached for Baal/& disceaued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduoutery/ & presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hande/ flattrynge them/ so that they can not returne from their wickednes. All these wyth their cytesyns are vnto me/ as Sodom/& as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes concernynge the prophetes: Beholde, I will fede them with wormwod/ and make them dryncke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Jerusalem is the sycknes of ypocrisye come in to all the lande.

And therfore the Lorde of Hostes geueth you this warnyng: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes/ that preach vnto you/ & disceaue you: for they speake the meanynge of their awne herte and not oute of the mouth of the Lorde. They saye vnto them that dyspyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tush/ ye shall prospere ryght well. And vnto all thē/ that walcke after the lust of their awne herte/ they saye: Tush/ there shall no mysfortune happen you. For who hath syttē in the counsell of the Lorde/ that he hath herde and vnderstande/ what he is aboute to do? who hath marcked his dewyce/ and herde it? Beholde/ the stormy wether of the Lorde (that is/ his indignacion) shall go forth/ and shall fall downe vpō the head of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lord shall not turne agayne/ vntyll he perfourme and fulfill the thoughte of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

I haue not sent these Prophetes (sayeth C the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them and yet they preached. But yf they had contynued in my counsell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from their euell wayes and wycked ymaggynacyons. Am I then God that seyth but the thynge/ which is nye at hande/ and not that is farre of? sayeth the Lorde. Maye eny man hyde hym self so/ that I shall not se hym? sayeth the Lorde. Do not I fullfyll heauen and earth? sayeth the Lorde. I haue herde well ynough/ what the prophetes saye/ that preach lyes in my name/ sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyll this continue in the prophetes hertes/ to tell lyes/ and to preach the craftye sotylte of their awne herte? Whose purpose is (wyth the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name/ as their fore fathers dyd/ when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame/ let him tell it: and he that vnderstandeth my worde/ lett hym shewe it faythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together? sayeth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde/ and lyke an hammer/ that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde/ I will vpō the prophetes/  that steale my worde priuely from euery man. Beholde/ here am I (sayeth

I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst the prophetes / that take vpon their tunges to speake: The Lorde hath sayde it. They shall do thys people greate harme / sayeth the Lorde.

If this people / ether eny prophet or preest aske the / and saye: what is the * burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto thē: What burthen? Therfore wyll I cast you fro me (sayeth the Lorde) because ye youre selues are a burthē. And ye prophet, preest or people that vseth this terme, the burthē of ye Lorde) him wyll I viset / and his house also.

And as for the burthen of the Lorde ye shall speake nomore of it: for euery mans awne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuyng God the Lord of Hostes oure God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the Prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuē the? Or, what sayeth ye Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayeth ye Lorde: For so moch as ye haue vsed thys terme (the burthen of the Lorde) where as I not withstanding sent vnto you / and forbade you to speake of ye Lordes burthē.

Beholde therfore / I wyll repute you as a burthen / & will cast you out of my presence: yee and the cytie also / that I gaue you and youre fathers: & will bryng you to an euerlastyng confusyon / and in to soch a shame / as shall neuer be forgotten.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

The vysyon of the .ij. pannyers of fygges. The fyrst vysyon signifyeth that parte of the people shuld be brought agayne frō captiuytye. The seconde / that Iechonias and the reast of the people shulde be destroyed.

THe Lord shewed me a vysion: Beholde / there stode two maundes of fygges before the Temple of the Lord / after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had led away captyue Iechoniah ye sonne of Iehoakim kyng of Juda / the mightie men also of Juda / & the worckmasters / & connynge men of Jerusalem / vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen lyke as those that be fyrst rype. In ye other maunde were very naughtie fyges, whych might not be eaten / they were so euell. Then sayde the Lord vnto me: what seyst thou Jeremy? I sayde: fyges / wherof some be very good / and some so euel, that no man maye eate them.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me / after this maner: Thus sayeth ye Lorde the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest ye good fyges / so shall I knowe the men led awaye / whom I haue sent out of thys place in to the lande of the Caldees / for their profyte: and I wyll set myne eyes vpon them for the best, for I will bryng them agayne in to this lande: I wyll buylde them vp / and not breake them downe: I will plāte them / and not rote them out. And I wyll geue them an herte / to knowe / how that I am the Lorde. They shalbe my people / and I wyll be their God / for they shall returne vnto me wt their whole herte.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye figes, whych maye not be eaten / they are so euell: Euen so wyll I (sayeth the Lorde) lett Zedekiah the kynge of Juda / (ye & all his princes / & the residue of Jerusalem that remayne ouer in this lande / & them also that dwell in Egypte) to be vexed & plaged in all kyngdomes & landes. And wyll make them to be a reproche / a comen by worde / a laughynge stocke and shame / in all the places / where I shall scatre them. I wyll sende the swearde, honger & pestilence amonge them / vntill I haue cleane consumed them oute of the lande / that I gaue vntothem and their fathers.

Jeremye prophecyeth that they shall be in captyuytye .lxx. yeares / because they contemned and dyspysed the worde of God. He sheweth that after .lxx. yeares the Babylonians shulde be destroyed. The destruccyon of all nacyons is prophecied. He moueth the preastes of the nacyons to waylyng.

The .xxv. Chapter.

THe sermon that was geuē vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Juda: In ye fourth yeare of Iehoakim ye sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda / ye was in the fyrst yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. Which sermon / Jeremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitours of Jerusalem / on this maner.

From the .xiij. yeare of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda / vnto this present daye (that is euen .xxiij. yeare) the worde of the Lorde hath bene cōmytted vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you / I haue rysen vp early / I haue geuē you warnyng in season / but ye wolde not heare me. Though ye Lorde hath sent his seruauntes / all the prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye / ye wolde not enclyne youre eares to heare.

He sayde: turne agayne euery man from his euell waye / & from your wicked ymaginacions / and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande / that the Lorde promysed you & youre fore fozefathers: And go not after straūge goods/ serue them not/ worshipe them not, & angre me not wyth the worckes of youre handes: then wyll not I punish you. Neuertheles/ ye wolde not heare me (sayeth the Lorde) but haue defyed me with the worckes of youre handes/ to youre awne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayeth ỹ Lord of Hostes: Because/ ye haue not herkened vnto my worde/ lo/ I wyll sende out, & call for all the people/ that dwell in the North/ sayeth the Lorde/ and will prepayre Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt/ & will bringe them vpon this lande/ & vpō all that dwell therin/ & vpon all the people that are aboute them/ & will vtterly rote them oute. I will make of them a wyldernesse/ a mockage/ & a continuall deserte.

C Wherfore thinges are vnderstande the pastyme/ the prosperyte/ & the aboundaūce of worldly thynges. All these wolde the Lorde take away from the Jewes. Jere. xxv. b. xxvij. b.

Moreouer/ I will take frō thē the *voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bryde & degrome & ỹ bryde, the voyce of ỹ anoynted/ wyth the creatures: and this whole lande shal become a wyldernes, & they shall serue ỹ sayde people and ỹ kyng of Babylon thre score yeares and ten. When the. lxx. yeares are expyred/ I wyll vyset also the wickednesse of the kynge of Babylon & his people sayeth the Lorde: yee and the land of ỹ Caldees/ and wyll make it a perpetuall wyldernes, and will fulfyll all my wordes vpon that land/ which I haue deuysed agaynst it: yee all that is wrytten in this boke/ which Jeremy hath prophecied of all people: so ỹ they also shall be subdued vnto diuerse nacyons & greate kinges/ for I will recompense thē/ according vnto their dedes & workes of their awne handes. Job xxxiij. b.

D For thus hath ỹ Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this * wyne cuppe of indignacion fro my hande/ that thou mayest cause all the people/ to whom I sende the/ for to drincke of it: ỹ when they haue dronken therof/ they maye be mad/ & out of their wyttes/ when the swearde cōmeth/ that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hande/ and made all the people dryncke therof/ vnto whom the Lorde had sent me. * Esaii. li. and Psal. lxxv. b.

But fyrst the cytie of Jerusalem/ & all the cyties of Juda/ their kinges and prynces: to make thē desolate/ waste/ despysed & cursed Caccording as it is come to passe this daye. Yee & Pharao ỹ kinge of Egipte/ his seruaūtes/ his prynces & hys people altogether one vp another and all kynges of the lande of Hus/ all kynges of the Philistines lāde/ Ascalon/ Azah/ Accaron & the remnaunt of Asdod/ ỹ Edomites/ the Moabites & ỹ Ammonites: all the kynges of Tirus & Sidon: the kings of the Iles, that are beyonde the see: Dedan/ Thema/ Buz & the shauen Ismaelites: all the kynges of Araby/ and generally) all the kynges that dwell in the deserte: all ỹ kyngs of Zamri/ all the kynges of Elam/ all the kynges of the Medes, all kynges towarde ỹ North, whether they be farre or nye, euery one with hys neyghbours: Yee and all the kyngdomes that are vpon the whole earth. The kyng of Sezach, sayde he, shal drincke with them also.

And saye thou vnto them: This is the cōmaundement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Drynke & be dronken/ spue we & fall, that ye neuer ryse: and that thorow the swearde/ whych I wyll sende amonge you. But yf they wyll not receaue the cuppe of thy hande, & drynke it, then tell them: Thus doth the Lorde of Hostes threatē you: drinke it ye shal/ and that shortly. For lo/ I beginne to plage the cytye/ that my name is geuē vnto: thynke ye then, that I wyll leaue you vnpunyshed? Ye shall not go quyte. For why/ I call for a swearde vpon all the inhabytours of the earth/ sayeth the Lord of hoostes. Jere. xlix b. Ezechiel. xx b. 1. Petri. iiij. c.

Therfore tell them all these wordes/ and saye vnto them: The Lorde shall crye from aboue/ and lett hys voyce be herde from hys holy habytacion. Wyth a greate noyse shall he crye from hys courte royall. He shall geue a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) & the sounde therof shalbe herde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lord hath a iudgmēt to geue vpon all people/ and wyll holde hys courte of iustice wyth all flesh and punyshe the vngodly/ sayeth the Lorde. Joel. iiij. c. Amos. i. a

For thus sayeth ỹ Lorde of Hostes: Beholde, a miserable plage shall goo from one people to another/ and a greate stormy water shal aryse from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lorde hym selfe slaye thē/ from one ende of the earth to another. There shall no mone be made for eny of them/ none gathered vp/ none buried: but shall lye as dunge vpon the grounde. C Jere. xxx. b.

Mourne (O ye shepherdes) & crie: sprinkle youre selues with asshes/ O ye rammes of ỹ flocke: for the tyme of youre slaughter is fulfilled/ and ye shall fall lyke vessels contemptibly made for pleasure.

The shepherdes shal haue no waye to flie/ Psal. cxlij. A and the rāmes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horribly/ and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde shall consume their pasture/ and their best feldes shall lye deed because of the horrible wrath of the Lorde. They shall forsake their foldes lyke as a lyon: For their landes shalbe waste/ because of the wrath of the destroyer/ and because of hys fearfull indignacyon.

¶ Jeremye moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the Prophetes and Preastes, & brought to iudgement. He beinge accused before the Princes answereth, that he had preached only the worde of God. The rulers and the people delyuer Jeremye, agaynst the wyles of the Preastes & Prophetes: after the example of Hezekiah, whych had delyuered Micheah, that had preached the same thinges that Jeremy had preached. Uzziah the Prophete is killed of Jehoakim, contrary to the wyll of God.

¶ The.xxvj. Chapter.

IN the begynnyng of the reygne of Jehoakim ꝑ sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came this worde frō the Lorde, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them which (oute of the cyties of Juda) come to do worshyppe in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaūde the to saye. Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peraduenture) they wyll herken, and turne euery man from his wycked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage which I haue determed to bringe vpon them, because of their wycked mysengenons.

 The Lorde repenteth hym of the plage ꝑ he worde sende when he auengeth it not, but ꝓceaceth and forgeueth it: and when synners amend and forthynche their offences. Ezech. xviij. Jere. xxxvj.

B And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: yf ye wyll not obeye me, to walcke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruaūtes the prophetes, whō I sent vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and styll sendynge: If ye wyll not folowe them (I saye) then wyll I do to thys house, as I dyd vnto Silo, & wyll make this cyte to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the preastes, the prophetes & all ꝑ people herde Jeremy preach these wordes, in the house of the Lorde.

Now whē he had spokē out all ꝑ wordes, that the Lorde commaunded hym to preach vnto all the people, then ꝑ preastes, the prophetes and all the people toke holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalt dye. How darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the ¶ Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyd vnto Silo: & this cytie shalbe so waste, ꝑ no man shall dwell therin.

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremy in the house of the Lord, the princes of Juda herde of this rumoure and they came soone oute of the kynges Palace in to the house of the Lorde & sat thē downe before ꝑ new dore of the Lorde. Then spake the preastes and the prophetes vnto ꝑ rulers & to all the people, these wordes: This mā is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this cittie, as ye your selues haue herde with youre eares.

xvj. Reg. xxj. & Jere. xxxvj.

D Joan. xix.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preach agaynst this house and agaynst thys cytie all ꝑ wordes that ye haue herde. Therfore amende youre wayes, and youre aduysementes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repente of the plage, ꝑ he had deuysed agaynst you. Now as for me: I am in youre handes, do with me, as ye thynche expedient & good. But thys shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, ye shall make youre selues, this cytie and all the inhabitours therof, guiltie of innocent bloude. For this is of a treuth: that ꝑ ✠ Lorde hath sent me vnto you, to speake all Mat. xxiij. c. these wordes in youre eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the preastes and prophetes: This mā maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. Then Elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: Micheah the Morasthite, which was a prophet vnder Ezekiah kyng of Juda, spake to all ꝑ people of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: ✠ Sion shalbe plowed like a felde, Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wod. Did Ezekiah the kyng of Juda & the people of Juda put him to deeth for this? No verely, but rather feared the Lorde, & made their prayer vnto him. For the which cause also ꝑ Lorde repented of the plage, ꝑ he had deuysed agaynst them. Shulde we then do soch a shamefull dede agaynst oure soules? There was a prophete also, that preached stylly in ꝑ name of the Lorde called Uziah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this mā preached also agaynst this cittie and agaynst this lande, accordynge to all as Jeremy sayeth. Now when Jehoakim the kyng with all the estate and princes had herde his wordes, the kynge went about to slaye him. Whē Uziah perceaued that he was afrayed, & fled, & departed into Egypte.

Then Jehoakim the kyng sent seruaūtes in to the lande of Egypte, Namely: Elnathan ꝑ sonne of Achabor, and certayne men with him in to Egypte, which fetched Uziah oute of Egypt, & brought him vnto kyng Jehoakim that slewe him with the swearde, & cast his dead body in to the comen peoples graue But Ahikam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremy, that he came not in to the handes of the people to be slayne.

¶ Jeremye at the commaundment of the Lord, sendeth bondes to the kynge of Juda, and to the other kynges that were nye whereby they are monyshed to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kinges & rulers, that they beleue not false prophetes.

¶ The false Prophecy of Hananiah the Prophete. Jeremye shewyth that the prophecye of Hananiah is false/ by the example of the other Prophetes. He being inspired of the Lorde reprouyth Hananiah/ prophecyenge hys death.

¶ The.xxviij.Chapter.

IT in the the fourth yeare of the raygne of Zedekiah kynge of Juda/ in the fyfth Moneth/ It happened/ that Hananiah the sonne of Azur the prophet of Gabaon/ spake to me in the house of the Lorde/ in the presence of the prestes and of all the people/ & sayde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: I haue broken the yocke of the kinge of Babilon/ and after two yeare will I bynge agayne in to this place/ all the ornamentes of the Lordes house/ that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon caryed awaye from thys place vnto Babilō. Yee I wil bringe agayne Jechoniah the sonne of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda himself, wyth all ỹ presoners of Juda (that are caried vnto Babilon) euen in to this place/ sayeth the Lord. for I wyl breake the yock of the kinge of Babylon.

Then the prophet Jeremy gaue answere vnto the prophete Hananiah, before the preistes & before all the people that were present in the house of the Lorde. And ỹ prophet Jeremy sayde: Amen, the Lorde do ỹ, & graunte the thynge, which thou hast prophecied: that he may bringe agayne all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore all the preisoners from Babylon in to the place. Neuertheles, herken thou also what I will saye ỹ thou & all ỹ people maye heare: The prophetes ỹ were before vs in tymes past, which prophecied of warre, or trouble, or pestilẽce ether of peace vpon many nations & greate kingdoms, were proued by this (yf God had sende thẽ in very dede) when the thynge came to passe, which that prophet tolde before.

And Hananiah the prophet toke ỹ chayne from the prophet Jeremyes neck, & brake it and with that sayde Hananiah, that all the people myght heare: Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so will I breake the yock of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babylon, frõ the neck of all nacions, yee & ỹ within this two yeare. And so the prophet Jeremy wẽte hys waye. Now after that Hananiah ỹ prophet had taken the chayne from ỹ prophet Jeremies neck, and brokẽ it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto ỹ prophet Jeremy saiẽge: Go, and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus sayeth the Lord: Thou hast brokẽ the chaine of wod, but in steade of wod thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus saieth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: I will put a yock of yron vpon the neck of all thys people, ỹ they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon yee & so shal they do. And I will geue him the beastes in ỹ felde. Then sayde ỹ prophet Jeremy vnto ỹ prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I praye ỹ) Hananiah: The Lord hath not sent the, but thou bringest this people in to a false beleke. And therfore thus saieth the Lorde: beholde, I will sende ỹ out of the lande, & within a yeare thou shalt dye because thou hast falsely spoken agaynst ỹ Lorde. So Hananiah the prophet dyed the same yeare in the seuenth Moneth.

¶ The pystle of Jeremye sent vnto them that were in captiuytye in Babylon. He prophecyeth their returne from captiuytye after .lxx. yeares. He prophecyeth the destruccyon of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusalem. He threateneth .ij. Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehelamyte is prophecyed.

These is the Copie of ỹ lettre / that Jeremy the prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the preisoners: the Senatours, preistes / prophetes / and all the people / whom Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babylon: after that tyme that kyng Jechoniah / and his Quene / his chamberlaynes the princes of Juda & Jerusalem the worckmasters of Jerusalem were departed thyther. Which lettre Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Gamariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare / whom Zedekiah the kinge of Juda sent vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon: these were the wordes of Jeremies lettre:

Thus hath the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel spokẽ vnto all the preisoners / that were led frõ Jerusalẽ vnto Babylon: buylde you houses to dwell therin: plante you gardens / that ye may enioye the fruetes therof: take you wyues / to beare you sonnes and daughters: prouyde wyues for your sonnes / and husbondes for youre daughters / that they maye get sonnes and daughters / & that ye maye multyplye there. Laboure not to be fewe / but seke after peace and prosperite of the citie / wherin ye be preisoners / & praye vnto God for it. For in the peace therof, shal your peace be. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Let not those prophetes and sothsayers that be amonge you disceaue you: & beleue not youre awne dreames. For why / they preach you lyes in my name / and I haue not sent them, sayeth the Lorde.

But thus saieth the Lorde: When ye haue fulfilled .lxx. yeares at Babylon, I will bring you home / & of myne awne goodnes I will caste you hither agayne vnto this place. For I knowe what I haue deuysed for you saieth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace / & not trouble (which I geue you all tyme) & ỹ ye might haue hope agayne. Ye shal crye vnto me, ye shall go & call vpon me / & I shal heare you. Ye shall seke me & fynde me / Yee, yf so be ỹ ye seke me wt your whole hert, I will be foũde of you, saieth ỹ Lord) & will deliuer you out of preison / & gather you together agayne out of all places where in I haue scatred you, saieth the Lorde: & will bringe you agayne to the same place / from whence I caused you to be caried awaye captyue.

But where as ye saye / that * God hath raysed you vp prophetes at Babylon: Thus hath the Lorde spoken (concernynge ỹ kinge that sytteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the people that dwell in this citie, youre brethrẽ that are not gone wyth you in to captiuytye) Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lord of hoostes: Beholde I will sende a swearde / honger & pestilence vpon them / and will make them like vntymely frygs that maye not be eaten for bitternes. And I will persecute them with the swearde, with honger & death.

As soch prophetes as preached vnto the ỹ thynges which they were deceiued of / dyd they greatly displease: yee euen after they came to Babylo. In the they reioyced as though they had ben sent of the Lorde / and yet were they in deede false prophetes. But Ezechiel the true prophete of the Lorde / which preached the cõtrary did they persecute. By the false prophetes they sayd. God hath sent vs Prophetes: and their doctrine dyd they heare & folowe. But the true Prophete they myght scarce laugh to scorne: and wolde neither beleue his doctryne, nor geue eare vnto it.

I will

I wyll delyuer them vp to be vexed of all kingdomes/to be cursed/abhorred/laughed to scorne/ and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whom I haue scatred the: that because they haue not bene obedyēt vnto my commaundementes (sayeth ỳ Lorde) whych I sent vnto them by my seruauntes ỳ prophetes. I rose vp early/ and sent vnto them/ but they wolde not heare/ sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of ỳ Lord/ all ye preconers/whom I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hath the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell spoken/ of Ahab the sonne of Colaiah/ and of Zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah/ whych prophecye lyes vnto you in my name: Beholde/ I wyll delyuer them in to the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon/ that he maye slaye them before youre eyes. And al ỳ preconers of Juda that are in Babylon/ shall take vpō them thys terme of cursynge/ and saye: Now God do vnto the/ as he dyd vnto Zedekiah and Ahab/ whom the kynge of Babylon rosted in ỳ fyre/ because they synned shamefully in Israell.

For they haue not onely defiled their neighbours wyues/ but also preached lieng wordes in my name/ whych I haue not commaunded them. This I testifie/ & assure/ saieth the Lord. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamite thou shalt speake vnto hym: Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name/ vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem/ and to Sophonias the sonne of Maasiah ỳ preest yee and sent them to all the preestes: where in thou wrytest thus vnto him: The Lorde hath ordened the to be preest in steade of Jehoiada the preest/ that thou shuldest be the cheefe in the house of the Lorde aboue all prophetes/ and preachers/ and that thou myghtest put them in preson/ or in the stockes. How happeneth it then/ that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth/ whych neuer leaueth of hys prophecyeng. And beside all thys/ he hath sent vs worde vnto Babylon/ and tolde vs plainely/ that oure captyuyte shall longe endure: that we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therin/ and to plante vs gardens that we myght enioye the frutes therof. Whych lettre Sophonias the preest dyd rede/ and let Jeremy the prophet heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy/ sayenge: Sende worde to all them that be in captyuyte/ on thys maner: Thus hath the Lord spoken cōcernynge Semeiah ỳ Nehelamite: Because ỳ Semeiah hath prophecyed vnto you wythout my commyssyon/ & brought you in to a false hope/ therfore thus the Lorde doth certyfye you: Behold/ I wyl visit Semeiah ỳ Nehelamite/ and hys sede: so that none of hys shall remayne amonge this people/ and none of thē shall se the good/ that I will do for this people/ saieth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

¶ The returne of the people from Babylon. God by hys chastenyng sheweth that the people is synfull. The destruccyon of the enemyes of Israel.

¶ The.xxx. Chapter.

These are the wordes, that ỳ Lorde I shewed vnto Jeremy/ sayenge: Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israell: Wryte vp dylygently all the wordes/ that I haue spoken vnto the/ in a boke. For lo/ the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I will bryng agayne the preconers of my people of Israel and Juda/ saieth the Lorde: For I wyll restore them vnto the lande/ that I gaue to their fathers/ and they shall haue it in possessyon.

Agayne/ these wordes spake the Lorde/ concernynge Israel and Juda: Thus sayeth ỳ Lord: We heare a terrible crye/ feare & disquietnesse. For what els doth this signyfie/ that I se? Namely, ỳ all stronge men smyte/ euery man hys hande vpon hys loynes/ as a woman in the payne of her trauayle. Who euer sawe a man trauayle with chylde? Enquere therafter/ & se. Yee all theyr faces are maruelous pale. Jeremy.xiij.d

Alas for this daye/ whych is so dredefull/ that none maye be lyckened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble/ from the which he shall yet be delyuered. For in that daye/ sayeth the Lorde/ I wyll take his yocke from of thy neck/ & breake thy bondes. They shall nomore serue straunge Goddes vnder hym/ but they shall do seruyce vnto God their Lorde/ & to Dauid their kyng/ whom I wyll rayse vp vnto them. * And as for the/ O my seruaunt Jacob/ feare not/ sayeth the Lord) and be not afrayed/ O Israel. For/ lo I wyll helpe the also from farre/ & thy sede from the lande of their captyuyte. * Esay.xliij.a Ezech.xxxvij.a Jeremy.xlvj.a

And Jacob shall turne agayne/ he shalbe in rest/ and haue a prosperous lyfe/ and no man shall make him afrayed. For I am with the/ to helpe the/ sayeth the Lorde. And though I shall destroye all ỳ people/ amōge whom I haue scatred the/ yet wyll I not destroye the/ but correcte the/ and that wyth discrecyon. For I knowe/ that thou art in no wyse wythout faute. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: I am sory for thy hurte and woūdes. There is no mā to medle with thy cause: or to bynde vp thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the. Jere.x.b.Ezech.xxxvij.a. THus sayeth the Lorde: The people I of Israel which escapped in ẏ wyl- Nume.xiij.c.

grace to come in to their rest. Eue so shall the Lorde now also apeare vnto me from farre/ & saye: I loue the wyth an euerbefore the. I wyll repayre the agayne (O thou daughter of Israell) that thou mayest be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabret-tes agayne/and go forth with them/that lede the daunce.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon
the hylles of Samaria / and the grape gatherers shall plante, and synge.

And when it is tyme, the watch men vpō Esaye.ij.a.
the mount of Ephraim shall crye: Arise/lett vs go vp vnto Syon to oure Lorde God/ for thus sayeth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnes B because of Jacob / crye vnto the head of the Gentiles: speake out/ synge/ and saye: The Lorde shall delyuer his people/ the remnaūt of Israell/ and make them whole. Beholde/
I wyll bryng them agayne from out of the north lande/ and gather them from the endes of the worlde/ wyth the blinde and lame that are amonge them / wyth the wemen that be greate wyth chylde/ and soch as be also delyuered: & the company of them that come a-gayne/ shall be greate.

They departed from hence in heuynes/but wyth ioye wyll I bryng them hyther a-gayne. I will lede them by the ryuers of wa-

Heare the worde of the Lorde/ O ye Gentiles, preach in the Iles / that ye farre of/ & saye: he that hath scatred Israell/ shal gather him together agayne and shall kepe hym as a shepherde doth hys flocke. For the Lorde shal redeme Jacob/ & ryd him from the hande of the bolent. And they shall come / and re-ioyce vpon the hyll of Syon / and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes / whych the Lorde shall geue the: Namely/ wheate/ wyne/ oyle/yonge shepe & calues. And their conscyence shalbe as a well watred garden/ for they shal nomore be hongrye.

Then shal the mayde reioyce in the daūce C yee both yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne their sorow in to gladnesse / and wyll comforte them and make them ioyfull/ euen from their hertes. I wyll poure plenteousnes vpon the hertes of the prestes / and my people shalbe satisfyed wt good thynges, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * The voyce of *Jere.xv.f.g
heuynes / weppynge and lamentacyon came Mat.ij.c.
vp vnto heauen: euen of Rachel mourninge for her

for her children/ and wolde not be comforted because they were awaye.

But now sayeth the Lorde: leave of from weppynge and crienge/ wythholde thyne eyes from teares / for thy labour shalbe rewarded/ sayeth the Lorde. And they shall come agayne out of the lande of their enemyes: Yee euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in thys (sayeth the Lorde) that thy children shall come agayne in to their awne lande.

Moreouer I herde Ephraym / that was led awaye captyue/ complayne on thys maner: O Lorde/ thou hast correcte me / & thy chastenynge haue I receaued / as an vntamed calfe. Conuerte thou me/ and I shalbe conuerted/ for thou art my Lorde God: Yee as soone as thou turnest me/ I shall returne my self: and when I vnderstande / I shall smyte vpon my thyghe. For verely I haue committed shameful thynges: O lett my youth beare this reproffe and confusyon.

Vpon thys cõplaynte/ I thought thus by my self: is not Ephraym my deare sonne? Is he not the childe wych whom I haue had all myth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I first commened with him / I haue him euer in remẽbraunce: therfore my very herte draweth me vnto him / gladly and louyngly wyll I haue mercy vpon him sayeth the Lorde. Set the watchmen prouyde teachers for the lett thyne herte vpon the ryght waye, that thou shulest walke/ and turne agayne (O thou daughter of Israell, turne agayne to these cytyes of thyne. How longe wylt thou goast aye O thou sinnyng daughter: For the Lorde wyl worke a new thynge vpon earth: A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: It will come therto/ that whẽ I haue brought Juda out of captyuite these wordes shalbe herde in the lande and in thys cytes: The Lorde wyche is the fayre habytacion of ryghtuousnesse make the fruitful O thou holy hyll: And there shal dwell Juda / and all her cytyes / the shepherdes and husbandemen: For I shall fede the hongrye soule & refreshe al sayntе herte. Whẽ I herde this I came agayne to myself & mused like as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Beholde, saieth the Lorde) the dayes come/ that I will sowe the house of Israell and the house of Juda, wyth mẽ & wyth catell. Yee it shall come therto / that like as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote thẽ out/ to scatre them/ to breake them downe/ to destroye thẽ and chasten them: Euen so wyll I also go diligently aboute/ to buylde them vp agayne & to plante them / saieth the Lorde.

Then shall it no more be sayde: the fathers haue eatẽ a sower grape/ & ỳ chyldrẽs teeth are sett on egde: for euery one shall dye for his awne misdeede/ so that who so eateth a sower grape, his teeth shalbe set on edge

Behoulde/ the dayes come (sayeth ỳ Lorde) that I wyl make a new couenaunt with the house of Israel & with ỳ house of Juda: not after the couenaunt that I made wyth they; fathers, when I tooke them by the hande, and led them out of the lande of Egypte: wheych couenaunt they brake/ wherfore I punished them sore/ sayeth the Lorde: But thys shall be the couenaunt that I wyll make with the house of Israel after those dayes/ sayeth the Lorde: I wyll plante my lawe in ỳ inwarde partes of them / & wryte it in their hertes / & will be their God/ and they shalbe my people.

And from thence forth shall no mã teach his neighboure or his brother/ and saye: knowe the Lorde: But they shall all knowe me/ from the lowest vnto the heyest / sayeth the Lorde. For I wyll forgeue their myshedes/ and wyll neuer remembre their synnes eny more. Thus sayeth the Lorde wheych gaue ỳ sunne to be a light for the daye/ & the moone and starres to shyne in the nyght: which moueth the see / so that the floudes therof ware fearce: hys name ys the Lorde of hoostes. Lyke as thys ordynaunce shall neuer be taken out of my syght/ sayeth the Lorde: So shall the sede of Israell neuer ceasse / but all waye be a people before me.

Moreouer/ thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue can not be measured/ and as the foundacions of the earth beneth maye not be sought out: So wyll I also not cast out the whole sede of Israel / for that they haue committed/ sayeth the Lorde. Behoulde the dayes come sayeth the Lorde/ that the cite of the Lorde shalbe enlarged frõ the towre of Hananeel, vnto ỳ gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the ryght measure be taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of Gareb/ and shall come aboute Gaath / and the whole valley of the deed karcases/ and of the ashes / & all Ceremoth vnto the brooke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsgate towarde the East / where as the Sanctuary of the Lorde also shall be set. And when it is now buylded/ & set vp of this fashyon it shall neuer be broken / nor cast downe any more.

Jerremye is cast in to prison/ because he prophecyed that the cytye shulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the feld that Jeremy bought at the cõmaundement of the Lorde/ is sygnyfyed/ that the people shulde come agayne to their awne possessyon. The people of God are his seruauntes/ & he is their Lorde. To feare God is Godes gyft/ to thynke that synnes maye be eschued.

a To smyte vpõ the thyghe was token of greffe. For meaneth that when the Lorde geueth him vnderstãdynge he shall come to repentaunce & forsaynche hys euell conuersacyon.

b Thys do they comonly expounde of the redemptyon of Israell by the kynge of Babylon: & some thynge there hath but ... the ... & ... Christ: C Christ cam of Israell ... they ... & ... he ... God shal ... at the last ... turne ... embrace ... the armes of faith ... & ... dyece ... Some expounde it of ỳ virgyn Mary: And some of the churche the spouse of Christ.

THese wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremy / in the tenth yeare of Zedekiah kynge of Juda / whych was the.xviii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor what tyme as the kyng of Babilons Hoste layed seage vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremy the prophete laye bounde in the courte of the prison / which was in the kyng of Judaes house: where Zedekiah the kyng of Juda cauled hym to be layed / because he had prophecied of this maner: Thus sayeth the Jere.xxxiii.a. xxxv.a. xxxvii a. Lorde: Beholde I will delyuer thys cyte in to the hãdes of the kynge of Babilon / which shall take it. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda / he shall not be able to escape the Caldees / but surely he shal come in to the hãdes of the kynge of Babilon: which shall speake with him mouth to mouth / and one of them shall loke another in the face. And Zedekiah shalbe caried vnto Babilon / and there shall he be / vntyll the tyme that I visit him saieth the Lord But yf thou takest in hãde to fight agaynst ỹ Caldees. thou shalt not prospere.

B And Jeremy sayde: Thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Beholde / Hananeel ỹ sonne of Selum thyne Vncles sonne shall come vnto the / and requyre the to redeme ỹ lande / that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeme it / and to bye it out. Leuitt.xxv.b Num.xxvij.a. xxxvi.a. Ruth.iiij.a.

And so Hananeel myne vncles sonne came to me in ỹ courte of ỹ prison (accordynge to the worde of the Lorde) and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande (I praye the) that lyeth in Anathoth in the coũtre of Benjamin: for by heretage thou hast right to lowse it out for thy selfe / therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued / that this was the cõmaundement of ỹ Lord / and so I lowsed the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth / myne Vncles sonne / and weyed him there the money: euen seuen sycles / ỹ ten syluer pens.

I cauled him also to make me a wrytting / and to seale it / and cal:d recorde therby / ỹ weyed him there ỹ money vpõ ỹ waightes.

C So I toke the euydẽce with the copie (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) ỹ I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah ỹ sonne of Maasiah in the syght of Hananeel my cosen / ỹ in ỹ presence of the wytnesses / that be named in the euydence / ỹ before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before thẽ / sayig: The Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell cõmaundeth the / to take this sealed euydence with ỹ copie / ỹ to laye it in an erthen vessel / that it maye longe contynue.

For the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell hath determed, that houses / feldes and vyneyardes shalbe possessed agayne in thys lande.

Now when I had delyuered the euydence vnto Baruch ỹ sonne of Neriah / I besought the Lorde / saying: O Lorde God / It is thou that hast made heauen and earth wyth thy greate power and hye arme / and there is nothynge to harde for the. Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes / thou recõpencest the wickednes of the fathers / in to the bosome of the chyldren that come after them. D Erod.xxxiiij.a

Thou art the greate and myghtie God / whose name is the Lorde of Hostes: greate in councell / and infinyte in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren / to rewarde euery one after his waye / and accordynge to the frutes of hys inuencyons: Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypt, as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israell and vpon those men: to make thy name great / as it is come to passe this daye: Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lãd of Egypt / wyth tokens / with wondres / with a mightie hande / wyth a stretched oute arme and wyth greate terryblenes: and hast geuen them thys lande / lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers: Namely / ỹ thou woldest geue them a land / that floweth with mylcke and honye. Roma.ij.a. Erod.viii. vnto x.xv. Chapter

Now when they came therin / and possessed it / they folowed not thy voyce / and walcked not in thy lawe: but all that thou commaundedest them to do / that haue they not done / and therfore come all these plages vpõ them.

Beholde / there are bullworckes made now agaynst the cytie / to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Caldees that beserge it / with swearde / wyth honger and death / and loke what thou hast spoken / that same shal come vpon them.

For lo / all thynges are present vnto the: C Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and cõmaundest me / that I shall lowse a pece of lande vnto my selfe / ỹ take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cytie is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Beholde / I am the Lord God of all flesshe / is there eny thynge then to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: beholde / I shall delyuer thys cytye in to the power of the Caldees / and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon / they shall take it in: For the Caldees shall come / and wynne thys cytye / and sett fyre vpon it / and burne it: wyth the gorgeous houses / in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, ỹ poured drinck offringes Jere.xxb.b. ỹ xxx.b.

vnto straunge Goddes/to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For seynge the chyldren of Israel/and the chyldren of Juda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from their youth vp/ what haue they els done/ but prouoked me wyth the worckes of their awne hãdes: sayeth the Lorde.

Or/what hath this cytie bene els/ but a prouokinge of my wrath/euer sence ỹ daye that I buylded it vnto this houre: Wherin I cast it out of my syght/because of ỹ great blasphemyes of the chyldren of Israell and Juda/which they haue done to prouoke me: yee they/ their kynges, their prynces/ their Preastes/their Prophetes/ whole Juda/ & all the cytesyns of Jerusalem.

When I stode vp early/ and taught them Jeremye. ỹ.d. and instructe thẽ, they turned their backes to me/and not their faces. They wolde not heare/ to be reformed and correcte. They haue sett their Goddes in the house/ that is halowed vnto my name/to defyle it. They Jere.vij.a.d haue buylded hye places for Baal in the valley of the children of Hennom/to bowe their sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer commaunded them/ nether came it euer in my thought/ to make Juda synne with soch abhominacyon.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spokẽ/concernynge this cytie/which (as ye youre selues cõfesse) shalbe deliuered in to the hande of the kyng of Babilon/ whẽ it is wonne with the swearde/ wyth honger and with pestilence. Beholde/ I wyll gather Deute.xxx.a them together from all landes/ wherin I haue scatred them in my wrath/ in my fearfull and greate displeasure: and wyll bringe thẽ agayne vnto this place: where they shall dwell safely. And they shalbe my people/and I wylbe their God.

G And I wyll geue them one herte and one Jo.xvij.c. waye/that they maye feare me all the dayes of their lyfe, that they and their chyldren after them maye prospere. And I wyll sett vp an euerlastynge couenaunt with them/Namely: that I will neuer cease to dothẽ good/ & that I wyll put my feare in their hertes/ so that they shall not runne a waye from me.

Yee I will haue a lust and pleasure to do them good/and faithfully to plante them in thys lande wyth my whole herte/ and with all my soule.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: Lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon thys people: so will I also bringe vpon them all the good/ that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue their possessyons in this lande/ wherof ye saye now/ that it shall nether be inhabited of people ner of catell, but be delyuered in to the handes of the Caldees: Yee land shalbe bought for money/ & euidences made ther vpon and sealed before wytnesses in ỹ countre of Benjamin, & rounde aboute Jerusalem: in the cities of Juda/ in ỹ cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth/ yee & in the cities that are in ỹ deserte. For I wyll bringe their prisoners hither agayne/ sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The prophete is monyshed of the Lorde/ to praye for the deliuerance of the people/ which the Lorde promiseth. God forgeueth synnes and doth the graciously to the people/ for his awne renowme. Of the byrth of Christ. The kyngdome of Christ in the churche shall neuer be ended.

¶ The .xxxiij. Chapter.

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde I Jeremy.xx.a. came vnto Jeremy on this maner/ xxxij.a. when he was yet bounde in the courte of the prison: Thus sayeth the Lorde, which fulfylleth the thynge that he speaketh the Lorde wyrch performeth the thynge that he taketh in hande: euen he/ whose name is ỹ Lorde: thou hast *cryed vnto me & I haue herde ỹ: I haue shewed greate & hye thynges/ whych were vnknowẽ vnto you. *Ierem.xxxij.a. & xlvij.a.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel/ concernyng the houses of this cytie/ & the houses of the kynges of Juda: that they shalbe broken thorowe the ordynaunce and weapens/ when the Caldees come to besege them: and they shalbe filled with ỹ dead carcases of men, whõ I wyll slaye in my wrath & displeasure: when I turne my face frõ this cytie/ because of all her wickednes. Beholde/ (sayeth ỹ Lorde) I will heale their woundes and make them whole: I wyll open them the treasure of peace and treuth.

And I wyll returne the captyuite of Juda and Israell: and will set them vp agayne/ as they were afore. Frõ all myldedes (wherin they haue offended agaynst me) I wyll clense thẽ: And all their blasphemyes which they haue done agaynst me/ whẽ they regarded me not I will forgeue them.

And this shall get me a name, a prayse & honoure/ amonge all people of the earth/ B whych shall heare all the good/ that I wyll shewe vnto them: yee they shall be afrayed and astonnyed at all the good dedes and benefytes/ that I wyll do for them. Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde: In this place/ wherof ye saye ỹ it shall be a wyldernesse/ wherin nether people ner cateli shal dwell: in like maner in the cytyes of Juda and wythout Jerusalem (which also shalbe so voyde/ that nether people ner cateli shall dwell there) Shal ỹ voyce of gladnesse be herde agayne/ the voyce of the Bridegrome and of the bryde/ the voyce of them that shall synge: Prayse ỹ Lorde of Hostes/ for he is louyng and hys mercy endureth for euer) and the voyce of them that shall offer vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I will restore ỹ captiuyte of this lande/as it was afore/sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes Yt shall come yet therto/ that in this lande/ which is voyde from men and catell/ and in all the cyties of the lande/there shall be sett vp shepherdes cotages: in the cyties vpō the mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne/and in the deserte.

In the lande of Benjamin/ in the feldes of Jerusalem/and in the cyties of Juda shal the shepe be nombred agayne/vnder ỹ hande of him/that telleth them/sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Beholde/the tyme cōmeth/sayeth the Lord/ Jeremy.xxx.a that I will performme ỹ good thynge/which I haue promysed vnto the house of Israell & to the house of Juda. In those dayes and at ỹ same tyme/I wyll bringe forth vnto Dauid/the braunche of ryghteousnes/ and he shall do equyte & ryghteousnesse in ỹ lande. In those dayes shall Juda be helped/and Jerusalem shall dwell safe/ and he that shall call her is euen God our ryghteous maker. For thus the Lorde promiseth: Dauid shall neuer want one/ to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israell: nether shall the prestes and Leuytes want one to offre allwaye before me burntofferinges/to kyndle the meatofferynges and to prepare the sacrifyces.

And the worde of the Lorde cam vnto Je- D reny after this maner: Thus sayeth ỹ Lord: Gene.viij.d. Maye the couenaunt which I haue made with daye and nyght be broken/ that there shulde not be daye and nyght in due season: Then maye my couenaunt also be broken/ which I made with Dauid my seruaunte/ & so he not to haue a sonne to reygne in hys trone. So shall also the prestes ỹ Leuites neuer fayle/but serue me. For lyke as the Gene.xv.d.& starres of heauen maye not be nombred/ne- xxvj.c. ther the sande of the see measured: so will I multiplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt/& of the Leuites my mynysters.

Moreouer/the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremy/saīg: Considerest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen/ and those same two hath he cast awaye. For so farre is my people come/ ỹ they haue no hope to come to gether eny more/& to be one people agayne. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt with daye and nyght/ & geuen no statute vnto heuē and earth: then wyll I also cast awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt: so that I wyll take no prynce out of hys sede/to rule the posterite of Abrahā/ Isaac & Jacob. But yet I wil turne agayne their captiuite/& be mercifull vnto them.

¶ He threateneth that the cytie/and kynge Zedekiah also/shalbe geuen into the handes of the kyng of Babylon. He remembreth them that brought forthe of their brethren into captyuyte/as were pardoned to go at their lyberte.

¶ The xxxiij. Chapter.

THese are the wordes whych the L Lorde spake vnto Jeremy/ what tyme as Nabuchodonosor ỹ king of Babylon/ and all hys Hostes (out of all the kyngdomes that were vnder his power) & all his people/ fought agaynst Jerusalem and all the cyties therof. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: Goo/ and speake to Zedekiah the kyng of Juda/& tell him: The Lorde sendeth the this worde: Beholde/I will delyuer this cytie in to ỹ hāde of the kynge of Babylon he shall burne it/ & thou shalt not escape his handes/but shalt be led awaye prysoner/& delyuered in to hys power. Thou shalt loke the kynge of Babylon in the face and he shall speake with the mouth to mouth/and then shalt thou goo to Babylon Yet heare ỹ worde of the Lorde/O Zedekiah thou kyng of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lord vnto the: Thou shalt not be slayne ỹ the swearde/but shalt dye in peace. Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges/ thy progenitours/were brēte: so shalt thou be brēt also/ & in the mournyng they shall saye: oh Lord. For thus haue I determined/ sayeth ỹ Lord.

Then spake Jeremy the prophet all these B worde vnto Sedekiah kynge of Juda in Jerusalē: what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hoost beleged Jerusalem/and the remnaunt of the cyties: Namely/Lachis & Azecah/ which yet remeyned of the stronge defensed cyties of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy the prophet/ when Sedekiah was agreed with all the people at Jerusalē/ that there shulde be proclamed a lyberte: so that euery mā shulde let his seruaūt & handmayde go free/ Hebrue and Hebruesse/ & no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bonde man. Now as they had cōsented/ cuē so they were obedient/& let them go free. But afterwarde they repented/ & toke agayne the seruaūtes and handemaydens/whom they had lett go free/and so made them bonde agayne.

For the which cause the worde of ỹ Lord C came vnto Jeremy from the Lorde him self/ sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: * I made a couenaunt with youre fa- Deutero.xv.e thers when I brought them out of Egypte/ & Exo.xxi.a (ỹ they shulde no more be bondmen) saying: When seuen yeares are out/ euery mā shall let his bought seruaunte an Hebrue go free/ yf he haue serued him syx yeares. But your fathers obeyed me not and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned/ and dyd dyd ryght before me/in that ye proclamed/ euery man to let hys neyghboure go free/& in that ye made a couenaunt before me/in the tẽple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne/and blasphemed my name: In thys/ þ euery man hath requyred hys seruãt & handmayde agayne/ whõ ye had let go quyte and free/& compelled them to serue you agayne/& to be youre bõde mẽ.

D And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me/ euery man to proclame fredome vnto his brother & neyghboure: wherfore/I wyll call you vnto a fredome/ sayeth the Lorde: euen vnto the sweard/ to the pestilence/& to honger/& wyll make you to be plaged in all the kyngdomes of the earth. Yee those men þ haue brokẽ my couenaunt/ & not kepte the wordes of the appoyntemẽt/ which they made before me: whẽ they hewed the calfe in two/& when there went thorow the two halfes therof: The princes of Juda/ the Prynces of Jerusalem/ the geldẽ men/ the Prestes & all þ people of þ lande/ which wente thorow the two sydes of the calfe. Those men wyll I geue in to the power of their enemyes/& in to the handes of thẽ that solowe vpon their lyues.

Gene.xv.b.

And their deed bodyes shalbe meate for þ foules of the ayre/ and beastes of the felde. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda and hys Prynces/I wyll delyuer thẽ in to the power of their enemyes/and of them that desyre to slaye them/ and in to the hande of the kynge of Babylons hoste * which now is departed from you: But thorow my commaundemẽt/ sayeth the Lorde/ they shall come agayne before thys cytye/ they shall fyght agaynst it wynne it/and burne it. Moreouer I will laye the cytyes of Juda so waste/ þ no man shall dwell therin.

* Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon was departed from them to go agaynst the Egyptyans who (which they had vanquyshed) they returned to fyght agaynst Jerusalem.

The propounderth the obedyence of the Rechabites & therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The cõmaundement of Jonadab the father of the Rechabites. He threateneth punyshmẽt vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promeseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites for their obedyence vnto their father.

The.xxxv.Chapter.

THe wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy/in the dayes of Jehoahim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda/are these: Go vnto þ house of the Rechabites/& call them out/& bringe them to the house of the Lorde in to some cõmodyous place/& geue thẽ wyne to drincke.

kyn.Reg.x.c.

Then toke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremy the sonne of Habazinias/ & his brethren and all hys sonnes/ and the whole housholde of the Rechabytes: and brought them to the house of the Lorde/in to the closet of the childrẽ of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah þ man of God: which was by the closet of the Pryn-ces that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, whych is the cheafe of the treasury. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites I set pottes full of wine/ and cuppes/ and sayde vnto them: Drincke wyne. But they sayde: we drincke no wyne/ for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs, sayinge: ye and youre sonnes shall neuer drincke wyne buylde no houses/ sowe no sede/ plante no vynes/ yee ye shall haue no vyneyardes: but for all your tyme ye shall dwell in tentes/ that ye maye lyue lõge in the lãde wherin ye be straũgers.

Jere.xxxv.b.

Thus haue we obeyed the cõmaundemẽt of Jonadab þ sonne of Rechab oure father/ in all that he hath charged vs/& so we drinke no wyne all oure lyue longe: we/ nor oure wyues/ oure sonnes and oure daughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin/ we haue also amõge vs nether vyneyardes/ ner corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes/ we obeye/ and do accordynge vnto all/ that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor þ kinge of Babylon came vp in to the lande we sayde come, lett vs go to Jerusalem that we maye escape the hoost of the Caldees and the Assyrians: and so we dwell now at Jerusalem.

Then came þ worde of þ Lord vnto Jeremy sayenge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Juda & al the inhabitours of Jerusalem: Wyl ye not be reformed/ to obey my wordes? sayeth the Lorde. The wordes which Jonadab þ sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes/ þ they shulde drynke no wyne/ are kept and surely kepte: for vnto this daye they drynke no wine but obeye their fathers commaundement.

But as for me/ I haue rãd vp early. I haue spoken vnto you/ & geuen you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not bene obedient vnto me. Yee I haue sent my seruauntes/ all þ prophetes vnto you/ I rose vp early/ & sent you worde/ sayenge: O turne you/ euery mã from his wicked waye: amende your lyues/ and go not after straunge goddes/ to worshype them: that ye maye contynue in the lande/ which I haue geuen vnto you & your fathers/ but ye wolde nether heare me/ ner solowe me.

Jere.xxv.b.

The children of Jonadab Rachabs sonne haue stedfastly kepte their fathers cõmaundement/ þ he gaue them/ but thys people is not obediẽt vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Beholde/ I wyll bringe vpon Juda & vpõ euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, al þ trouble þ I haue deuysed agaynst them. For I haue spoken vnto thẽ, but they wolde not solowe: I haue called vnto them/ neuertheles they wolde geue me no answere. Jeremy also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabits: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: For so moch as ye haue obeyed ỹ cõmaundement of Jonadab youre father/ & kepte all hys preceptes/ & done accordynge Jere. xxxv. c. vnto all that he hath bydden you: Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle/ but haue one out of his stocke/ to stande alwaye before me.

¶ Baruch wryteth (as Jeremy endyteth) the boke of the curses agaynst Judah Israel He is sent wyth the boke vnto the people/ & readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulars/ & readeth it before the also. The rulars sheweth vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke/ & readeth a peell of it/ & after casteth it in the fyre. There is another writte/ at the commaundement of the Lorde.

¶ The.xxxvj. Chapter.

IN the fourth yeare of Jehoakim ỹ sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda/ came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy/ sayinge: Take a boke/ &
Jeremy xxx. a. wryte therin all the wordes that I haue spoken to the/ to Israel/ to Juda/ and to all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto thys daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage wheych I haue deuysed for them/ they may peraduenture turne/ euery Jeremy. xviij. a man from his wycked waye/ that I maye forgeue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne
Jeremy. xiv. a of Nerias/ & Baruch wrote in the boke at ỹ mouth of Jeremy/ all ỹ wordes of the Lorde/ which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch/ sayeng: I am in preson/ so that I maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther/ and
B reade the boke, that thou hast wryten at my mouth: Namely/ the wordes of the Lorde/ & rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye: that the people/ whole Juda/ & all they that come out of the cytyes/ maye heare Peraduenture they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lorde/ & turne euery one from his wycked waye. For greate is the wrath and displeasure/ that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Nerias dyd/ accordyng vnto all that Jeremy the Prophete cõmaunded hym/ readyng the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in ỹ fyfth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda/ in Jone. iij. a. the.ix. moneth when it was cõmaunded/ that all the people of Jerusalẽ shulde fast before the Lorde/ & they also that were come from the cytyes of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

¶ Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the boke within ỹ house of the Lorde, Jeremy. xxxvi. b out of the treasury of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scrybe/ which is beside the hyer lofte of the new doore of ỹ Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Now when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan had heard all the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke/ he went downe to ỹ kynges palace in to the Scrybes chambre/ for there all the Princes were set: Elisama the Scrybe/ Dalaiah the sonne of Semei/ Elnathan the sonne of Iachor/ Gamariah ỹ sonne of Saphan/ Zedekiah the sonne of Hanani & all ỹ Princes. And Micheah tolde thẽ all the wordes/ ỹ he heard Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then all the Princes sent Jehudi ỹ sonne D of Nathaniah/ the sonne of Selamiah/ the sonne of Chusi vnto Baruch/ sayinge: Take in thyne hande the boke/ wherout thou hast red before all the people/ and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke ỹ boke in his hande/ & came vnto thẽ. And they sayde vnto hym: Syt downe/ & rede the boke ỹ we may heare also. So Baruch red/ that they myght heare. Now when they had heard all the wordes/ they were abashed one vpõ another/ & sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certyfye the kynge of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch/ saying: tell vs/ how dyddest thou wryte all these wordes out of hys mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all E these wordes vnto me wt hys mouth/ and I alone was wt him/ & wrote them in the boke.

Then sayde ỹ Princes vnto Baruch: Go thy waye/ & hide the with Jeremy/ so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kynge to the courte. But they kepte ỹ boke in the chãbre of Elisama the Scrybe/ & tolde the kyng all ỹ wordes that he might heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to fetch him the boke/ which he brought out of Elisama ỹ Scrybes chambre. And Jehudi red it/ ỹ the kynge & all the Princes, which were about hym/ myght heare. Now the kyng sat in the wynter house/ for it was in the.ix. Moneth/ & there was a good fyre before him. And whẽ Jehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof/ Acto. xix. b he cut the boke in peces wyth a pẽne knyfe/ & cast it into the fyre vpõ the herth/ vntyll ỹ boke was all brẽte in the fyre vpõ the harth.

Yet no man was abashed therof/ or rente his clothes: neither the kynge hym selfe/ nor his seruauntes/ though they heard all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathã Dalaiah/ & F Gamariah besought the kynge/ ỹ he wolde not burne the boke: notwythstandynge the kynge wolde not heare them/ but cõmaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech/ Saraiah ỹ sonne of Ezriel & Selamiah ỹ sonne of Abdi-of Ibdiel/ to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scrybe, & vpon Jeremy the Prophete: but the Lorde kepte the out of syght. After now that the kynge had brent the boke/ & the sermons which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy/ sayinge: Take another boke/ and wryte in it all the forsayde sermons: that were wrytten in ỹ fyrst boke/ which Jehoakim the kynge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Jehoakim ỹ kyng of Juda: thus sayeth the Lorde: thou hast brente the boke/ & thoughtest within thy self: Why hast thou wrytten therin/ that the kynge of Babylon shall come, and make thys lande waste, so ỹ he shall make both people & catell to be out of it? Therfore thus ỹ Lord sayeth of Jehoakim the kynge of Juda: There shall none of hys generacyon syt vpon the throne of Dauid. Hys deed corse shalbe cast out/ that the heate of ỹ daye/ & the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym. And I will visyte the wyckednes of hym/ of hys sede/ & of his seruãtes. Moreouer all the euell that I haue promysed them (though they herde me not) will I bringe vpon them/ vpon the inhabytoures of Jerusalem/ and vpõ all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke/ and gaue it Baruch the Scrybe ỹ sonne of Nerias/ which wrote therin out of the mouth of Jeremy: all ỹ sermons ỹ were in ỹ fyrst boke/ whych Jehoakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons/ then before.

¶ Zedekiah succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for him. Jeremy goinge into the lãd of Benjamin/ is taken. He is beaten & put in prison. He is deliuered by kynge Zedekiah.

¶ The .xxxvii. Chapter.

Zedekiah ỹ sonne of Josiah/ which was made kynge thorow Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon/ reigned in the lande of Juda/ in ỹ steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But neither he/ ner hys seruauntes/ ner the people in the land wold obeye ỹ wordes of ỹ Lord which he spake by ỹ Prophet Jeremy. Neuertheles Zedekiah ỹ king sent Jehucal ỹ sonne of Selemiah & Sophoniah ỹ sonne of Maasiah the Preest to ỹ Prophet Jeremy/ saying: O praye thou vnto ỹ Lord oure God for vs. Now Jeremy walked fre amonge the people at ỹ tyme/ & was not put in prison as yet. Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypte: whych when the Caldees that besieged Jerusalem perceaued/ they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy the Prophet/ sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel/ thys answere shall ye geue to the kynge of Juda/ that sent you vnto me for counsell: Beholde/ Pharaos hoste whych is come forth to helpe you/ shall returne to Egypte in to his awne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne/ and fyght agaynst thys cyte, wynne it/ and sett fyre vpõ it. For thus sayeth the Lord: a*Deceaue not youre awne myndes, thinckyng on this maner: nuch the Caldees go now their waye from vs: No/ they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Caldees/ that besege you/ and euery one of the slayne laye in his tente yet shulde they stande vp and set fyre vpon thys cyte. Now when the Hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Jerusalem/ for feare of the Egyptyans armye Jeremy went out of Jerusalẽ towarde ỹ lande of Benjamin, b*to dele certayne bucynes there amõge the people. And when he came vnder Benjamyns porte/ there was a porter, called Jerias the sonne of Selemiah the sonne of Hananiah which fell vpon him, & toke him saying: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremy: It is not so/ I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles Jerias wolde not beleue hym, but brought Jeremy bounde before the Princes. Wherfore the Princes were angrye with Jeremy causyng him to be beate & to be layed in prison in the house of Jonathas ỹ scribe. For he was the ruler of ỹ prison. Thus was Jeremy put in to the dongeon & prison/ & so laye there a longe tyme. Then Zedekiah the kyng sent for him, & called hym/ & asked him quyetly in his awne house/ saying: thinkest thou this bucynes (that now is in hande) cõmeth of the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yee ỹ it doth: & thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered in to the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreouer/ Jeremy sayde vnto kyng Zedekiah: What haue I offended agaynst the/ agaynst thy seruaũtes or agaynst thys people/ ỹ ye haue caused me to be put in prison? Where are your prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you/ & sayde/ that the kynge of Babylõ shulde not come agaynst you & this lande? And therfore heare now/ O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the/ & sende me nomore into the house of Jonathas the Scrybe ỹ I dye not there. Then Zedekiah the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entrye of the prison, & dayly to be geuẽ him a cake of bred & els no dyghte meate, vntyll all the bred in ỹ cyte was eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remayned in the fore entre of the prison.

¶ By the meanes of the rulers Jeremy is put in to a dongeon. At the request of Abedmelech the Chamberlayne the kyng cõmaũdeth Jeremy to be wrought forth of the Dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kynge how he myght escape death.

For thus sayeth the Lorde. Thys cyte (no doute) must be delyuered in to the power of ỹ kynge of Babilō & he also shal winne it. Then sayde ỹ prynces vnto ỹ kinge: Syr, we beseech you let this man be put to death / For thus he discouragyth the handes of ỹ soudyers that be in this cytie / & the handes of all ỹ people / whē he speaketh soch wordes vnto thē. And they lett downe Jeremy wt coardes in to a dongeon / where there was no water / but myre. So Jeremy stack fast in the myre. Now when Abedmelech the Mozian beyng a chamberlayne in the kingꝭ courte / vnderstode / ỹ they had cast Jeremy in to the dongeon: he went out of the kinges house / & spake to ỹ kinge / (which thē sat vnder ỹ poorte of Ben Jamin) these wordes: My lorde the kinge / where as
C these men medle wyth Jeremy the prophet / they do him wronge: Namely / in ỹ they haue put him in prison / there to dye of honger for there is no more bred in the cytye. Then the kinge commaunded Abedmelech ỹ Mozian and sayde: Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt / & drawe vp Jeremy ỹ prophet out of the dongeon / before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men wt him / & went to the house of Amalech / & there vnder an almery he gatt olde ragges & worne cloutes / and lett them downe by a coarde / in to ỹ dongeō to Jeremy.

And Abedmelech the Mozian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes / betwyxte them and the coardes: & Jeremy dyd so. So
D they drewe vp Jeremy wyth coardes & toke him out of ỹ dongeon / & he remayned in the fore entrye of the prison. Then Zedekiah the kynge sent & caused Jeremy the prophet be called vnto him / in to the thirde entrye / ỹ was by the house of the Lord. And the kinge
Jere.xxxvij.c. sayde vnto Jeremy: I will aske ỹ some what but hyde nothynge fro me. Then Jeremy answerde Zedekiah: Yf I be playne vnto the / thou wilt cause me suffre death: yf I geue ỹ councel / thou wilt not folowe me. So the kinge swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremy / sayenge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth / that made vs these soules / I wil not slaye the / ner geue the in to the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto Zedekiah: C Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: If case be, that thou wilt go forth vnto the kinge of Babilons prynces / thou shalt Jere.xxvij.b saue thy lyfe, and this cytie shall not be brēt yee both thou and thy houshalde shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons prynces / thē shall this cytie be delyuered in to the handes of the Caldees which shall set fyre vpon it / & thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremy: I am afrayde for the Jewes / that are fled vnto ỹ Caldees / lest I come in their handes / & so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremy answerde: No / they shal not E betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lord (I beseche the) which I speake vnto ỹ / so shalt thou be well / and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth / ỹ Lord hath tolde me thys planely: Beholde / all the wemen ỹ are left in the kynge of Judaes house / shall go out to the king of Babilons prynces. For they thinke / that thou art deceaued: & that the men in whom thou dydest put thy trust / haue gotten the vnder / & sett thy fete fast in ỹ myre; and gone their waye from the. Therfore all thy wyues wyth their chyldren shall fle vnto the Caldees / & thou shalt not escape their handes / but shalt be the kynge of Babilons prisoner & thys cytie shall be brent. F
Then sayde Zedekiah vnto Jeremye: loke ỹ no body knowe of these wordes / & thou shalt not dye. But yf the prynces perceaue / that I haue talked with ỹ / & come vnto the / saiēge: O speake / what sayde the kinge to the? hyde it not from vs / & we wil not put the to death. Tell vs, we praye ỹ / what sayde the kinge to the? Se thou geue thē thys answere: I haue humbly be sought the kinge / that he wil lett me lye no more in Jehonathās house / ỹ I dye not there? Then came all the prynces vnto Jeremy / and asked hym / And he tolde them / after the maner as the kinge bad hym. Then they helde their peace / for they perceaued nothynge. So Jeremy abode styl in the fore entrie of the prison / vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ Nabuchodonosor besegeth Jerusalem. Zedekiah sleeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust oute. Jeremy is prouyded for. Abedmelech is deliuered frō captyuyte / because of the confydence that he hath in God.

NOw when the cytye of Jerusalem was take, for in ỹ ix.yeare of Zedekiah kyng of Juda in the tenth Moneth/ came Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon and all his Hoste/ and beleged Jerusalē. And in ỹ .xi.yeare of Zedekiah in the fourth Moneth the.ix. daye of ỹ Moneth/ he brake in to the cytte). But the Caldees Hoste folowed faste after them / and tooke Zedekiah in the felde of Jericho/ and brought hym prysoner to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylō vnto Reblath/ that lyeth in the land of Hemath where he gaue iudment vpon hym. So the kyng of Babylon caused the chyldren of Zedekiah & all the nobles of Juda be slayne / before hys face at Reblath. And made Zedekiahs eyes to be put out/ & bounde hym with chaynes/ &

4.Reg.xxv.b Jere.xxxix.b Moreouer the Caldees brēt vp ỹ kinges palace with the other houses of the people/ and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the cytie / and soch as were come to helpe them (whatsoeuer was left of ỹ comē sorte) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caryed thē to Babylon. Jeremy.xliij.a Josue.xxiij.a

THys is the maner how the Lorde intreated Jeremy when Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne had let him go fre from Ramah/ whyther he had led hym bounde amonge all the prysoners that were caryed from Jerusalem & Juda vnto Babylon. The chefe Captayne called for Jeremy/ and sayde vnto hym: The Lorde thy God spake mightely before of the mysery vpō thys place: Now the Lorde hath sent it/ & performed it as he had promysed: For ye haue synned agaynst the Lorde / and haue not bene obedyēt vnto hys voyce/ therfore cōmeth this plage vpon you. If thou canst not be content to dwell alone/ then remayne with Godolias ỹ sonne of Ahicam/ the sonne of Saphan: whom the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernoure ouer the cyties of Juda/ and dwell with him amonge the people / or remayne where so-euer it pleaseth the. So the chefe Captayne gaue him his expenses with a rewarde / and let him go. Then wente Jeremy vnto Godolias the sonne of Ahikam to Mazphah/ and dwelt there with him amōge the people that were left in the lande.

¶ The.xlij. Chapter.

THen all the rulers/and Johanan the of Osaiah came with all ỳ people from ỳ leest vnto the most/& sayde Jeremy.xxi.a Jere.xxxvij.a vnto Jeremy the prophet: O heare oure petition/that thou mayest praye for vs vnto ỳ Lorde thy God/and for the remnaunt/wher of there be very few left of many/as thou seest vs: that the Lorde/thy God may shew vs a waye to go in/& tell vs/what we shulde

do. Then Jeremy the Prophete sayde vnto thē: I haue herde you. Beholde/I will praye vnto God youre Lorde/as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answere the Lord geueth
you/I shall certifye you therof/and kepe no

And after ten dayes came the worde of ỳ
Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Kareah/& all the captaynes of the people that were with him: yee and al the people from the leest to the most/and sayde vnto them: Thus saieth the Lord God of Israel vnto whō ye sent me/to laye forth your not the kyng of Babilon/of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayed of hym/saieth the Lorde: for I will be with you/to helpe you/& delyuer you from hys hande. I will pardon you/I will haue mercy vpon you/and bring you agayne in to youre awne lande.

Neuertheles/yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande/nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God: but wyll saye thus/we wyll not dwell here/but go in to Egypte:
where we shal nether se warre/heare ỳ noyse

Wherfore heare now the worde of ỳ Lorde/
O ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: If ye be wholy purposed to go in to Egypte/and to be there as straungers: the swearde that ye feare/shall ouer take you in Egypte: and the honger wher of ye be here afrayed shal bāge vpon you in to Egypte/and there ye shall dye. For all they/that of sett purpose vnder-take to go in to Egypte/there to ease them selues of their mysery/shall perysh with the swearde/wyth honger and pestylence: not one of them shall remayne/there shall none escape the plage/ỳ I wyll bringe vpon thē.

For thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: lyke as my wrath and indygnacyon is come vpon the inhabytatours of Jerusalē/so shal my displeasure go forth vpon you also/yf ye go in to Egypte: For D there ye shalbe reuyled/abhorred/brought to shame and confusiō: and as for this place/ye shal neuer se it more. The Lorde forbyddeth you (O ye remnaūt of Juda) ỳ ye shall not go in to Egypte.

And forget not ỳ I haue warned you earnestly this daye els shal ye begile your selues.
For ye sent me vnto the Lorde youre God/and sayde: O praye thou the Lord oure God for vs: and loke what answere ỳ Lorde oure God geueth the/that bringe vs agayne/and we shal do therafter. Now haue I shewed/and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lord youre God/for the whych cause he hath sent me to you. If ye wyl not folowe it/be sure/ỳ ye shal perysshe with the swearde/with hon-ger & pestilence: euē in the same place/where youre lust was to go/and dwell.

¶ Johanan carpeth the remnaunt of the people in to Egypte/contrary to the mynde of Jerempe. Jeremy prophecyeth the destruccyon of Egypte.

¶ The. xliij. Chapter.

NOw when Jeremy had ended all ỳ worodes of the Lorde God vnto the A people (for their sakes to whom God had sent him) Izariah ỳ sonne of Osaiah/& Johanan the sonne of Kareah wt all the proude personnes/sayde vnto Jeremy: Thou lyest/the Lorde oure God hath not sent ỳ to speake vnto vs/that we shulde not go in to Egipte/and dwell there: But B Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs/that he myght bringe vs in to ỳ captyuyte of the Caldees: that they myght slaye vs/and caryt vs awaye prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Kareah/and all the captaynes of the hoost/and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely/to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the sonne of Kareah/

and all the captaynes of the hoost / caryed awaye all the remnaunt in Juda / that were come together agayne from the Heythen (amonge whom they had bene scatred) to dwel in the lande of Juda: Men wemen, childre / the kynges daughters: all those that Nabuzaradan the cheke captayne had left w Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam. They caryed
C awaye also the prophet Jeremy / Baruch the sonne of Neriah, & so came in to Egypte: for they were not obedyēt / vnto the cōmaundement of God. Thus came they to Thaphnis.

And in Thaphnis the worde of the Lord happened vnto Jeremy / saying: Take great stones in thyne hande / and hyde them in ẏ bryck wall / vnder the doze of Pharaos house in Thaphnis / that all the men of Juda maye se / and saye vnto them: Thus saieth ẏ Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Beholde / I wyll sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the Jeremy.xlvi.c. kynge of Babilon my seruaunt / & wyll sett his seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd / & he shall spreade his tente ouer them.

And when he commeth / he shall smyte the D lande of Egypte with slaughter / w prisonment / and with the swearde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians goddes / and burne them vp / & take them selues prisoners. Moreouer he shall araye himselfe w the lande of Egipte / like as a shepherde putteth on hys cote, and shall departe hys waye from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the Sunne that is in Egypte: shall he breake in peces / and burne the temples of the Egipcians goddes.

The reproueth the people for their Idolatrye. They that set ryght by the threatenyng of the Lord are chastened. The destruccyō of Egypte & the Jewes therin / is prophecyed.

The xliiij. Chapter.

I This is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy concerninge all the Jewes / whych dwelt in Egypte: at Magdal / at Thaphnis at Memphis / & in the lande of Patures. Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: ye haue sene all ẏ mysery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem / and vpon all the cytyes of Juda: so that this daye they are desolate / and no man dwelling therin: and that because of the great blasphemyes / which they committed / to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacrifyce and worshype vnto straūge goddes: whom nether they / ner ye / ner your fathers haue knowne. Yet be it / I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the pro- Jere.xxv.a. xxix.c. phetes: I rose vp early / I sent vnto them / & gaue them warninge: O do no soch abhominable thinges / and thinges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ner herken / to turne from their wyckednes / and to do nomore sacrifice vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore myne indygnacyon and wrath was kyndled / and it brent vp the cytyes of Juda / the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalē so that they were made waste and desolate / as it is come to passe this daye. Now therfore thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: How happeneth it / ẏ ye do so greate euell vnto youre awne soules / thus to destroye the men and wemen / childzen and babes of Juda: so that none of you is left / because ye prouoke me vnto wrath wyth the workes of your awne handes: when ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egipte where as ye be gone to dwell: That ye might vtterly perishe / and that ye myght be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye now forgotten the wyckednes of your forefathers / the wyckednes of the kynges of Juda & ther wyues the wyckednes that ye youre selues and your wyues haue done in the lande of Juda / in the cytye and in the lande of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sory this daye / ye feare not nether walke ye in my lawe and in my com- E maundementes / that I haue geuē vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: I am stedfastly aduysed and determed / to punysh you / and to rote out all Juda. As for the remnaunt of Amos.ix.b. Juda that purposly wente in to Egipte / there to case them of their mysery: I wyll take thē Jere.xlii.c. and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande and.xliij.a. of Egypte shall they perysh beynge consumed with the swearde and with honger. For from the leest vnto the most / they shall perish with the swearde & with hōger. Moreouer they shalbe reuyled / abhorred / shamed / and confounded. For I will vysett them that dwell in Egipte / as I haue vysited Jerusalem: with the swearde, with honger and with Jere.xxxix. pestilence: So that none of the remnaunt of Juda / which are gone to dwell in Egipt shal be left to come agayne in to ẏ lande of Juda all though they thynke to come thyther agayne / & to dwell there. For none shall come agayne / but soch as are fled awaye.

Then all the men which knewe that their D wyues had offred vnto straunge goddes / and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there / yee and all ẏ people that dwelt there in Egypte in the cyte of Patures / answerde Jeremy / and sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lord / we will in no wyse heare them: but whatsoeuer goeth out of oure awne mouth / that wyll we do: We will do sacrifice / and offre oblacions Jere.xlv.b. vnto the Quene of heauē: lyke as we & our forefathers / oure kynges and oure heades haue haue done in the cyties of Juda / and in the stretes & feldes of Jerusalē. For then had we plenteousnesse of vytayles / then were we in prosperite / and no mysfortune cam vpō vs.

But sens we left to offre, and to do sacrifyce vnto the Quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thinges / and perish with the swearde & honger. Last of all / when we wemen dyd sacrifyce and offred vnto the Quene of heauē / dyd we make her cakes and poure vnto her drynckoffrynges, to do her seruyce / without oure housbandes wylles?

t. Macha. t.b. E

Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people / to the men to the wemen & to all the folcke / which had geuen him that answere: Did not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces that ye / youre forefathers, youre kynges and rulers (with all the people) haue offred in the cyties of Juda / in the stretes & land of Jerusalem: and hath he not consydred this in his minde? In so moch / that the Lorde might no longer suffre the wyckednes of youre inuencyons / and the abhominable thinges which he dyd? Is not youre lande desolate & voyde / yee and abhorred, so that no mā dwelleth therin eny more / as it is come to passe this daye?

iij Reg. xvij.b. Jeremy. ij.c. iij.c.v.e. Baruch. iij.a

Yee this is the cause / that all mysfortune happened vnto you / as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer / Jeremy spake vnto all the people & to all the wemen: Heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda / ye that be in ỳ lande of Egypte: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Ye & youre wyues haue spoken wyth youre awne mouth / the thynge that ye haue fulfylled in dede:

Jeremy. xliij.c

Yee thus haue ye sayde: We will not fayle / but do the thynge that pleaseth vs: we wyll do sacrifyce & poure out drynckoffringes to the Quene of heauen. Purposly haue ye lett vp your awne good meanynges / and hastely haue ye fulfylled youre awne intente. And therfore / heare the worde of ỳ Lorde all Juda / ye that dwell in the lande of Egypte.

Gene. xxii.a

Beholde / I haue swore by my greate name, sayeth the Lorde that my name shall not be rehearsed thorow eny mans mouth of Juda / in all the lande of Egypt: to saye: The Lorde God lyueth / for I will watch / to plage them / and not for their wealth. And all ỳ men of Juda that be in the lande of Egypte / shall perish with the swearde and with honger / vntyll they be vtterly destroyed.

Jeremy. xlij.c.

Neuertheles / those that fled awaye for ỳ swearde / shall come agayne in to the lāde of Juda, but there shall be very fewe of them. And all the remnaūt of Juda / that are gone in to Egypte / there to dwell / shall knowe whose wordes shalbe founde true / theirs or myne. Take this for a token / that I wyll viset you in this place / sayeth the Lorde / and that ye maye knowe / how that I (wythoute doute) will performe my purpose vpō you to punysh you. Beholde / sayeth the Lorde / I wyll delyuer Pharao Hophrea kynge of Egypt in to the handes of his enemyes / that seke after his lyfe: euen as I gaue Sedechiah the kynge of Juda in to the handes of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylō / which sought after his lyfe.

¶ Baruch is reproued of Jeremye.

¶ The xlv. Chapter.

These are the wordes that Jeremy the prophete spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah / after that he had wrytten these Sermons in to a boke at the mouth of Jeremy In ỳ fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell vnto the / O Baruch: In so moch as thou thoughtest thus when thou wast wrytynge Wo is me / the Lorde hath geuen me payne for my trauayle: I haue wearied my selfe w syghynge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therfore cellam, O Jeremy that ỳ Lord sayeth thus: Beholde / The thing that I haue buylded, wyll I breake downe agayne / and rote out the thynge, that I haue planted yee this whole lande. And seekest thou yet promocio? Loke not for it, and despyse it not. For I wyll bringe a mysserable plage vpō all flesh sayeth the Lorde. But thy lyfe will I geue the for a pray where so euer thou goest.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruccyon of Egypte. Helpe uraunce is promysed to Israel.

¶ The. xlvj. Chapter.

Esai. xix.a. xxx.a.

Ete folowe the wordes of ỳ Lorde to the prophete Jeremy / which he spake vnto the Gentyles. These wordes folowynge preached he to the Egyptyans concernyng the Host of Pharao Necho kyng of Egypte / when he was in Charcamis beside the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon slewe him, In the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda.

Ye make redy buckler and shylde / ye goo forth to fight: Ye harnesse youre horses / & set youre selues vpon them: Ye set your salettes fast on / ye bringe forth speares / ye scoure youre sweardes / & put on your brest plates.

But alas, how happeneth it, that I se you so afrayed? why shryncke ye backe? wherfore are your worthies slayne? Yee they rūne so fast awaye/ that none of them loketh behynde hym. Fearfulnesse is fallen vpon euerychone of them sayeth the Lorde. The lightest of fote shall not fle awaye, and the worthyes shall not escape.

B Towarde the North by the water of Euphrates, they shall stomble & fall. But what is he this/ yͭ swelleth vp as it were a floude/ roaring & ragynge like ye streames of waters? It is Egipte that ryseth vp like the floude/ & casteth out the waters with so great noyse.

a* The Caldees spiled the Egyptias/ acȳ floudde of Euphrates, which was towarde ye North: where as yet their horse was wonderous greate/ & their horses & charettes wilny. But ye greater their hoste was ye more cruell was C their slaughter: so dyd the Lorde punyshe their wyckednesse/ geuynge them into the handes of the Chaldees: and therfore calleth the Prophete the daye of their slaughter the daye of the Lordes vengeaūce/ & them a slayne offrynge of the Lorde.

For they saye: We will go vp, & wil couer the earth: we will destroye the cytyes / wyth thē that dwell therin. Get you to horse backe & roll forth the Charrettes/ come forth ye worthyes: ye Morians / ye Libeans with youre bucklers ye Lidians with youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lord God of hoostes/ a daye of vengeaunce / that he maye avenge him of his enemyes. The swearde shall deuoure, it shalbe satysfyed & bathed in their bloude: a* For the Lorde God of hoostes shall haue a slayne offrynge towarde the North/ by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (O Galaad) and bynge tryacle vnto the daughter of Egipte:

But in vayne shalt thou go to surgery/ for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The Heythen shall heare of thy shame, & the lande shalbe full of thy confusyon: for one stronge man shall stomble vpon another / how then shulde they not fall both together.

These are the wordes that ye Lorde spake to the prophet Jeremy/ concerning the hoost of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon/ whych was sent to destroye yͤ lāde of Egypt: Preach out thorow the lande of Egypte and cause it be proclamed at Magdol Mēphys and Taphnis: & saye: Stande styll, make there dye, for the swearde shall consume the rounde aboute.

b* Although he saythe yt they shal (O Egypte) hast thou vsed as a goodly fayre calf for thyne avoūdāce of riches. Therfore as bullockes & oxen are stonge vnder hornettes & prycked forwarde vngodes (or as some call them gaddes) so shall the Babylonyans kynge and pryca tye/ & drive the to flight & ouerthrow yͤ. By hym C shuld come out of the North is vnderstāde the kynge of Babylō & hys hoost

How happeneth it that thy myghtye worthies are fallen? why stode they not fast? Euen because the Lord thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate / for one fell euer still vpon another. One cryed vpon another: Up lett vs go agayne to oure awne people/ and to oure awne natural countre/ from the swearde of oure enemye.

Crye euen there: O Pharao kynge of Egipte, the tyme will bryng redycyon. As truly as I lyue (sayeth the kynge / whose name is the Lorde of hoostes) it shall come as the mount of Thabor/ & as Lybanus yͤt stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egipte make redy thy geer to flyt. For Memphys shalbe voyde and desolate/ so that no man shal dwell therin. b* The lāde of Egipte is like a goodly fayre calf, but one shal come out of the north to pryck her forward. c* Her wagied soudiers that be with her are lyke fat calues.

c* her waged soudyars &c. The meanyng is that the hyred hoste of the Egyptias gathered of the contres that borderyd therō shulde be fearful & weake: & more deyntye & delicious then strōg & manfull/ as men fattened lyke stall fedde oxen: so yͤ they shulde also flye with the Egyptiās whē their myserye dyd wayte vpō & pursuet shulde come.

They also shal fle awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter and the tyme of their visitacyon shall come vpon them.

The crye of their enemyes shall make a noyse as the blast of a trompett. For they shall entre in with their hooste/ and come with axes/ as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shall cut downe her wod / sayeth the Lorde with out eny discrecyō. For they shall be mo in nombre then the grashoppers / so that no man shalbe able to tell them. The daughter of Egipte shalbe confounded, whē she shalbe delyuered in to the handes of the people of the north.

Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Beholde I will vyset that restlesse people of Alexandria / Pharao and Egypte yee both their goddes and their kinges: euen Pharao/ and all them that put their trust in him. Yee I will deliuer thē into the hādes of those/ that seke after their lyues Namely/ in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon/ and in to yͤ power of his seruauntes. And after all these thyngs it shalbe inhabyted as a yore tyme / sayeth the Lorde.

But be not thou afraied (O my seruaūt Jacob) feare not thou/ O Israell. For lo/ I wil helpe the from farre/ and thy sede from yͤ lāde of thy captyuyte. Jacob also shall come agayne and be in rest: he shall be rych/ and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunt) sayeth the Lorde/ for I am with the: and wyll destroye all nacyons/ amonge whom I haue scatred the. Neuerthelesse I wyll not consume the / but chasten the and correcte the: yee and that wͭ discrecyon: nether wyll I spare the as one yͤ were fautlesse.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Philistines. ¶ The. xlvij. Chapter.

These are the wordes / yͤ the Lorde A spake vnto Jeremye the prophete agaynst the Philistines / before that Pharao smote the cytie of Azah. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde / there shall waters aryse oute of the North: & shall growe to a greate floude / runnynge ouer and couerynge the lande/ the cytyes/ & them that dwell therin.

And the men shall crie/ & all they yͤ dwell B in yͤ lande/ shall mourne at the noyse & stampynge of their stronge barbed horses/ at the shakynge of their charettes and at the rombynge of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their children/ so feable and wery shall their handes be: at the same tyme / when he

when he shal be there / to destroye the whole lande of ỹ Philistines. He shall make waste both Tirus / Sidon and all other that are swome vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye all Palestina / and the other Iles, that be conuyded from the countre. Baldnesse is come vpon Azah / Ascalon wyth her other valleys shall kepe her peace.

How longe wylt thou stape / O thou swearde of ỹ Lorde? Turne agayne in to thy sheeth / reste / and leaue of. But how can it ceasse / when the Lorde hym selfe hath geuen him a charge agaynst Ascalon / and raysed it vp agaynst the cyties of the see coast?

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabytes.

¶ The .xlviij. Chapter.

THus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes ỹ God of Israel agaynst Moab: wo be to the citie of Nabo / for it shall be layed waste / brought to confusion & taken. Shee thy strong citie of Kariathaim shalbe brought to shame / & afrayed: Moab shal nomore be had in honoure. Wicked councell shalbe taken vpon Hesebon. Come (shall they saye, let vs rote them oute / ỹ they maye be nomore amonge ỹ nombre of the Gentyles yee that they maye nomore be thought vpõ: Thus the swearde shal persecute the: A voyce shall crye from Horonaim: With greate wastynge & destruccyon / is Moab made desolate.

And this crye shalbe herde in all her cyties. At the going vp vnto Luith there shall aryse a lamentacion: & downe towarde Horonaim / there shall be herde a cruell and a deedly crye: Get you awaye, saue your lyues and be lyke vnto the heeth in the wyldernes. For because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes & treasure, thou shalt be taken. *Chamos with his prestes and prynces shall goo awaye in to captyuite.

The destroyer shall come vpon all cities / none shall escape. The valleys shalbe destroyed / & ỹ feldes shall be layed waste: like as the Lorde hath determined.

b* Make a token vnto Moab that she get her awaye spedely: for her cytyes shalbe made so desolate, ỹ no man shall dwell therin. c* Cursed be he that doth the worcke of ỹ Lord negligently and cursed be he that keepeth backe hys swearde from sheddynge of blonde.

Moab hath euer bene ryche and carlesse from her youth vp / she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell in to another (that is / she neuer went awaye in to captyuite / therfore her taste remayneth / & her sauoure is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cõmeth / sayeth ỹ Lord / that I shall sende her tryllers to tryfle her vp / to prepare a season her vessels: yee her tanckardes rattell and shake to and fro. And Moab shalbe ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel / wherin she put her trust.

Wherfore do ye thyncke thus: we are mighty / and stronge men of warre? Moab shall be destroyed / & her cyties brente vp: her chosen yongemen shal be slayne / sayeth ỹ king / whose name is the Lorde of Hostes. The destruccion of Moab commeth on a pace / and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her / and all they that know her name / shall saye: O howe happeneth it / that the stronge staf & the goodly rodd is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe fro thy glory / and sytte in pouerte. For he that destroyeth Moab / shal come vp to the also / and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer / get the to the strete / & loke about the: aske the that are fled and escaped / and saye: what thynge is happened? O / Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye / tell it out at Arnon / that Moab is destroyed. And mysery shall come vpon the playne lande: Namely / vpon Holon, & Jahazah: vpõ Mephaath & Dibon vpon Nabo and the house of Beblathaim / vpon Cariathaim and Bethgamul / vpon Bethmaon and Carioth, vpõ Bozrah and all the cytyes in the lande of Moab / whether they lye farre or neare.

The horne of Moab shall be smytten downe / & her arme broken / saieth the Lorde. Make her dronken / for she magnyfyed her selfe aboue the Lorde / that men maye clappe their handes at her vomyte / and that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Israell, shalt thou not laugh him to scorne whẽ he is taken amonge theues? Yee because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynst hym / thou shalt be dryuen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cytyes / & dwell in rockes of stone / & become like dowues, that make their nestes in holes.

Is for Moabs pryde / we haue herde of it, she is very hie mynded. I know her stoutnesse her boastinge her arogancy & the pryde of her stomach, sayeth the Lorde. For her furiousnes maye nether vpholde her th strẽgth nether dede. Therfore shall ther mournynge be made for Moab / and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacyõ shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also O Jazer, and for the, O thou vyneyarde of Sabamath.

a* Chamos is the name of the idole & god of ỹ Moabites.

b* After the Greke. Some reade: Geue a flower: or wynges.

c* The Hebr. expounde this of the Chaldees that they shulde hacke to destroye the whole kingdome of the Moabites: as though the text shulde meane thus much: Cursed be he that negligently perfourmeth ỹ vengeaunce of the Lorde, that sparyth these most wycked Moabytes, and that wyth holdeth his swerde frõ sheddynge of their blonde.

Esay.xvi.b. Jerem.xlix.

Num.xxij.a

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer ẏ see/& the braunches of Jazer but vnto ẏ see:
the destroyer shall breake in to thy haruest & grape gaderinge: Wyth & cheare shalbe taken awaye from the tymbrekelde/ and frō
the whole lande of Moab.

There shal be no swete wine in the prelle/
the treader shall haue no stomacke to cȳe/yee there shalbe none to crie vntohim: which a fore tyme were herde frō heshbon to Eleale and Jahaz/ which lifted vp ther voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim:/ that bullock of thre yeare olde. The waters also of Nemrim shalbe dried vp.

¶ Moreouer I wyll make Moab ceasse (saieth the Lorde) from the offrynges & censynge that she hath made vnto her goddes in hye places. Wherfore my hert mourneth for Moab / lyke a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mens sake of the brycke wall my herte mourneth also/ euē as a pype that pipeth a dolefull songe: for they shalbe very fewe /and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen/and al beerdes clypped of: all handes bounde/and al loynes gyrded aboute with sack cloth. Vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab / there shalbe mournyng: For I wyl breake Moab like an vnprofitable vessell saieth the Lord.
O how fearfull is she? O how mourneth she? O how doth Moab hange downe her head / and is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laughinge stocke/and had in derision of all them/that be rounde aboute her.

Deut.xxviii.c
Jeremp.xlix.d

For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde the enemye shal coume flyenge as an Iegle/and spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clymme ouer the walles & wynne the strōge holdes. Then ẏ mighty mēs hertes in Moab shalbe lyke the herte of a woman trauelyng with childe.

Jeremy.xlix.h.

And Moab shalbe made so desolate/that she shall nomore be a people / because she hath sett vp her self agaynst the Lorde.
Feare / pyt / and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayeth the Lorde. Who so escapeth the feare/ shall fall in the pyt: and who so getteth out of the pyt/ shall be taken in the snare.

Esay.xxiiij.c.

For I wyll bringe a yeare of visytacyon vpon Moab/ saieth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder ẏ shadow of Heshbon. For there shall go a fyre out of Heshbon/and a flame from Sion/ and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, both before and behynde.

Wo be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perysh: Yee thy sonnes and daughters shall be led awaye captyue.
Yet at the last wyll I bringe Moab out of captyuite agayne/ saieth the Lorde. Thus farre of the plage of Moab.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes/agaynst Idumea/Damascus/Cedar and Elam.

¶ The.xlix.Chapter.

AS concerninge the Ammonytes/ I thus the Lord sayeth: Hath Israell Ezechi.xxi.d.ẏ
no chyldren / or is he wythout an xxv.a.
heyre? Why hath youre kynge thē Amos.i.a.
taken Gad in? wherfore doth his people dwel in his cyties? Beholde therfore/the tyme cōmeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyll bringe a noyse of warre in to Rabah of the Ammo-nytes. Rahel shalbe desolate/ and her cytyes brent vp: and the Israelytes shall be lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore/saieth the Lorde. Heshbon shall mourne/ for it shal be roted out of the grounde/ sayeth the Lorde. The cytyes of Rabah shall crie out/and gyrde them selues wyth sack cloth: they shall mourne/and runne aboute the walles:
for their kynge shall be led awaye prysoner:
yee his prestes & princes with him.

B Wherfore trustest thou in ẏ water stream̄ that flowe to and fro/ O thou fearce daughter: and thynkest thou art so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no mā shal come to the?

Beholde/ I will bringe a feare vpon ẏ/saieth the Lorde God of hoostes/ frō al those that be aboute the: so that ye shall be scatred euery man from another / and no man shall gather them together agayne that be fled.
But after that/ I will bringe the Ammonytes also out of captyuite agayne.

Esai.xxi.b.

Vpon the Edomytes hath the Lorde of hoostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no more wysdome in Themā? Is there no more good councell amonge hys people? Is their wysdome then turned clene to naught? Gett you hence/turne youre backes/crepe downe in to the depe/ O ye cytesyns of Dedan.

For I will bringe destrucciō vpō Esau/ye and the daye of hys visitacion. If ẏ grape gatherers came vpon the / shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the nyght robbers came vpon the/ shulde they not take so moch
as they thought were ynough?

But I will make Esau bare/ and discōuer his secretes / so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His sede shalbe wasted awaye yee his brethren and his neighbours/ and he himself shall not be left behynde.

Mo/eouer Idumea shall be a wyldernesse: who so goeth by it/ shalbe abashed/ & wonde/ at all her miserable plagȝ. Like as Sodome/ Gomo// and the cyties that laye there aboute/ were turned vp syde downe (sayeth the Lo/de) so shall no body dwell in Idumea/ and no man shall haue his habitacion there. Beholde/ lyke as the Lyon cõmeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jo/dane vnto the grene pastures of Etham/ so wyll I d/yue hym, and make him runne agaynst her. But
a. By the younge man do some vnderstand Alexander the great conquerour/ which ouercame all landes.
who is the* * yong man that I wyll o/deyne therto: Who is lyke vnto me: What is he ỹ wyll stryue with me: what shepherde maye stande in my handes:

At the noyse of their fall the earth shall quake/ ỹ crye of their voyce shalbe herde vnto the redd see. Beholde/ the enemye shall come & flie vp hyther/ lyke as it were an Aegle/ & spr/ede his wynges vpõ Bo/rah. Then shall the hertes of the wo/thyes in Edom be as the herte of a woman trauelyng of chyld. vpon Damascus/ Hemath & Arphad shall come confusion/ fo/ they shall heare euell tydynges: they shall be tossed to and fro lyke ỹ see that can not stãde styll. Damascus shalbe fo/e afrayde/ & shall flie/ tremblynge shall come vpon her. So/owe & payne shall ouer take her as a woman trauelynge of chylde. I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shal consume the palace of Benhadad.

Is fo/ Cedar and the kyngdom of Hazo// whom Nabuchodono/o/ the kyng e of Babylon smote downe/ the Lo/de hath spoken thus vpon them: Aryse/ and get you vp vnto Cedar/ and destroye the people towarde the east. Their tentes & their flockes shall they take awaye/ yee their hangynges and their vessell. Their Camels also shall they carye awaye wyth them. They shall come aboute them on euery syde with a fearfull crye. Ezay.xxi.f.

Fle/ get you soone awaye/ crepe in to caues/ that ye may dwell there: O yee inhabitours of Hazo/ sayeth the Lo/de: fo/ Nabuchodonoso/ ỹ kinge of Babylon hath holden a councell concernynge you/ and concluded his deuyce agaynst you. Aryse/ and gett you vp agaynst ponderych and careles people (saieth the Lo/de) whych haue nether gates ner doo barres/ & that dwell not together. Their Camels shalbe stollen/ & the d/oues of their catell d/yuen awaye.

Mo/eouer/ these that be shaue will I scatre to warde all the wyndes/ and b/inge them to destruccyon: yee and that thoro/ow they/ owne kamyliers/ sayeth the Lo/de. Hazo/ also shall be a dwellynge fo/ D/agons/ and an euerlastynge wyldernesse: so that no body shall dwel there/ and no man shal haue there his habytacion.

These are the wo/des/ that the Lo/d spake to the p/ophet Jeremy concernynge Elam/ in the begynnynge of the reygne of Zedechiah kynge of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lo/d of hoostes: Beholde/ I wyll b/eake the bowe of Elam, & take awaye their strength: & vpon Elam I wyl b/inge the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, and wyl scatre them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people/ but some of Elam shall flie vnto them.

fo/ I will cause Elam to be afrayed of their enemyes and of them that seke their lyues: and wyll b/inge vpon them the indignacion of my w/ath, sayeth the Lo/de. And I wyll persecute them with the swearde so longe til I haue b/ought them to naught. I wyll sette *my stole in Elam, I wyll destroye both the king and the p/inces from thence, sayeth the Lo/de. But in p/oces se of tyme/ I wil b/inge Elam out of captyuytye agayne/ saieth the Lo/de.

b. The Elampites were good bowemen in battell: and therfo/ is their bowe p/ophecied to be b/oke, &c. By which is meant that they shulde be ouercome in battell of their enemyes. & scattered abrode vnto the foure coastes of the earth.

c. That is (as some thinke) Alexander the great conquerour/ that wanne Elam.

The p/ophecyeth the destruccyon of Babylon, & the deliuerance of Israel/ which was in captyuytye.

crie out, kepe no sylence, but saye: Babilon shall be worne: Bel shalbe confounded: and Merodach shalbe ouercome.

Yee their goddes shall be brought to shame and their ymages shall stande in feare. For out of the north there shall come a people agaynst her: which shall make her lande so waste: that no body shall dwell therin: nether man ner beast: for they shall flye & departe from thence. ✱ In those dayes & at that time saieth the Lorde, the children of Israell shal come they & the children of Iuda: wepynge & makinge haste: & shall seke the Lord their God. They shall aske the waye to Sion, thyther shall they turne their faces: & come and hange vpon the: in a couenaunt that neuer shall be broken.

✱ Here the prophecyeth be the coming agayne of the people frō the captiuitie of Babylon after the generall sentence geuen them of kyng Cyrus. & Esdr. i. & vi. & Psal. cxxvi. & Esai. xl. & xli. & Ezech. i. a.

My people hath bene a lost flocke: my shepherdes haue disceaued them: and haue made them go a straye vpon the hilles. They haue gone frō the mountayne to the litle hyll: & forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them: haue deuoured them: & their enemies sayde: We haue made no faute agaynst thē: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yee euen the Lorde which is the bewtie of their righteousnes: and the defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flie from Babilon: & departe out of the lande of the Caldees: and ye shall be as the rammes that go before the flocke. For lo: I will wake vp an hoost of people from the northren lande: & bringe them vpon Babilon: these shal laye sege to it: & winne it: their arrowes shall not mysse: like as a connyng archer shooteth not wronge. And the Caldees shalbe spoyled: & all they that spoyle them: shalbe satisfied: saieth the Lorde: because ye were so chearfull and glad to treade downe myne heretage: & fulfilled youre pleasures: as the calues in the grasse: & triumphed ouer them like the bulles: when ye had gotten the victory. Youre mothers shalbe sore confounded: & they that bare you: shall come to shame. She shall be the leest sett by amōge the nations: voyde waste: & dried vp. No man shal be able to dwell there: for the feare of the Lorde: but she shall be whole desolate. All they that go by Babilon: shall stande still: & be abashed & shall wonder at all her plages.

Jeremy. l. g

Go forth in your araye agaynst Babylon rounde aboute: all ye that can hādle bowes: shute at her: spare no arowes: for she hath synned agaynst the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her vpon her: agaynst her roūde aboute: she shall yelde her selfe: her foūdacōs shall fall: & her walles shall come downe: for it shalbe the vengeaunce of the Lorde. Ye vengeaūce shalbe taken of her: and as she hath done: so shall she be dealt withall. They shal rote out the sower from Babylon: & hym that handleth the sickle in haruest. For feare of the swearde of the enemye: euery man shall gett hym to his awne people: & euery mā shall flye to his awne lande. Israel is a scatred flocke: the Lyons haue dispersed them. First the kyng of the Assyrians deuoured them: last of all this Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon hath broken all their bones.

Jerem. l. a. & li. b.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde: I will visyt the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdome: as I haue visyted the kynge of the Assyrians: and will bringe Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture: that he maye fede vpon Charmel & Basan: and be satisfyed vpon the mount of Ephraim & Galaad. In those dayes & at the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) ye the offence of Israel be sought for: there shall none be founde: Ye men enquere for the synne of Iuda: there shalbe none: for I wyl be mercyfull vnto them: whom I suffre to remayne ouer.

Jere. xlvi. g. Esay. xiiij. b.

Go downe (O thou auēger) in to the enemyes lande: & visyt them that dwell therin: downe with them: and smyte them vpon the backes: sayeth the Lorde: do accordynge to all: that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter & greate murthur: namely on thys maner: How happeneth it: that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus brokē & broken in sonder? How chaunceth it: that Babylon is become a wyldernes amonge the Heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the: and thou art taken: vnawarres art thou trapped & snared: for why: thou hast prouoked the Lorde vnto anger: The Lorde hath opened hys house of ordynaunce: & brought forth the weapōs of hys wrath. For the thing that is done in the lande of the Caldees: it is the Lorde of hoostes worcke.

These thynges shall come vpon her at the last: they shal breake into her priuy chambres: they shall leaue her as bare as stones: that be layed together vpon heapes. They shall so destroye her: & nothinge shalbe left. They shall slaye all their mightie souldyers: & put thē to death. Wo be vnto them: for the daye & tyme of their visitacyon is at hande. Me thynke I heare all ready a crye: of them that be fled & escaped out of the lande of Babylon: which shewe in Sion the vengeaūce of the Lorde oure God the vengeaunce of hys temple: yee a voyce of them: that crye agaynst Babylon: Call vp all the archers agaynst Babylon: pytch youre tentes roūde aboute her: that none escape. Recompence her: as she hath deserued: and accordynge as she hath done: so deale wyth her agayne: for she hath sett vp her selfe agaynst the Lorde: agaynst the holy one of Israel. Therfore shal her of thy winninges. The Lord of hooſtes hath ſwore by himſelf, that he wil ouer whelme the with men lyke gre ſhoppers in nombre/ which with a corage ſhall crie Ilarū Ilarū agaynſt the. Yee euen the Lorde of hooſtes/ & wyth his power made the earth/wyth hys wyſdome prepared the rounde worlde / and with his diſcrecyon ſpred out the heauens. As ſoone as he letteth his voyce be herde, the waters in & ayre warce ſcarce: He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He turneth the lyghtenynges to rayne / he bringeth & wyndes out of their ſecrete places By the reaſon of wyſdome / all men are become fooles. Confounded be all the caſters of ymages: for the thinge that they make is but diſceate, and hath no breath. Vayne is it and worthy to be laughed at: and in the tyme of viſitacyon it ſhall peryſh.

Neuertheles, & portyon of Jacob is none ſoch: but he & made al thynges / whoſe name is the Lorde of hooſtes, he is the rodde of his enherytaunce. Thou breakeſt my weapens of warre/ and yet thorow the I haue ſcatred the nacions & kyngdomes: Thorow the haue I ſcatred horſe and horſe man/ yee the charrettes / and ſoch as ſat vpon them: Thorow the I haue ſcatred man & woman / olde and yonge/ bacheler and mayden. Thorow the I haue ſcatred the ſhepherde and his flocke/ & huſbond man and his catell, the prynces and the rulers. Therfore wyl I reward the citie of Babylō and all her citezyns the Caldees/ with all the euell wyych they haue done vnto Sion: yee that ye youre ſelues ſhall ſe it / ſaieth the Lorde. Beholde, I come vpon the (thou* noyſome hill) ſaieth the Lorde, thou that deſtroyeſt all landes. I wyll ſtretch out my hande ouer the, and caſt the downe from the ſtony rockes: and will make the a brente hill, ſo that nether corner ſtones, ner pinnacles / ner foundacyon ſtones ſhalbe taken enymore out of the, but waſte and deſolate ſhalt thou lye for euer more / ſayeth the Lorde.

* By thys noyſome hyll is vnderſtande Babylō. Why Babylon is called an hyll is before ſhewed in Jere.li.a.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe & trōpettes amonge the Heithen/ prouoke the nacyons agaynſt her / call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Menni/ and Aſcanes agaynſt her: nombre out Taphſar agaynſt her, bringe as greate a forte of horſes agaynſt her / as yf they were greſhoppers. Prepare agaynſt them & people of the Medes with their kinges prynces & all their chefe rulers / yee and the whole lande that is vnder them.

The lande alſo ſhall ſhake & be afrayed/ when the deuyce of the Lord ſhal come forth agaynſt Babilon: to make the lande of Babylon ſo waſte / that no man ſhal dwel ymore therin. The Worthies of Babilon ſhal leaue & parell/ & kepe them ſelues in ſtronge holdes/ their ſtrength hath fayled them/ they ſhalbe like wemen. Their dwellynge places ſhal be brent vp, their barres ſhalbe broken One purſeuaunt ſhal mete another/ yee one poſte ſhal come by another/ to bringe & kyng of Babilon tydinges: & his cytie is taken in on euery ſyde/ & foordes occupyed, the fennȝ brent vp, and the ſouldyers ſore afrayed.

For thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: the daughter of Babilon hath bene in her tyme like as a threſhinge flooze but ſhortly ſhal her harueſt come. Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of Babylō hath deuoured & deſtroyed me, he hath made me an emptye veſſell. He ſwalowed me vp lyke a dragon/ & fylled hys belȝ with my delycates: he hath caſt me out/ he hath taken my ſubſtance away & the thinge that was left me hath he caryed vnto Babilon / ſayeth the daughter & dwelleth in Syon: yee and my blonde alſo vnto the Caldees / ſayeth Jeruſalem. Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll defende thy cauſe/ & auenge the: I will drynke vp her ſee/ & drye vp her water ſprynges.

Babilon ſhall become an heape of ſtones a dwellinge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondrynge / becauſe no man dwelleth there. They ſhall roare together lyke lyons/ and as the yonge lyons when they be angrie/ ſo ſhall they bende thē ſelues. In their heate I ſhal ſett drinke before them, & they ſhalbe dronken for ioye: Then ſhall they ſleepe an euerlaſtinge ſleepe, and neuer wake/ ſaieth & Lorde. I ſhall cauſe them downe to be ſlayne like ſhepe/ like wethers and gootes. O, how was Seſach wonne! O, how was the glory of the whole lande taken! how happeneth it, that Babilon is ſo wondred at amonge & Heathen! The ſee is riſen ouer Babilon/ and hath couered her with his greate waues. Her cytyes are layed waſte / the lande lyeth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a lande where no man dwelleth / and where no man traueleth thorow. Moreouer, I will viſet Bel at Babylon: and the thynge that he hath ſwalowed vp/ that ſame ſhall I pluckе out of his mouth. The Gentyles alſo ſhall runne no more vnto hym / yee and the walles of Babylon ſhall fall.

Esay.xxi.c. Jerem.l.b. Jeremy.li.a. Esay.xlvi.a. Daniel.xiij.b.

O my people/ come out of Babylon/ that euery man maye ſaue his lyfe/ from the fearfull wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynteherted/ & feare not at euery rumoure that ſhalbe herde in the lāde: for euery yeare bringeth newe tydinges/ yee ſtraunge wyckednes and lordſhyppe. And lo/ the tyme cōmeth that I wyll viſet the ymages of Babylon/ and the whole lande ſhalbe confounded/ yee and her ſlayne ſhall lye in the myddeſt of her. Heauē & earth & earth with all that is therin/ shall reioyce ouer Babylō/whē the destroyers shall come vpon her from the North/ sayeth the Lorde.

Like as Babylon hath beatē downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shall there fall many and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde / haste you/ stande not styll, remembre the Lorde afarre of: and thincke vpō Jerusalem/ for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemyes: oure faces were couered wyth shame/ because the straunge alcaütes came into the Sanctuary of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme commeth / that I wyll vysyet the ymages of Babylon / and thorow the whole lande they shall mourne and fall.

Though Babylon clymmed vp into heauē / and kepte her power an hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers/ sayeth the Lorde.

A pyteous crye shall be hearde from Babylon, and a greate misery from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde destroyeth thē/ and when he dryueth out the hye stomack & proude boasting wherwith they haue bene as furyous as the waues of greate waters floudes / and made greate crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babylon) whych shall take her worthyes and breake their *bowes: for God is dyspoced to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficyently to recompence them. Yee (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll make their Prynces their wyse men/ their chefe rulers and all their worthyes dronckē: so that they shall slepe an euerlastynge slepe and neuer wake: Thus sayeth the Kynge/ whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: The thycke wall of Babylō shalbe broken/ and her proude gates shalbe brent vp. And the thynge that the Gentyles & the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and laboure / shall come to naught and be consumed in the fyre.

Thys is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah & sonne of Neriah/ the sonne of Maaliah / when he went towarde Babylon with Zedekiah the Kynge of Juda, in the .iiij. yeare of his raigne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable Prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke all the mysery that shulde come vpon Babylon / yee and all these sermons that be wrytten agaynst Babylon / and gaue Saraiah thys charge: when thou comest vnto Babylon / se that thou reade all these wordes/ and saye: O Lorde, thou art determyned to rote out this place / so that neither people ner catel shal dwel there eny more, but to lye waste for euer: and when thou hast redde out the boke, bynde a stone to it, & cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shall Babilon synche/ & be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble/ that I will bringe vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne.

Thus farre are the preachinges of Jeremy.

Jeremye.l.c.

Jeremy.xlix.a.

* Bowes/ for strengthes/ as in Deut.xb. Where he calleth the strengthes of men of warre the bowes of Israel.

The repeteth the taknynge of Zedekiah. Jerusalem is take of the Chaldees. Zedekiahs sonnes are kylled before hys face/ and hys eyes put oute. The cytye is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem are carped to Babylon. Kyng Jehoiakim is brought forth of prison/ & fed like a kyng.

The.lij.Chapter.

Zedekiah was .xxi. yeare olde/ whē he was made kynge/ & he raigned xi. yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal/ Jeremies daughter of Lobnah. He lued wickedly before the Lorde euen as Jehoiakim dyd. Wherfore the Lorde was angrie at Jerusalem & Juda so longe tyll he had cast thē out of his presence. And Zedekiah fell from the kyng of Babylon. But in ỳ .ix. yeare of his raygne In the tenth Moneth the tēth daye of the Moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon w all his Hoste came before Jerusalē/ & besieged it/ & made them bulwarckes rounde aboute it. And this besiegynge of the cytye endured vnto the xi. yeare of kynge Zedekiah.

I.iij. Regu.xxiiij.b. 2.Para.xxxvj.b

Jere.xxxix.b. 4.Regu.xxv.a.

And in the fourth Moneth/ the ix daye of ỳ Moneth / there was so greate hōger in ỳ cytie: that there were no more vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldyers brake awaye, & fled out of the cytie by night thorow the waye of ỳ porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now the Caldees had compassed the citie rounde aboute/ yet wente these men their waye to warde ỳ wyldernesse.

Jere.xxxix.b. 4.Regu.xxv.a.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them/ and toke Zedekiah the kynge in the felde of Jerycho / when hys hoost was runne from him. So they caryed the kynge awaye prisoner to Reblath / vnto the kynge of Babilon in the land of Hemath / where he gaue iudgment vpon him.

Jere.xxxix.b.

The kyng of Babylō also caused Zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne before his face/ yee & put all the princes of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Zedekiah/ caused him to be bounde w cheynes/ to be caried vnto Babylon: and lett him lye in prison tyll he dyed.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfth Moneth in the xi yeare of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babilon/ Nabusaradan the chefe captaine and the kynge of Babylons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem / & brent vp the house of the Lorde. He brent vp also ỳ kynges palace/ all the houses & all the gorgeous buildynges dynges in Ierusalem. And the whole hoost of the Caldees that were with the chefe Captayne/brake downe all the walles of Ierusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people and soch folke as ℣ yet was left in the cytie, which also were fallen to the Kynge of Babylon/ yee and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne caryed them awaye prysoners. But the poore people of the countre/ dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne leaue in the lande/to occuppe the vyneyardes and feldes. The Caldees also brake the brasen pyllers that were in the house of the Lorde/ yee the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caryed all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye also the Cauldrons/shoucls, flesh hokes/sprynklers/spones/and all the brasen vessell that was occuppyed in the seruyce: ye the basens/colepannes/sprynklers/pottes/ candelstyckes/ spones and cuppes: wherof some were of golde/and some of syluer.

The chefe Captayne toke also the two ℣ pyllers/ the lauer the. xii. brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate/whych Kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessell conteyned so moch metall/that it myght not be weyed. For euery pyller was xviij. cubytes hye/ and the rope that wente 4. Reg. vlt. aboute it, was. xij. cubytes/ and foure fyngers thycke and rounde: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes/ & euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: & vpon the knoppes were whopes/and pomgranates rounde aboute of cleane brasse.

After thys maner were both the pyllers fashyoned wyth the pomgranates/ wherof there were an hundreth and. xcvj. which hanged vpon the whoopes rounde aboute. The ℣ chefe Captayne also toke Sarias the hye preste/and Sophonias that was chefe next him/and the thre keepers of the treasury. He toke out of the cytie a chamberlayne whych was a captayne of the souldyers/ and seuen men that were the kynges seruaūtes/which were founde in the cytie: and Sepher a captayne that vsed to muster the men of warre: with. lx. men of the countre that were take in the cytie. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke/and caried them to the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the Kynge of Babylon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde awaye captyue/out of hys awne lande. Thys is the summe of the people/whō Nabuchodonosor ledde awaye captyue.

In the seuenth yeare of his reygne/he ca- ℣ ried awaye of ỹ Jewes/thre thousand & thre and twenty. In the xviij. yeare Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eight hundreth and. xxxij. persones. In the. xxxij. yeare of Nabuchodonosor Nabuzaradan ỹ chefe Captayne/toke awaye seuen hundreth xlv. Jewes prysoners. The whole summe of all the prysoners/ is foure thousande & syxe hundreth.

In the. xxxvij. yeare after that Jehoacin the kynge of Juda was caryed awaye in the xxv. daye of the. xij. Moneth/Euilmerodach Kynge of Babylon (the same yeare that he reigned) gaue Jehoacin the kynge of Juda his pardon/& let him out of pryson/ & spake louyngly to hym. And set his trone aboue ỹ trones of the other Kynges that were wyth him in Babylon. He chaunged also ỹ clothes of his pryson/ yee and he ate with him all his lyfe longe. And he had a contynuall lyuynge geuen him of the kynge of Babylon/, euery daye a certayne thynge alowed him all the dayes of his lyfe/vntyll he dyed.

IT happened/after Israel was brought in to captyuytie & Jerusalem destroyed/ that Jeremye the Prophete sate wepyng/and sorowfully bewayled Jerusalem: and syghyng & howlynge wyth an heuy & wofull herte/sayde:

The fyrst Chapter.

Aleph.

Alas / how sytteth the cytye so desolate/ that some tyme was full of people? How is she become lyke a wedowe/ which was the lady of all nacyons? How is she brought vnder trybute / that ruled all landes.

Beth.

She wepeth sore in the nyght / so that ỳ teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers / there is none that geueth her eny comforte: ye her nexte frendes abhorre her/and are become her enemyes.

Gimel.

Juda is taken prysoner / because she was defiled: and for seruynge so many straunge goddes / she dwelleth now amonge the Heythen. She fyndeth no rest / all they that persecuted her / toke her / and so she dwelleth amonge her enemyes.

Daleth.

The stretes of Sion mourne / because no man commeth more to the solempne feastes All her gates are desolate/her prestes make lamentacion/her maydens are carefull/ and she her selfe is in greate heuynesse.

He.

Her enemies are fallen vpon her head / & haue put her to shame: because ỳ Lord hath chastened her for her greate wickednes: her childrẽ are ledde awaye captiue before their enemye.

Vau.

All the bewtie of the daughter of Sion is awaye her princes are become like wethers that fynde no pasture. They are drtuẽ awaye before their enemye / so that they haue no more power.

Zain.

Now doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery & dysobedience/ yee the ioye and pleasure ỳ she hath had in tymes past: seyng her people is brought downe thorow the power of their enemie/ & there is no man for to helpe her: her enemies stãde lokyng at her & laugh her Sabbath dayes to scorne.

Heth.

Jerusalẽ synned euer more & more / therfore is she come in decaye. All they ỳ had her in honour/ despyse her: for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yet she syghyth/ and is ashamed of her selfe.

Teth.

Her fylthynes are defyled, she remẽbred not what wolde folowe: therfore is her fall so greate/ and there is no mã to cõforte her. O Lord/ cõsydre my trouble/ for myne enemie hath the vpperhande.

Jod.

The enemye hath put his hande to all the precious thynges that she had/ yee euen before her eyes came the Heathen in & out of ỳ Sanctuarye: whom thou (neuertheles) hast forbydden to come within thy congregacyõ.

Caph.

All her people seke their bred wt heuynes/ and loke what precyous thynge euery man hath/ that geueth he for meate / to saue hys lyfe. Consydre/ O Lorde/ and se/ how vyle I am become.

Lamed.

O ye all that go fore by/ beholde and se/ yf there be eny sorow like vnto myne/ wherwith the Lorde hath troubled me/ in ỳ daye of his feareful wrath.

Mem.

From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones and chastened me: he hath layed a net for my fete / & throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate / so ỳ I must euer be mournynge.

Nun.

The yocke of my trangression is come at the last / with his hande hath he takẽ it vp / & put it aboute my neck. My strẽgth is gone: the Lord hath delyuered me in to those hãds / wherout I can not quyte my selfe.

Samech.

The Lorde hath destroyed all the mightie men / that were in me. He hath proclamed a feast / to slaughter all my best mẽ. The Lord hath trodẽ downe the daughter of Juda / like as it were in a wyne presse.

Ain.

Therfore do I wepe / & myne eyes gussheouite of water: for the comforter that shulde quycken me / is farre fro me. My chyldren are dryuen awaye / for why? the enemie hath gotten the ouer hande.

Phe.

Sion casteth out her handes / and there is no man to cõforte her. The Lord hath layed the enemyes rounde aboute Jacob / and Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous womã / in the myddest of them.

Sade.

The Lorde is ryghteous / for I haue prouoked ucked his* countenaũce vnto anger. O take hede all ye people/ and consydre my heuynes: My maydens and my younge men are led awaye into captyuytye.

Koph.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my Prestes and counceilers, but they perysshed: euen whyle they sought for meate/ to saue their lyues.

Res

Consydre (O Lorde) how I am troubled/ my wombe is dysquyeted/ my herte turneth about in me/ and I am full of heuynes. The swearde hurteth me without / and within I am lyke vnto death.

Sin.

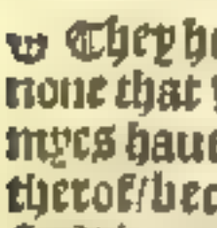
They heare my mournynge / but there is none that wyll comforte me. All myne enemyes haue heard of my trouble/ & are glad therof/ because thou hast done it. But thou shalt brynge forth the tyme / when they also shalbe lyke vnto me.

Thau.

From the hall come all their aduersytye: thou shalt plucke them awaye euen as thou hast plucked me/ because of all my wyckednes. For my sorow is very greate/ and my herte is heuy.

The.ij.Chapter.

Aleph.



Las, how hath the Lorde darckened the daughter of Syon so sore in hys wrath? As for the honoure of Israel / he hath caste it downe from heauen: How happeneth it/ that he remembred not hys awne fote stole when he was angrye?

Beth.

The Lorde hath cast downe all the glory of Jacob without any fauoure: all the stronge places of the daughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath/ and throwen thẽ downe to the grounde: her kyngdome & her Princes hath he suspended.

Gimel.

In the wrath of his indygnacyon he hath brokẽ all the *horne of Israel: he hath withdrawẽ his ryght hande from the enemye: yee a flame of fyre is kyndled in Jacob/ & hath consumed vp all rounde aboute.

Daleth.

He hath bent hys bowe lyke an enemye/ he hath fastened his ryght hãde as an aduersary: and euery thynge that was pleasaunt to se / he hath smyten it downe. He hath poured out hys wrath lyke a fyre/ vnto the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

He. The heir sygnifyeth strength/ power moyste & dry: nature: which al ye lord by his punishmẽt toke from the kyngdome of the Jewes and cõ Jerusalem

The.ij.lib.

He.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemye/ he hath cast downe Israell & all his places: yee all his stronge holdes hath he destroyed/ & fylled the daughter of Juda with moch sorow and heuynesse.

Vau.

Her tabernacle (which was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solẽpne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it soto passe / that the hye solempne feastes and Sabbathes in Syõ/ are cleane forgottẽ. In his heyndisplearure hath he made the kynge & prestes to be despysed.

Zain.

The Lorde hath forsakẽ his awne aulter/ and is wroth with his awne Sanctuary/ & hath geuen the walles of their towres into ẽ hãdes of the enemye. Their enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde / as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

Heth.

The Lorde thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter Sion, *he spred out his lyne/ & drewe not in his hand/ tyll he had destroyed them. Therfore moume the turrettes and the broken walles together.

Teth.

Her portes are castẽ downe to the grounde/ her barres are broken & smytten in sonder: her kynge & princes are caried awaye to the Gentyles. They haue neither lawe ner Prophetes, ner yet eny vysyon from the Lorde.

Jod.

*The Senatours of the daughter Syõ sytt vpon the grounde in sylence: they haue strowed asshes vpon their heades / and gyrded them selues with sack cloth. The maydẽs of Jerusalem hange downe their heades to the grounde.

If I saye vnto the/ concernynge the vngodly man, that (wythout doute) he must dye/ & thou geuest hym not warnynge/ nor speakest vnto hym/ that he may turne from hys euell waye/ & so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man dye in hys awne vnrighteousnes: but hys bloude will I require of thyne hand. Neuertheles/ yf thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked/ and he yet forsake not hys vngodlynesse: then shall he dye in hys awne wyckednesse/ but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Now yf a righteous man go frō his righteousnesse/ and do the thynge that is euell: I will laye a stomblynge blocke before hym, & he shall dye, because thou hast not geuē him warning: yee dye shall he in hys awne synne/ so that the vertue/ which he dyd before/ shall not be thought vpon: but hys bloude will I require of thyne hande.

Neuertheless/ yf thou exhortest the righteous/ that he synne not/ & so the righteous do not synne: then shall he lyue/ because he hath receaued thy warnynge/ and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came ỹ hand of the Lorde vpon me/ and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp/ and go into the felde, that I may there talke wyth the.

So when I had risen vp/ and gone forth into the felde: Beholde/ the glory of the Lorde stode there, lyke as I saw it afore, by the water of Cobar.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came in to me/ which set me vp vpon my fete/ & sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye/ and sparre thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde/ (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the/ to binde the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I will make thy tunge cleue so to ỹ rofe of thy mouth that thou shalt be domme, and not be as a chyder wyth them: for it is an obstynate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the/ then open thy mouth/ and saye: Thus sayeth Lorde God: who so heareth/ let hym heare: who so will not · let hym leaue: for it is an obstynate housholde.

¶ The seige of the cyte of Jerusalem is sygnyfyed. The longe contynuance of the captyuyte of Israel. An hunger is propheced to come in the captyuyte.

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

Thou sonne of man: a* take a tyle stone/ and laye it before the/ and describe vpon it the cytie of Jerusalem, how it is beseged/ how bulworckes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery syde of it; describe also tentes/ and an hoost of men rounde aboute it.

Moreouer/ take an yron pāne/ and set it betwixte the and the cyte/ in steade of an yrō wall. Then set thy face toward it, beseege it/ and laye ordynaūce agaynst it, to wynne it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde/ and laye the sinne of the house of Israel vpō the. Certayne dayes appoynted/ thou shalt slepe vpon that syde/ and beare their synnes. Neuertheless/ I will appoynte the a tyme (to put of their sinnes) & the nombre of the dayes: Thre hundreth and.xc. dayes must thou beare the wyckednesse of the house of Israel. When thou hast fulfylled these dayes lye downe agayne/ and slepe vpon thy right syde. xl. dayes/ and beare the synnes of the house of Juda.

A daye for a yeare/ a daye (I saye) for a yeare will I euer laye vpon the. Therfore set now thy face agaynst that beseged Jerusalem/ and discouer thyne arme/ that thou mayest prophecye agaynst it.

Beholde/ I will laye chaynes vpon the/ that thou shalt not turne the fro me one side to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy syege.

Wherfore/ take vnto the wheate/ barly beanes, growell sede/ Millium and fitches: and put these together in a vessel/ and make the loaues of bred therof/ accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou must lye vpō thy side: that thou mayest haue bred to eate/ for thre hundreth and.xc. dayes.

And the meate ỹ thou eatest/ shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twē-tye sicles euery daye. This appoynted meate shalt thou eate daylye/ from the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt drincke also a certayne measure of water: Namely/ the fyrre parte of an Hin shalt thou drincke daylye from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barly cakes shalt thou eate/ yet shalt thou fyrst strake them ouer with mans dōge/ that they maye se it. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israel eate their defiled bred in the myddest of the Gentyles/ amōge whom I will scatre them.

Then

a* This is a prophecy done by an outward signe/ as in Jeremye. xix. a. When the people are vnwoy of the worde of God/ then are the Prophetes commaunded to vse suche vysyble signes as here to paynte out Jerusalē & the besegynge therof in a tyle stone.

b

Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde/ my soule was yet neuer stayned: for fro my youth vp vnto this houre. I did neuer eate of a deed carcase / or of that which was slayne of wylde beastes / nether cam there euer eny vncleane flesh in my mouth.

Wherunto he answered me / and sayde: Well than / I wyll graunte þ to take cowes donge / for the donge of a man / and to strake the bred ouer with all / before them.

Ezech.v.d. Ezech.xiij.d. xlij.Reg.xxv.a

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man / I wyll myni she all the prouisyon of bred in Jerusalem / so þ they shall weye their bred / and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water / they shall haue a very lytle measure therof / to drynche. And when they haue no more bredner water / one shall be destroyed wyth another / and famych awaye for their wyckednesse.

¶ The ryddle of the hearres / by which is sygnifyed the destruccyon of the people. The causes of the anger of God towarde the people. The Lorde discloseth the ryddle of the hearres.

¶ The.v. Chapter

Thou sonne of man / take the them a sharpe knyfe, namely / a rasoure. Take þ / a shaue the hearre of thy head and beerd: Then take þ scoales & the waight / & deuyde the hearre a sunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cyrte / & cut the other thirde parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thirde parte that remaynerh / cast it in the wynde / & then shewe þ bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same / and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtesy of it / and cast it in the myddest of the fyre: & burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there goo a flame / vpon the whole house of Israell. Moreouer / thus sayde the Lorde God: This same is Jerusalem. I sett her in the myddest of the Heathen & nacions: that are rounde aboute her / but she hath despysed my iudgmentes more then the Gentiles them selues / & broken my commaundemētes more then þ nacyons / that lye roūde aboute her: For they haue cast out myne ordinaunces / & not walcked in my lawes. Therfore / thus sayeth the Lord God: For so much as ye with youre wickednesse farre exceade the Heathen, that dwell rounde aboute you: (For ye haue not walcked in my lawes / nether haue ye kepte myne ordinaūces) Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God.

Leuit.xviij.d.

I wyll also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the wyll I syt in iudgment / in þ syght of the Heathen / & wyll handle the of soch a fashion / as I neuer dyd before / and as I neuer will do from that tyme forth / and that because of all thyne abhominacyons. For the fathers shall be sayne to eate their awne sonnes / & þ sonne their awne fathers. Such a courte will I kepe in the, & the whole remnaunt wyll I scatre in to all the wyndes.

Deut.xxviij.e Leuit.xxvj.e.

Wherfore as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) seyng thou hast defyled my Sanctuary / with all maner of abhominacyons & wyth all thy shamefull offences: For this cause will I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouer se the / nether will I spare the.

One thirde parte within the / shall dye of the pestilence and of honger: Another thirde parte shall be slayne downe rounde aboute the / with þ swearde: The other thirde parte þ remaynerh / will I scatre abroade towarde all the wyndes / and drawe out the swearde after them. Thus I wyll perfourme my indignacion & let my wrath agaynst them / and ease my selfe. So that whē I haue fulfylled myne anger agaynst thē / they shall knowe that I am the Lorde / which with a feruent gelousy haue spoken it. Moreouer I wyll make the waste and abhorred, before all the Heathen that dwell aboute the, & in the sight of all them that go by the: so that whē I punish the in my wrath / in myne anger / & with þ plage of my whote displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacion / shame / a gasyng & wondrynge stocke / amonge the Heathē that lye aboute the. Euē I the Lorde haue spokē it / and it shall come to passe / when I shute amonge them the perlous dartes of honger / which shalbe but death: Yee therfore shall I shute them / because I wyll destroye you. I will encrease hunger / & mynish all the prouisyon of bred amonge you.

Plages and mysery wyll I sende you / yee & wylde beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudshedynge shall come vpon you / and the swearde wil I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lorde / haue sayde it.

¶ He sheweth that the people shalbe plaged for the synne of Idolatrie. He prophecyeth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people / and their deliueraūce. The destruccyon of the frowarde is prophecied.

¶ The.vj. Chapter.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me / sayinge: Thou sonne of man / turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel / that thou mayest prophecie vnto them / & saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God / O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lorde God spokē to the mountaynes, hilles / valleys and dales.

Ezech.xxvbi.e

Beholde / I wyll bringe a swearde ouer you / & destroye youre hye places: I will cast downe youre aulters / & breake downe youre tēples. Youre slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes / and the deed carcases of the chyldren of Israel wyll I cast before their ymages/youre bones wyll I destroye rounde about youre aulters / and dwellynge places.

B The cyties shalbe desolate / the hyllchapels layed waste: youre aulters destroyed/ and broken: youre goddes cast downe / and taken awaye/ youre tẽpels layde euẽ wyth the grounde / youre awne worckes cleane roted oute.

Youre slayne men shall lye amonge you/ that ye maye learne to knowe / how that I am the Lorde. Those that amonge you haue escaped the swearde / wyll I leaue amonge the Gentyles / for I wyll scatre you amõge the nacyõs. And they that escape from you/ shall thyncke vpon me amonge the Heathẽ/ where they shalbe in captiuyte.

Brnch.iij.f

As for that whorysh & vnfaythfull herte of theirs/ wherwyth they runne awaye from me/ I wyll breake it: yee and put oute those eyes of theirs / that commytte fornicacyon with their Idols.

C Then shall they be ashamed/ and displeased wyth their selues / for the wyckednesses and abhominacõs/ which they haue done: and shall learne to knowe/ how that it is not in vayne / that I the Lorde spake / to bringe soch misery vpon them.

The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together / and stampe with thy fote / and saye: Woo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel/ for because of them / they shall perish with the swearde / with hõger and with pestilence. Who so is farre of/ shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande / shall perish with the swearde: and the other that D are beleged/ shall dye of honger.

Thus wyll I fatisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe/ that I am the Lorde/ when youre slayne men lye amonge youre goddes / and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylles & toppes of mountaynes/ amonge all grene trees / amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places/ where they dyd sacrifyce to all their Idols. I wyll stretch myne hande oute vpon them/ and wyll make the lande waste: So that it shall lye desolate and voyde/ from the wilderneſſe of Deblathah forth thorow all their habitacyõs: to learne thẽ for to knowe/ that I am the Lorde.

C The ende of all the lande of Israell shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruccyõ therof. The prophete is cõmaunded to shewe ỳ summe of the euelles that are at hande.

C The.vij. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: The I call/ O thou sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende commeth / yee verely the ende commeth vpon all the foure corners of the earth.

But now shall the ende come vpõ the: for I wyll sende my wrath vpon the, & wyll punish the: accordynge to thy wayes; and reward ỳ after all thy abhominacyõs. Myne eye shall not ouerse the/ nether will I spare the: but rewarde ỳ /accordyng to thy wayes/ and declare thy abhominacyons. Then shal ye knowe/ that I am the Lorde. Ezec.vij.b.ix.c

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/ one mysery and plage shall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the/ is come all ready/ the houre is come agaynst the/ that dwellest in ỳ lãde. B

The tyme is at hande/ the daye of fedicyõ is hard by / and no glad tydynges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore/ I wyll shortly poure out my sore displeasure ouer the/ and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes / and recompence the all thy abhominacyons. Ezec.vij.b.ix.c

Myne eye shall not ouerse the / nether will I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes/ and shewe thy abhominacions / to learne you for to knowe / how that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Beholde / the daye is here / ỳ daye is come, the houre is runne out /  the rodde florisheth / wylfulneſſe wareth grene, malicious violence is growne vp/ & the vngodly waren to a staf. The tyme cõmeth / the daye drawcth nyc: Who so byeth, lett hym not reioyce: he that selleth, let him not be sory: for why. Trouble shall come in the myddest of all rest: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer/ for nether of them both shall lyue. For the vision shall come so greatly ouer all / that it shall not be hyndered: No man also with hys wickednesse shall be able to saue hys awne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blowe / and make you all ready/ but no man shall goo to the battel, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shalbe without/ pestilence & and honger wythin: so that who so is in the felde, shalbe slayne with the swearde: and he Deut.xxxij.b. that is in the cyte, shall perish wyth honger and pestilence.

And soch as escape and fle from amonge them / shall be vpon the hylles / lyke as the doues in the felde: euery one shalbe afrayed/ because of his awne wickednesse.

All

All handes shalbe let downe / and all knees shalbe weake as the water: they shall gyrde them selues with sack cloth / feare shall fall vpō them. Their faces shalbe confounded / * & their heades balde: their syluer shall lye in the stretes / & their golde shalbe despysed: * Yee their siluer & golde maye not deliuer them / in the daye of the fearfull wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satysfye their hōgry soules / neither fyll their entrye bowels therwith: For it is become their owne decaye through their wickednes: because they made therof not only costly Jewels for their pompe & pryde / but also abhominable ymages and Idoles. For this cause will I make them to be abhorred. Moreouer / I will geue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: & to the wycked / for to be robbed / and they shall destroye it. My face will I turne frō them / my treasury shalbe defiled: for ye theues shall go in to it / & suspende it. I will make cleane riddaūce / for ye lāde is whole defyled with vnrighteous iudgement of innocēt bloude / & the cite is full of abhominacyons. Wherfore / I will bringe the most cruell tyrauntes frō amonge the heathen / to take their houses in possessiō. I will make the pompe of the proude to cease / & they shall take in their Sanctuary. When this trouble commeth / they shall seke peace / but they shall haue none. One mischefe & sorow shall followe another / & one rumoure shall come after another: Then shall they seke visyons in vayne at their Prophetes. The lawe shalbe gone from the prestes / & wysdome from the elders. The Kynge shall mourne / the Princes shalbe clothed wyth heuynesse / and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after their owne wayes / & accordynge to their owne iudgemētes will I iudge them: to lerne them for to knowe / that I am the Lorde.

¶ An appearaunce of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalem in the spryte. The Lorde sheweth the Prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel / and chefely of the Prestes.

¶ The. viij. Chapter.

I It happened / that in ỳ sixte yeare the fifth daye of the sixte moneth I sat in my house / & the Lordes of the councell of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpō me. And as I loked vp / I saw as it were a lyckenesse of fyre frō hys loynes downe warde / and from hys loynes vpwarde it shyned maruelous cleare. This similitude stretched out an hande / & toke me by the heartye lockes of my head / & the spryte lyft me vp betwixte heauē & earth: & God brought me in a vysyon to Jerusalem / into the entrye of the * inner porte ỳ lyeth towarde ỳ north: there stode an ymage / with whom ye ỳ hath all thinges in his power / was very wroth.

a The hyll Sion was walled rounde about and that wall which cōpassed it was called the outwarde wall: About the temple was there another wall that was called the inwarde wall: which although it were outwarde frō the temple yet was it inwarde frō ỳ wall which compassed the hyll. b The space betwene the inwarde wall & the temple / was called the inner court. Ther in were many portes / and in the north porte thereof was Ezechiel set: for that place was holy / & therin dyd they vse to worshyp God: but wyth the chyefe of this hateful ymage of Baal / wyth the the Prophete here calleth the ymage of prouocacyon / because it prouoked the Lorde to vengeaūce) had they defyled it: as superstycyō doth commenly defile euell the moost holy-est thinges / such as appeare most goodly.

And beholde, the glory of the God of Israel was in the same place: euē as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, Lyft vp thyne eyes / and loke towarde the north. Then lyft I vp mine eyes towarde the north / and beheld: beside the porte northwarde / there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacyō in the very entryng in. And he sayde further more vnto me: Thou sonne of mā seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greate abhominacyōs that the house of Israel cōmytte in this place: which ought not to be done in my sanctuary? But turne the about / and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacyons. And with that brought he me to the courte gate: & when I loked beholde there was an hole in ỳ wall. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā digge thorow ỳ wall. And whē I dygged thorow ỳ wall, beholde, there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in / & lohe what wycked abhominacyons they do there. So I went in, & sawe: & beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes & beastes all Idoles & abhominacyōs of the house of Israel paynted euery one rounde about the wall. There stode also before the ymages. lxx. lordes of the councell of the house of Israel: & in the myddest of them stode Jaazaniah the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of thē had a censoure in his hāde, and out of the incense, there went a smoke / as it had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā / hast thou sene what the Senatoures of the house of Israel do secretly euery one in his chambre: For they saye: Tush, ỳ Lorde seyth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me. Turne the yet agayne / and thou shalt se the greate abhominacyōs that they do. And wyth that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house, towarde ỳ north. And beholde / there sat women mournynge for * Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene this / thou sonne of man? Turne ỳ about / & thou shalt se yet greater abhominacyons. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: & beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixte ỳ fore entrye & the aulter there were fyue and twenty men that turned their backes vpon the tēple of the Lorde & their faces towarde the east & these worshypped the sonne.

Shortly/whē they stode/ these stode also: And whē they were lyft vp/ the wheles were lyft vp also with them/ for the spyrete of lyfe was in the wheles.

D Ezech.xliij.a Then the glory of the Lorde was lyft vp from the threwode of the temple/ & remayned vpō the Cherubyns: And the Cherubins flacked with their winges/& lyft thē selues vp from the earth: so that I sawe when they went/ and the wheles wyth them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel/ by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued/ ỹ it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces/ and euery one foure wynges/ & vnder their wynges/as it were mens handes. Now the fygure of their faces was/ euē as I had sene them/ by the water of Cobar/ and so was the countenaunce of them: Euery one in hys goinge wente strayght forwarde.

¶ Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. Against these he prophecieth/ he wynge thē how they shalbe dyspersed & broade. The reuerence of the hert commeth of God/ otherwyse can we not walcke in his cōmaundements. He threatneth them that leane vnto their awne councelles.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

A Moreouer/ the spyrete of the Lorde lyft me vp/& brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And beholde/ there were .xxv. men vnder the doze amonge whom I sawe Iaazaniah the sonne of Azur/ and Pheltiah the sonne of Banaiah/ ỹ rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: these men ymagyn mischefe/ and a wycked coūcel take they in this cite/ saying: tush/ there is no destruccyon at hande/ let vs buylde houses: this Jerusalē is the cauldron/ & we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecye vnto thē/ yee prophecie shalt thou vnto them/ O sonne of man. And wyth that fell the spyrete of the Lorde vpon me/ & sayde vnto me: Speake/ thus sayeth the Lorde: B On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I knowe the ymagynacyons of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthured in this cyte/ and filled the stretes full of the slayne. Therfore/ thus sayeth the Lord God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in thys cyte/ are the flesh/ and this cyte is the cauldron: But I wyll bringe you out of it: ye haue drawē out the swerde/ euen so wyll I also bringe a swearde ouer you/ sayeth the Lorde God. I wyll delyuer you out of thys cyte and delyuer you into youre enemyes hande/ and wyll condemne you. Ye shall be slayne in all the coastes of Israel/ I wyll be auenged of you: to lerne you for to knowe/ that I am the Lorde. This cyte shal not be youre cauldron/ nether shall ye be the flesh therin: but in the coastes of Israel wyll I punysh you/ that ye maye knowe/ that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walcked, ner kepte his lawes: but haue done after the customes of ỹ Heathen/ that lye rounde aboute you. Ezech.xviij.d Leuit.xviij.d Deut.xij.d.

Now whē I preached/ Pheltiah ỹ sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe vpō my face/ and cryed with a loude voyce: O Lorde God/ wylt thou then vtterly destroye all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the woorde of the Lorde came to me on this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren/ thy kynsfolke/ and the whole house of Juda/ which dwell at Jerusalē/ saye: They be gone farre frō the Lord/ but the lande is geuē vs in possessyon. Therfore tell them/ thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you farre of amonge the Gentyles/ and scatre you amonge the nacyōs/ & I wyll halowe you but a lytle/ in the landes where ye shall come. Tell them also/ thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyons/ and bringe you from the countrees where ye be scatred/ and wyll geue you the lande of Israel agayne: & thyther shall ye come. And as for all impedymentes and all youre abhomynacyons: I wyll take them awaye. D Ierc.xxxij.f. Ezech.xxxvi.f

And I wyll geue you one hert/ and I will plante a newe spyrete within youre bowels. That stony herte wyll I take out of youre body/ & geue you a *flesshy herte: ỹ ye maye walke in my commaundementes/ and kepe myne ordynaunces/ & do them: that ye maye be my people/ and I youre God. But loke whose hertes are dysposed to folowe their abhomynacyons & wycked lyuynges: those mens dedes wyll I bringe vpon their awne heades/ sayeth the Lorde God. After thys dyd the Cherubyns lyft vp their wynges/ & the wheles wente with them/ and the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. So the glory of the Lorde wente vp from the myddest of the cite/ & stode vpon the mount of the cite toward the east. But the wynde toke me vp/ & in a visiō (which came by the spyrete of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the preseners. Then ỹ vision ỹ I had sene/ * That is/ a mylde/ lofte/ & tractable hert.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde housholde: which haue eyes to se/ and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, & yet heare they not/ for they are an obstinate housholde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere redy to flit/and go forth by fayre daye lyght/that they maye se. Yee euen in their syght shalt thou go from thy place to another place: yf peraduēture they wyll consider/ that they be an vnobedyent housholde. Thy gere that thou hast made redy to flyt wythall/ shalt thou beare out by fayre daye lyght/ that they maye se: and thou thy self shalt go forth also at euen in their syght/ as a man doth when he flitteth. Dygge thorow the wall that they may se/ & beare thorow it the same thyng/ yͤ thou tokest vp in their sight. As for thy self/ thou shalt go forth in the darcke. Hyde thy face yͤ thou se not the earth/ for I haue made the a shewtokē vnto the house of Israel. Now as the Lorde cōmaunded me so I dyd: the gere yͤ I had made redy/ brought I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hande: & when it was darcke/ I toke the gere vpō my shoulders/ and bare them out in their sight.

¶ The.xv.Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me/sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What cōmeth of the vyne amōge all other trees? & of the vyne stock amonge all other tymbre of ẏ groue? Do men take wodd of it/to make any worcke vᵗ all? Or maye there a nayle be made of it / to hange any thynge vpon? Beholde/ it is cast in the fyre to be brent / the fyre consumeth both the endes of it/ the myddest is brent to asshes. Is it mete then for any worcke? No.

Seing then/ ẏ it was mete for no worke/ being whole: moch lesse may there any thing be made of it/when the fyre hath consumed & brent it. And therfore thus sayeth ẏ Lorde God: Like as I cast the vyne into the fyre for to be brent/as other trees of the wod: Euen so wyll I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem/ & set my face agaynst thē: they shall go out frō the fyre/ & yet the fyre shall consume them. wooke, &c. The learned expoũde this whole sentence of the tribulacyon that Israel suffred in Egypte & afterwardes amõgest the Chaldees. After the death of Joseph, when Pharao knewe not Israel, were they most abiect & vyle, & no man had cõpassyon on them. Then was the daye of their byrth. And in like case after destruccõ of Jerusalẽ & their captyuyte at Babylon. At both these tymes were they mothers & helpelesse, excepte their awne strengthe: but were preserued for of God & reteined vp his mercy. The prophet dothe this for the maner of speakinge of the scripture: which sayth of the synner (whan he wyll declare his mercy) that he hath sought & found him, &c. Euen so help yad Israel none in their aduersyte, as in Egypte & Babylon. ¶ But laye ouerwhelmed in their fylthynesses myserye, & were regarded as bastardes & vnmercyfully intreated of all men. Ther was no man but only God that toke thought for the, or had pytie on the: & that only of his mere mercy, without any of their deseruynges.

bloude, frõ thyne awne bloude (I saye) shalt thou be clensed. So I planted the, as ỹ blossome of the felde: thou art growen vp, & waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaũt beutie, thy brestes are come vp, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Now whan I went by the, & loked vpon the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yee euẽ the tyme to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer ỹ, to couer thy dishonestie: yee I made an othe vnto the, & maryed my self wyth the (sayeth the Lorde God) and so thou becamest myne awne. Then washed I the wyth water, & pourged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the wythoute, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made the shues of Taxus leather: I gyrded ỹ about wt white sylke, I clothed the with kerchues I decked the wt costly apparell I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy fore heade, eare rynges vpõ thyne eares, and set a beutifull crowne vpon thyne head. Thus wast thou decked with syluer & golde, & thy raymẽt was of fyne white sylke, of nedle worke & of dyuerse colours.

Thou didest eate nothynge but symnels, honny & oyle: maruelous goodly wast thou & beutiful, yee cuẽ a very Quene wast thou. In so moch, that thy* beuty was spokẽ of amonge the Heythen, for thou wast excellẽt in my beuty, whych I put vpon ỹ (sayeth the Lorde God. But thou hast put confidẽce in thyne awne beuty, & played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast committed whordome, wyth all that wente by the, & hast fulfilled their desyres. yee thou hast takẽ thy garmẽtes of dyuerse colours, & decke thyne aulters therwith, where vpõ thou myghtest fulfyll thyne whordome, of soch a fashion, as neuer was done, ner shalbe. The goodly ornamentes & Jewels which I gaue the of myne awne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens images therof, & committed whordome withall.

Thy garmentes of dyuerse colours hast thou taken and decked them therwith, myne oyle & incense hast thou set before them. Thy meate which I gaue the, as symnels, oyle & hony: to fede the withall, that hast thou set before them, for a swete sauoure. And thys came also to passe, (sayeth the Lorde God:) Thou hast takẽ thine awne sonnes & daughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me: and those hast thou offred vp vnto thẽ, to be their meate. Is this but a small whordome of thine (thinckest thou) that thou slayest my chyldren, and geuest them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in all thy abhmynacions and whordome, thou hast not remembred ỹ dayes of thy youth, how naked & bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne awne bloude. After all these thy wyckednesse, (wo wo vnto the, sayeth ỹ Lord) thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place: yee at the head of euery strete hast thou builded the an aulter. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou hast layed out thy legges to euery one ỹ came by, & multiplied thyne whordome. Thou hast cõmytted fornicacyon with the Egyptyans thy neyghbours, which had moch flesh: and thus hast thou vexed thine whordome, to anger me.

Beholde, I wyll stretch out myne hande ouer the and will mynish thy stoare of fode, and delyuer the ouer in to the wylles of the Philistines thine enemyes, which are ashamed of thy abhomynable waye. Thou hast played the whore also wyth the Assyryans, which myght not satysfie the: yee thou hast played the harlot, & not had ynough. Thus hast thou still cõmytted thy fornycacyon frõ the lande of Canaan vnto the Caldees, and yet thy lust not satisfyed. How shulde I circumcyse thyne herte (sayeth the Lorde God) seynge thou doest all these thinges, thou presumptuous whore: buyldynge thy stewes at the head of euery strete, & thy brodell houses in all places? Thou hast not bene as an other whore, that maketh boaste of her wynning but as a wife ỹ breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in steade of her husbonde. Gyftes are geuen to all other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: and offrest thẽ gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, & to committe fornycacion with the. Is this come to passe with the in thy whordomes contrary to the vse of other women: yee there hath no soch fornicacion bene committed after the, seynge that thou profrest gyftes vnto other, and no rewarde is geuen the: thys is a contrary thynge.

Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot: thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moch as thou hast spent thy money, and discouered thy shame, thorow thy whordome wyth all thy louers, and wyth all the Idols of thy abhomynacyons in the bloude of thy chyldren, whom thou hast geuen thẽ: Beholde therfore, I wyll gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy selfe comen: yee and all them whom thou hast louest, and euery one that thou hatest: and wyll discouer thy shame before thẽ, that they all maye se thy fylthynes.

Moreouer, I will iudge ỹ as a breaker of wedlocke and a murthurer, and recompẽce the thine awne bloude in wrath and gelousy. I wil geue the ouer in to their power, ỹ shal breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy Shulde I make my wrath to be still / take my gelousy from the / be content / & nomore to be displeased: seing thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth / but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges: Beholde therfore / I wyll bringe thyne awne wayes vpō thyne heade / sayeth the Lorde God: how be it / I neuer dyd vnto the / accordyng to thy wyckednesse & all thy abhomynacyons. Beholde / all they that vse comen prouerbes / shall vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: soch a mother / soch a daughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers awne daughter / that hath cast of hir housband & hir childrē: Yee thou art the syster of thy systers / which forsoke their husbandes & their chyldren. Youre mother is a Cethyte / and youre father an Amorite. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria / she and her daughters that dwell vpon thy left hande.

Ezech. xvi. a

But thy yōgest sister that dwelleth on thy right hande / is Sodoma & her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes / ner done after their abhomynacyons: but in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they. As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster wyth her daughters / hath not done soeuell / as thou & thy daughters. Beholde / the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde / fulnesse of meate / aboundaunce & idlenesse: these thynges had she & hir daughters. Besydes that / they reached not their hande to the poore & nedy / but were proude / and dyd abhomynable thinges before me: therfore I toke them awaye / whē I had sene it. Neither hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes / yee thou hast exceaded them in wyckednesse: In so moch that in cōparyson of all the abhomynacyons whych thou hast done / thou hast made thy systers good wemen.

As for their captyuyte / namely the captyuyte of Sodoma & her daughters: the captiuyte of Samaria and her daughters: I will bringe them agayne / so wyll I also bringe agayne thy captiuite amonge thē: that thou mayest take thyne awne confusion vpō the / and be ashamed of all that thou hast done / & to comforte them. Thus thy systers (namely) Sodoma & her daughters: Samaria and her daughters / shalbe brought agayne to youre olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde / & before thy wyckednesse came to lyght: thou wolde st not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma / vntyll the tyme that the Syrias with all their townes / & the Philystynes with all that lye roūd aboute them / brought the to shame & confusyon: that thou myghtest beare thyne awne fylthynes & abhomynacyō sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I shulde (by ryght) deale with the / as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the ooth / & broken the couenaunte. Neuertheles / I wyll remēbre the couenaunt that I made wyth the in thy youth / in so moch yt it shalbe an euerlasting couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes / & be ashamed of thē: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yōger systers / whō I wyll make thy daughters / and that besyde thy couenaunt. And so I wyll remue my couenaunt with the / that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lorde: yt thou mayest thincke vpon it / be ashamed / and excuse thine awne confusyon nomore: when I haue forgeuen the / all yt thou hast done / sayeth ye Lord God.

Speake thou therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Shall this vyne prospere? shall not his rotes be pluckte out /

* By this great Egle hauynge greate wynges is vnderstande the kyng of Babylon with hys great armye.

oute his fruite be broke of, hys grene braū-ches withere & fade awaye: yee whout ether strōg arme or many people, shal it be plucked vp by ỹ rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prospere therfore. Shall it not be dryed vp and wytthered, yee euen in the shutinge out of his blossomes, as soone as the eest wynde bloweth.

D Moreouer, ỹ worde of ỹ Lord cam vnto me saying: Speake to that frowarde houshold: knowe ye not, what these thynges do sygnyfye? Tell them: Beholde, the kynge of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and hys Prynces, and ledde them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges sede, and made a couenaunt wyth hym, and toke an othe of hym: The Prynces of the lande toke he with hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subiectiō, and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from hym, & sent hys Embassadours into Egypt that he myght haue horses and moche people. Shulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth soch thinges? Or shuld he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I lyue saieth the Lorde God: he E shall dye at Babylon in the place where the kyng dwelleth, that made him king: whose othe he hath despysed, and whose couenaūt he hath broken. Neither shall Pharao wyth hys greate host and multytude of people, mayntayne him in the warre: when they cast vp dyches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroye moch people. For seeing he hath despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue hys hande therupon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

F Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I wyll bringe myne othe that he hath despised, and my couenaūt that he hath broken, vpon hys awne head. I wyll cast my net aboute him, and catch hym in my payne. To Babylon will I carye him, there wyll I punnysh hym, because of the greate offence that he made me. As for those that ar frō hym out of the hoost, they shalbe slayne with the swearde. The residue shalbe scatred towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

G Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll also take of a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, & wyll set it, & take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tendre, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely vpon the hye hyll of Siō will I plante it: that it maye bringe forth twygges, and geue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye byde in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches.

a Wp thys braūche vnderstande our Lorde Jesus Christ, of the kynrede of Juda, of whych he came: by the vppermost twygge is vnderstāde Christ: & by the hyll of Siō is figured the churche.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, and sett the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the drye tree to florysh: Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The storye that euery man shall bare his awne synne. To hym that amendeth, is saluacyon promysed. Deeth is prophecyed to the vnrighteous, whych turneth backe from the ryght waye.

¶ The xviii. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, on this maner: what meane ye by this comen prouerbe, that ye vse in the lād of Israel, saying: The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, & the chyldrens teth are set on edge? As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, ye shall vse this byworde nomore in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Lyke as ỹ B father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shall dye. If a man be godly, & do ỹ thynge that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpō the hylles: he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he medleth with no menstruous woman: he greueth no body: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth his mete with the hongrye: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth nothynge vpō vsury: he taketh nothynge ouer: he wythdraweth his hande from doinge wronge: he hādleth faithfully betwixte man & man: he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, & performeth them faythfully: This is a righteous mā, he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

If he now gett a sonne, that is a murthurer, a sheder of bloude: yf he do one of these thinges, (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hilles: he defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore & nedy: he robbeth & spoyleth: he geueth not ỹ detter his pledge agayne he lifteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vpō vsury, & taketh more ouer. Shall thys man lyue? He shal not liue. Seynge he hath done all these abhominacyons, he shall dye hys bloude shalbe vpon him.

Now yf this man get a sonne also, that C seith all his fathers synnes, whych he hath done: and feareth, nether doth soch lyke: Namely he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth, nor robbeth eny man: he dealeth his meate with the hungrye: he cloatheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, nor any thynge ouer: he kepeth

he kepeth my lawes / & walcketh in my cōmaundementes: Thys man shal not dye in hys fathers synne / but shall lyue wythout fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled hys brother / and dyd wickedly amonge his people: lo, he is dead in his awne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore thē shulde not thys sonne beare hys fathers synne?

¶ Therfore: because ỹ sonne hath done equite & right / hath kepte all my cōmaundementes / & done them: therfore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth / shal dye. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence / nether shal the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the righteous shall be upō him / & ỹ wickednes of ỹ wicked shalbe upon him self also. But yf the vngodly wyll

a* Shall not be thought upō. The Sophisters haue a proper solucyō for thys text & such like which testifye ỹ God so forgeueth ỹ he wyll not after call agayne his forgeuenes. If men did penaunce. (saye they) God forgeueth the synne / but not the punishment due unto the same. Scripture proueth punishment (as they ate) not to be vtterly purged for euery synne / when it is forgiuen. Iethro did not so much with god & his holy worde / I wote not what is mockage. If God can & do (as they affyrme) Gyue me punishment due unto my synne so ỹ he nether geue me to much: nor to litell payne therfore / & yet not once thynche on my synne / surely he hath a wōderfull remembraunce. And ỹ he wyll not thynche on it / the text doth here openly afturne awaye frō all his synnes that he hath done / and kepe all my commaundementes / and do the thynge that is equall and right: doutles he shal lyue, & not dye. As for all his synnes ỹ he dyd before / they a* shall not be thought upon: but in his righteousnes that he hath done, he shal lyue. For haue I no pleasure in the death of a synner, saieth ỹ Lorde God: but rather that he conuerte / and lyue.

Agayne: yf the ryghteous turne awaye from his ryghteousnes / and do iniquite accordyng to all the abhominacyons / that the wycked man doth: shall he lyue? All ỹ ryghteousnes ỹ he hath done, shal not be thought upon, but in the fawte that he hath offended withall and in the synne that he hath done / he shall dye.

And yet saye ye: Tush, the waye of ỹ Lorde is not indifferēt. Heare therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye ryght? Or / are not youre wayes rather wicked? When a ryghteous man turneth awaye from hys ryghteousnesse / and medleth wyth vngodlynes: he must dye therin: yee for the vnryghteousnes that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne: when the wycked man turneth awaye from his wickednesse, that he hath done / and doth the thinge which is equall and right: he shal saue his soule alyue. For in so much as he remembreth him selfe, & turneth him from all the vngodlynes that he hath vsed / he shall lyue / and not dye.

And yet saieth the house of Israel: Tush / the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnryght / O ye house of Israell: Are not youre wayes rather vnequall? As for me, I will iudge euery man / accordynge to his wayes O ye house of Israel, saieth the Lorde God. Wherfore be conuerted / & turne you cleane frō all your wyckednesse / so shall there no synne do you harme. Cast awaye frō you all youre vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you new hertes & a new spryte.

Wherfore will ye dye / O ye house of Israel? for I haue no pleasure in ỹ death of him that dyeth, saieth the Lorde God. Turne you then / and ye shall lyue.

For this sophistrye might the kynge geue a man his pardō for theft and after hange him up. For he might saye: Sir I forgaue you youre theft but not your hangynge which is due vnto your theft. Suche pardon wolde they be lothe to haue that fyrst ymagyned it. If the kynge which is but a man / be more faythfull than to deale so with his prisoners / whō he forgeueth: how shulde God then which is our heuenly father / & which is euen goodnes it selfe / haue suche a sotteil / fayned and vnperfect forgeuenes / that shuld after punyth? But her of will I now speake no more / lest ye shulde haue smell / that thys solucyon were ymagyned to pyche mennes purses / thorow Masse pence / Dirige grotes / Trentalles / peace myndes / moneth myndes. &c. Because that although God can & maye forgeue the synne / yet must such thynges obtayne the forgeuenes of the punishmēt due therunto: Or ỹ the priestes benefyces were not sufficient for the to lyue on / without such pyllage: or yet that the poore people coulde by any other meane be inricked from that thynge / wherwyth they / their wyues / their housholde and children shulde lyue.

¶ The .xix. Chapter.

¶ The captyuytye of Iehoahaz & of Iehoacin is sygnyfyed by the lyons whelpes / & by the lyon. He setteth out the prosperitye of the cytye of Ierusalem that is past / & the myserye therof that is present.

Bet mourne thou for the princes of Israel / & saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyoneße amonge the lyons / & norished her yonge ones amōge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp / and it became a lyon: it lerned to spoyle / and to deuoure folke. The Heathen herde of hym / and toke him in their nettes / and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

Now when the damme sawe / that all her hope and cōforth was awaye / she toke another of her whelpes and made a lyon of him: which wente amonge the lyons / & became a fearce lyon: lerned to spoyle and to deuoure folcke: he destroyed their palaces / and made their cytyes waste. In so moch that the whole lande and euery thynge therin / were vtterly desolate, thorow ỹ very voyce of hys rorynge.

Then came the Heathen together on euery syde oute of all countrees agaynst hym / layed their nettes for him / and toke hym in their pytte. So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kynge of Babilon: which put him in prison / that his voyce shulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother / she is lyke a vyne in thy bloude / planted by the water syde: her frutes and braunches are growen out of many waters / her stalkes were so stroge / ỹ mē might haue made staues therof for officers: she grew so hie in her stalkes.

So whan men sawe that she exceaded in heygth & multytude of her braunches / she was roted out in displeasure / and cast downe to the grounde. The East wynde dryed up her frute, her stronge stalkes were broke̅ of / wythered wythered and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wyldernesse/ in a drye and thurstye grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalckes/ which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hath no mo stronge stalckes/ to be staues for offycers. This is a pyteous & mysserable thinge.

¶ The Lorde denyeth that he wyll answere the when they praye/ for the offence of vnkindnes which he here obiecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captyuytye. By the wodd that shulde be brent is signified the vnrenuye of Jerusalem.

¶ The .xx. Chapter.

In the .vij. yeare the .x. daye of the v. moneth/ it happened/ that certayne of the elders of Israel came onto me/ for to aske councell at ỹ Lorde/ & sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man: speake vnto the elders of Israel/ & saye vnto thē: Thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: Are ye come hyther to aske eny thynge at me: As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll geue you no answere. Wylt thou not reproue them (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue thē? Shew thē ỹ abhomynacyons of their forefathers, & tell thē: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye whē I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne hande vpon the sede of the house of Jacob/ & shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: yee when I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them/ and sayde: I am the Lorde youre God/ euen in ỹ daye that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to bringe them out the lande of Egypte/ into a lande that I had prouyded for them/ whych floweth with mylcke & hony/ & is a pleasaũt lande amonge all other: Then sayde I vnto them: Cast awaye euery man the abhomynacyons that he hath before hym/ and defyle not youre selues with the Idoles of Egypte/ for I am the Lorde youre God.

But they rebelled agaynst me/ and wold not folowe me: to cast awaye euery man the abhomynacyons of his eyes/ and to forsake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indygnacyō ouer them/ and to satisfye my wrath vpon them: yee euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wold not do it/ for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the Heathē/ amōge whom they dwelt/ & amōge whom I shewed my selfe vnto them that I wolde bringe thē out of the lande of Egypte. Now when I had carped them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes/ & shewed thē my lawes: which who so kepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them also my holy dayes. to be a tokē betwirte me & thē & therby to know/ that I am the Lorde/ which haloweth them.

And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in the wildernesse/ they wold not walcke in my commaundementes/ they haue cast awaye my lawes (which whose kepeth shuld lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

Then I made me to poure out my indygnacyon vpō them/ & to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it/ for my names sake: lest it shuld be dyshonoured before the Heathen/ from the which I had carped them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernesse/ that I wolde not bringe thē in to the lande/ which I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylcke and hony/ and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes/ and walcked not in my commaundementes/ but had vnhalowed my Sabbathes/ for their herte was gone after their idoles. Neuertheles myne eye spared them/ so that I wolde not vtterly slaye thē/ and consume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: walcke not in the statutes of youre forefathers/ kepe not their ordynaunces/ & defyle not your selues with their idoles/ for I am the Lorde youre God. But walcke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them/ hallowe my Sabbathes: for they are a tokē betwixte me & you/ that ye maye know how ỹ I am the Lorde. Notwythstandynge/ their sonnes rebelled agaynst me also: they walcked not in my statutes they kepte not my lawes to fulfyl thē (which he ỹ doth shall lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indygnacion ouer them/ & to satisfie my wrath vpon them in the wyldernesse. Neuertheles I wythdrewe my hande for my names sake/ lest it shulde be vnhalowed amōge the Heathē/ before whō I had brought them forth. I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse/ that I wolde scatre them amonge the Heathen/ & strowe them amonge the nacyons: because they had not kepte my lawes/ but cast aside my commaũdementes, vnhalowed my Sabbathes/ and lyft vp their eyes to their fathers Idoles. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundemētes not good/ & lawes thorow the which they shulde not lyue/ & I vnhalowed them in their awne gyftes (whē I appoynted for my selfe all their fyrstborne) to make them desolate: that they myght know/ how that I am the Lorde.

C The.xxi. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came to me/ I sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ set thy face towarde Jerusalē/speake agaynst the Sāctuary/ & prophecye agaynst the lande of Israel/ saye to the lande of Israel: C Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/I wyll vpon the/ & wyll drawe my swearde out of ꝑ sheath/& rote out of ꝑ both the righteous & the wycked. Seinge then ꝑ I wyll rote out of the both the ryghteous & wicked/ therfore shall my swearde go out of his sheath agaynst all flesh frō the north to the south: that all flesh may knowe/ how ꝑ I the Lorde haue drawen my swearde out of the sheath/ & it shall not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) ꝑ thy loynes crack withall/yee mourne bitterly for them: And yf they saye/ wherfore mournest thou? Then tell them: for the tidinges that cōmeth/at the which all hertes shal melt/all handes shalbe letten downe/all stomackes shall faynte/ & all knees shall ware feble. Beholde/it commeth & shalbe fulfylled/sayeth the Lorde God.

Agayne/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/saynge: Thou sonne of man/ prophecye/and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: speake/ ꝑ swearde is sharpened & well scoured. Sharpened is it for ꝑ slaughter/ & scoured Scoured that it maye be bright. *O the destroyge of my sonne, shal bring downe all wooe. He hath put hys swearde to the slaughtinge/ y good holde maye be taken of it. This swearde is sharpened & dyght/ that it maye be geue into ỳ hande of ỳ manslayer.

*Some reader: Shal we reioyce ouer oure selues: he despyseth the staffe of my sonne/ and all wod. The Calde readeth: the tribe of my sonne: that is to saye/ the tribe of Juda. Or: Shall ỳ staffe of my sonne despise al wod: That is: Shall the tribe of Juda dyspyse all the other:

Cry (O thou sonne of man) & howle, for this swearde shal smyte my people/ & all the rulers in Israel which with my people shal be slayne downe to the grounde therfore thys swearde. Smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore should not ỳ plage & staf of iudgmẽt come: Prophecy thou sonne of mã, & smyte thine handes together: make ỳ swearde twoo edged, yee make it thre edged, ỳ manslayers swearde/ that swearde of the greate slaughter/ which shal smyte them/ euẽ in their priuychambres: to make them abashed & faynt at the herees/ and in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bright and sharpe is it/ how well dight & mete for ỳ slaughter. Gett the to some place alone/ either vpon the right hand or on the lefte/ whither so euer thy face turneth. I wil smyte my hãdes together also & satisfie my wrothfull indignacion: Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne sayenge: Thou sonne of man/ make the two streetes/ that the swearde of ỳ kynge of Babylon maye come. Both these stretes shall go out of one lande. He shall set him vp a place/ at the heade of ỳ strete shall he chose hym out a corner. Make ỳ a strete/ ỳ the swearde maye come to warde Rabath of the Ammonites/ & to the stronge cytye of Jerusalem. For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turninge of the waye/ at the head of the two stretes: to aske counceli at the sothesayers/ castinge the lottes wyth hys arowes/ to aske councel at the Idols/ and to loke in the lyuer. But the sothesayenge shal poynte to the ryght syde vpon Jerusalem/ ỳ he maye set men of warre, to smyte it wyth a greate noyse/ to crye out Alarum, to sett batelrammes agaynst the gates/ to graue vp dyches/ & to make bulwerkes.

Neuertheles/ as for ỳ sothesayenge/ they shal holde it but for vanite/ euen as though a lesi were tolde them: yee & they them selues remembre their wyckednesse/ so ỳ by ryght they must be taken & wõne. Therfore saieth the Lord God: For so moch as ye youre selues shewe your offence/ and haue opened youre wickednesse/ so that in al youre workes men maye se your synnes: yee in so moch (I saye) ỳ ye youre selues haue made mencion therof ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked gyde of Israel whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende: Thus saieth the Lorde God: take away the myter/ and put of the crowne/ and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted/ and the proude brought lowe. Punysh/ punish yee punysh them wyll I/ & destroye them: and that shall not be fulfylled vntil he come/ to whom the iudgment belõgeth/ and to whom I haue geuẽ it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophecy/ & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God to the children of Ammõ & to them blaspheme/ speake thou: The swearde the swearde is drawen forth alredy to the slaughter/ and scoured that it glysteth (because thou hast loked the out bamptes/ and prophecied lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke/ lyke as vpon the other vngodly/ which be slayne: whose daye came/ whan their wickednesse was full. Jeremy. xlvi. & Ezech. xxi. & Amos. i. G

Though it were put vp agayne in to the sheath/ yet wyll I punysh the/ in the lande where thou was norished & borne/ and poure my indignacion vpon the and wyll blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath/ and delyuer the vnto cruell people/ whych are lerned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy blonde shall be shed in the lande/ that thou mayest be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ The worde of the Lord agaynst Jerusalem for mãslaughter/ & denying due honour vnto their fathers & mothers/ & other wyckednesses. Of the wicked doctrine of the false Prophetes & prestes/ & of their vncapable to vertoulnes. The Tyrannye of rulers. The wickednes of the people.

¶ The. xxij. Chapter.

Moreouer/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ & sayde. thou sonne of mã/ wylt thou not reproue this bloudthurstye cite? Shew them their abhominacions/ and tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O thou cite/ ỳ shedest blonde in the myddest of the/ ỳ thy tyme maye come also: & makest ỳ Idoles to defyle the withall. Thou hast made thy selfe gylty/ in the blonde that thou hast shed: and defyled ỳ in ỳ Idoles/ which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye/ & made ỳ tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore will I make the to be cõfounded amõge the Heathen/ & to be despysed in all the landes/ whether they be nye or farre from the: they shall laugh the to scorne/ thou that hast gottẽ the so foule a name/ & art full of mischefe. Behold/ ỳ rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power/ to shed blonde in the. In the haue they despysed father & mother/ in ỳ haue they oppressed the straũger/ in the haue they vexed the widdowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despised my Sanctuary/ and vnhalowed my Sabbath. Murtherers are there in the/ that shede bloud/ & eate vpon the hylles/ and in the they vse vnhappynesse. Deute. v. & xxvij. c. Deute. xxij. Leui. xviij.

¶ In the haue they discouered their fathers shame/in the haue they vexed wemē in their sickenesse. Euery man hath dealte shamefully with his neyghbours wyfe/& abhominably defyled his daughter in lawe. In ỹ hath euery mā forced his awne syster/ euē his fathers daughter: yee gyftes haue bene receaued in the/ to shede bloude. Thou hast taken vsury and encreace/ thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcīō/ and forgotten me/ sayth the Lord God. Beholde I haue smytten* my handes vpon thy couetousnesse / ỹ thou hast vsed and vpon the bloude whych hath bene shed in the. Is thy herte able to endure it/or may thyhādes defende thē selues/ in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon the?

Ezech.xxi.a.

Euen I the Lord that speake it/wyll bringe it also to passe. I wyll scatre the amonge the Heathen/& strow the aboute in the landes/ & wyll cause thy fylthynesse to ceasse out of the: yee and I wyll haue the in possessyon in the syght of the Heathen / that thou mayest knowe/ that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of ỹ Lord came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of mā/ the house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that shulde be brasse/ tynne/ yron/ & leade/ are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore/ thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: For so moche as ye all are turned in to drosse/ beholde: I wyll bringe you together vnto Jerusalem/ lyke as syluer/ brasse/ yrō/ tynne and leade are put together in the fornace/ and the fyre blowē there vnder to melt them: Euen so wyll I gather you/ put you in together/ and melt you in my wrath & indignacyon. I wyll bringe you together/ and kyndle ỹ fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you/ that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre/ so shal ye also be melted therin: that ye may knowe/ how that I ỹ Lorde haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ tell her: Thou art an vnclene lande / whych is not rayned vpō in the daye of the cruell wrath. thy Prophetes that are in the / are sworne together to deuoure soules/ lyke as a roarynge Lyō/ ỹ lyueth by hys pray. They receaue ryches and good/ and make many widdowes in the. Thy prestes breake my lawe/ and defyle my Sāctuary. They put no difference betwene ỹ holye & vnholye/ nether discerne betwene the cleane & vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my sabbathes/ & I am vnhalowed amōge thē. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauysshynge wolues to shed bloude and to destroye soules, for their awne couetous lucre. As for thy Prophetes they dawbe wyth vntempered claye, they se vanytyes / and prophecye lyes vnto thē/ sayeng: the Lorde God sayeth so/ where as the Lord hath not spoken. The people in the lande vseth wycked extorcyon & robbery. They vexe ỹ poore & nedye & oppresse the straunger agaynst ryght. And I sought in the lande for a man / that wolde make vp the hedge / and sett hym self in the gappe before me in the landes behalfe / that I shulde not vtterly destroye it: but I coulde fynde none. Therfore wyll I poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them / and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their awne wayes will I recompence vpon their heades sayeth the Lorde God.

Ezech.xxii.

¶ Of the forsaycyon/ that is to saye/ of the Idolatry of Samaria & Jerusalē / vnder the names of Oholah & Oholibah. In comparyson of Samaria he sheweth that the forsaycyon of Jerusalē is the filthyer. The destrucyon of Jerusalem is prophecied. The aduoutrye of both the whores is founde oute. Their destrucyon.

¶ The .xxiij. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ There were two wemen / that had one mother: These (whē they were yonge) begānne to playe the harlottes in Egypte. There were their brestes broised/ and the pappes of their maydenhead destroyed. The eldest of them was called* Oholah and her yongest syster* Oholibah. These two were myne. and bare sonnes and daughters. Their names were Samaria / & that was Oholah: & Jerusalem that was Oholibah: As for Oholah she begāne to go a whoring/ when I had taken her to me. She was lett on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: euē the prynces & lordes, that were decked in costly araye: fayre yōge men/ lusty ryders of horses.

* That is/ the tabernacle of hyr: as not belonging vnto me.

* That is/ my tabernacle in her. That is/ I dwelt in her: as in my Sanctuary or holy place.

Thus thorow her whordome / she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assyra: Yee she was madde vpon them / and defyled herself with all their Idols. Nether ceassed she from the fornicacyon, that she bled wyth the Egyptians: for in her youth they laye wt her/ they broised the brestes of her maydenhead / and poured their wordome vpon her. Wherfore/ I delyuered her in to ỹ handes of her louers/ euen the Assirians, whom she so loued. These discouered her shame / toke her sonnes and daughters / and slewe her with the swearde: An euel name gat she of all people/ and they punyshed her.

Her syster Oholibah sawe this/ & destroyed her selfe wt inordynate loue / more then she/ & exceaded her syster in whordome she loued ỹ Assirians (which also laye wt her) namely/ the prynces & greate lordes / that were clothed wt all maner of gorgious apparell / all lusty horsmen and fayre yenge personnes.

Then

Samaria. Then I sawe, that they both were defyled a lyke. But she increased styll in whordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall / the ymages of the Chaldees set forth wyth fresh colours / wt fayre gyrdles about them / and goodly bonettes vpon their heades / lokyng all lyke Pynces (after the maner of the Babylonyās and Caldees in their awne lande / where they be borne) ymmedyatly / as soone as she sawe them / she brent in loue vpon them / & sent messaungers for thē in to the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babylonyās came to her / they laye with her / & defyled her with their whordome / and so was she polluted wyth them. And when her lust was aslaked from them / her whordome and shame was discouered & I sene: then my herte forsoke her / lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also. Neuertheles she vsed her whordome euer ye longer the more / & remembred the dayes of her youth / wherin she had played the harlot in the lande of Egypte: she brent in lust vpō thē / whose flesh was lyke the flesh of Asses / & their sede lyke ye sede of horses. Thus thou hast renued the filthynesse of thy youth / whē thy louers brosed thy pappes / & marred thy brestes in Egypte.

Ezech.xvi.a. Num.xv.d. Ezech.xvi.e

D Therfore (O Aholibah) thus sayeth ye Lord God. I wyll rayse vp thy louers (wyth whō thou hast lastly fyred thy lust) agaynst the / and gather them together rounde about the: namely / the Babylonyans / & all the Caldees: Pecod / Schoa and Coa / with all the Assyrians: all yonge and fayre louers: princes and lordes / knyghtes & gentlemen / which be all good horsmen: These shall come vpon the wt horses / charrettes / & a greate multytude of people: which shalbe harnessed about the on euery syde / with brestplates / sheldes & helmettes. I wyll punysh the before them / yee they them selues shall punysh ye / according to their awne iudgemēt. I wyll put my gelousy vpō the / so that they shall deale cruelly with the. They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares / and the remnaūt shall fall thorow the sweard. They shall carye awaye thy sonnes and daughters / & the residue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shall stripe the out of thy clothes / and cary thy costly Jewels awaye with them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy filthynesse & whordome / which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalt turne thyne eyes nomore after thē / & cast thy mynde nomore vpō Egypt. For thus sayeth E the Lorde: beholde / I wyll delyuer ye into the handes of them / whom thou hatest: yee euē into the handes of thē / with whom thou hast fulfylled thy lust / wyych shall deale cruelly with ye: All thy labour shalt they take with them / and leaue the naked & bare / & thus the shame of thy fylthy whordome shall come to lyght. All these thynges shall happen vnto the / because of thy whordome / wherby thou hast bled amonge the Gentiles / with whose Idoles thou hast defyled thy self. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy syster / therfore wyll I geue the her cuppe in thy hande.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalt drynke of thy systers cuppe / how depe and large so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne / & had as greatly in derysyon / as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronckennes & sorowe / for ye cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cuppe of destruccyon & wastinge: the same shalt thou drynke / and suppe it out euen to the dregges / yee thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it / and so teare thyne awne brestes: For euen I haue spoken it / sayeth the Lorde God.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For F so moch as thou hast forgottē me / & cast me aside / so beare now thyne awne fylthynesse & whordome. The Lord sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man wylt thou not reproue Oholah & Oholibah? Shewe them their abhomynacyons: namely / ye they haue brokē their wedlocke / & stayned their hādes with bloude: yee euē with their idoles haue they cōmytted aduoutry / & offred them their awne chyldrē (to be deuoured) whō they had borne vnto me. Yee and this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuary in that same daye / & haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne their chyldrē for their Idoles / they came the same daye into my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo / this haue they done in my house. Besyde all this / thou hast sent thy messagers for men out of farre countrees: & when they came / thou hast bathed / trymmed and set forth thy self of the best fashyon: thou satest vpon a goodly bed / & a table spred before the: wher vpō thou hast set myne incense & myne oyle.

4.Reg.xvii.a. Ezech.xvi.c. Gen.xx.d.

Then was there greate cheare with her / & G the men ye were sent frō farre countrees ouer the desert / vnto these they gaue bracelettes vpon their handes / & set gloryous crownes vpō their heades: then thought I: no doute / these will vse their harlotry also with yonder olde whore. And they wēte into her / as vnto a comen harlot: Euen so wente they also to Oholah & Oholibah those fylthy wemen.

O ye all that loue vertu & ryghtuousnes / Leui.xx.b. iudge thē / punysh them: as aduoutrers and Ezech.xvi.b murtherers ought to be iudged & punyshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke / and the bloude is in their handes. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: bringe a greate mul-tytude of people vpon them / & make them be scatred & spoyled: these shall stone them / and goze them with their sweardes. They shall laye their sonnes and daughters and burne vp their houses with fyze.

Thus wyll I destroye all soch fylthynes out of the land: that all wemen may learne / not to do after your vnclennesse. And so they shall laye youre fylthynesse vpō youre awne selues / & ye shalbe punyshed for the synnes, that ye haue cōmytted wyth youre Idols: & ye shall knowe that I am the Lozde.

The proueth the fyrying of Jerusalem by a parable of a fethyng potte. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe being dead / which he after expoundeth.

¶ The.xxiiij. Chapter.

In the.ix.yeare, in the.x. Moneth / the.x.daye of the Moneth / came the wozde of the Lozde vnto me / saying: O thou sonne of mā / wryte vp the name of this daye / yee euē the houre of this present daye: when the kyng of Babylon set hym selfe agaynst Jerusalē. Shew that obstinate housholde a parable / & speake vnto thē: Thus sayeth the Lozde God: Set ỳ a pott / set it on / & poure water in to it: put al the peces together in it / all the good peces: the loyne & the shoulder / & fill it with ỳ best bones. Take one of ỳ best shepe / & an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well / and let the bones seth well therin.

Ezech.xxiij.a. Ezech.xlv.

B With that sayde the Lozde God on thys maner: Wo be vnto the bloudy cyte of the pott / wher vpō the rustynesse hangeth / & is not yet scoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it / one after another: there neade not lottes be cast therfoze / for the bloude is yet in it. Vpon a playne dryze stone hath she poured it / and not vpon the grounde / that it might be couered wt dust. And therfoze haue I letten her poure her bloude vpō a playne dryze stony rocke / because it shulde not be hyd / & ỳ I myght brynge my wzothfull indygnacyon and vengeaunce vpon her.

Num.xvj.c. Amos.v.a.

C Wherfoze / thus sayeth ỳ Lozde God: O / wo be vnto that bloudthurstye cyte / for whō I will prepare a heape of wodde: beare thou ỳ bones together / kyndle thou ỳ fyze / seeth the flesh / let all be well soddē / that ỳ bones maye be suckte out. Moreouer / set the pot emptye vpō the coales / ỳ it maye be warme & the metall hote: that the fylth & rustynesse maye be consumed. But it wyll not go of there is so moch of it: the rustynesse must be brent out. Thy fylthynesse is abhominable / for I wolde haue clensed the / but thou woldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be purged frō thyne vnclennesse / tyll I haue poured my wzothfull indignacyō vpon the. Euē

D I the Lozde haue so deuysed: Yee it is cōme therto alredy / that I will do it. I wyll not go backe / I will not spare / I wil not be intreated: but accozding to thy wayes & ymaginacyons / thou shalt be punyshed / sayeth the Lozde God. And the wozde of ỳ Lozde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of mā / beholde I wyll take awaye * the pleasure of thyne eyes wt a plage: yet shalt thou nether mourne / ner wepe / ner water thy cheks therfoze: thou mayest mourne by thy self alone / but vse no deadly lamentacyon. Holde on thy bonet / and put on thy shues vpon thy fete / couer not thy face / & eate no mourners bred. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the mozninge / and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte mozow / I dyd as I was commaunded. And ỳ people sayde vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs / what that signifieth / whych thou doest: I answered them, the wozde of the Lozde came vnto me / sayinge: Tell the house of Israel / thus sayeth the Lozde God: beholde / I will suspende my sanctuary: euē the glozy of your power / ỳ pleasure of your eyes / and the thinge that ye loue. youre sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left / shall fall thozow the swerde.

* That is / thy wyfe.

E Like as I haue done / so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyde youre faces / ye shall eate no mourners bred: youre bonnettes shall ye haue vpon youre heades / & shues vpō youre fete. Ye shall nether mourne ner wepe / but in youre synnes ye shalbe sorowfull / & one repēte with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shewtokē. For loke as he hath done so (whē this commeth) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe that I am the Lozde God. But beholde / O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them their power / their ioye & honoure / the lust of their eyes / the burthen of their bodyes: namely / their sonnes and daughters: Then shall there one escape / & come vnto the / for to shew the. In that daye shall thy mouth be opened to him / which is escaped / that thou mayest speake / & be nomoze domme: Yee and thou shalt be their shewtokē / that they maye knowe / how that I am the Lozde.

They shall eate thy frute, & dryncke vp thy mylcke. As for * Rabath, I wyll make of it a stall for camels, & of Ammon a shepefolde: and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

* That is Philadelphia.

B For thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: In so moch as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete, yee reioyced in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel wyth delyte: beholde, I wyll stretch out myne hande ouer the also, and delyuer the, to be spoyled of the Heathen, and rote the out from amonge the people, & cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes: yee I wyll make the be layed waste, that thou mayest know, that I am ỹ Lorde.

IT happened, that in the.xj. yeare, ỹ the fyrst daye of the Moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: A ha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, & she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my bely full. Yee therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde O Tyre, I wyll vpon the. Thy daughters ỹ are in the lande, shall be slaye with the swearde: but agaynst the, he shall make bulworckes & graue vp dyches aboute the, & lyft vp hys shylde agaynst the. Ezech.xxvi. prolog.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: O thou sonne of man/ make a lamentable complaynte vpon Tyre/ and saye vpon Tyre/ which is a porte of the see/ that occupyeth with moch people/ & many Iles: thus speaketh the Lord God: O Tyre/ thou hast sayd: what/ I am a noble citie: thy borders are in the myddest of the see/ & thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount Saunr. From Libanus haue they take Cedre trees, to make the mastes: & the Okes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy bordes haue they made of yuory/ & of costly wod out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte small nedle worcke out of ỹ lande of Egypt/ to hange vpō thy mast: & thy hāgynges of yalow sylke purple, out of the Iles of *Elisah. They of Sidon and Arnad were thy maryners and the wisest in Tyre were thy shypmasters. The eldest and wysest at Ebal were they, that mended and stopped thy shyppes. All shyppes of the see with their shypmē occupyed their marchan-

Ezechiel. xxxix. xxxxy. THe worde of the Lord came more ouer vnto me saying: thou sonne of man/ prophecye & speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Mourne/ & wo worth this daye. for the daye is here, the daye of the Lorde is come: the darcke daye of the Heathē the houre is at hande/ & swearde commeth vpon Egypte. E Assur is there also with his cõpany / and their graues rounde aboute / which were slayne & fel all with the sweard/ whose graues lye beside him in the lowe pytte. His comens are buried rounde aboute hys graue: all together wounded and slayne wyth the sweard/ which mẽ afore tyme brought feare in to the lande of the lyuynge.

There is Elam also with all his people/ & their graues rounde aboute: which all beyng wounded and slayne with the sweard / are gone downe vncircuncised vnder the earth/ wlych neuertheles sometyme brought feare in to the lande of the lyuynge: for the wlych they beare their shame / with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Their burial is geuen them and al their people / amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are roundeaboute al them/which be vncircūcised / & wyth thē that be slayne thorow the sweard: for seyng that in tymes past they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed/ they must now beare their awne shame / wt them that go downe to the pytte/ & lye amōg them / that be slayne.

There is Melech also and Tubal/ & their people/ & their graues roūde aboute. These al are amōge the vncircūcyled/ & thē that be slayne with the sweard, because afore tyme they made the lande of ỹ lyuyng afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge ỹ worthyes / and vncircuncyled Gyauntes? which wyth their weapens are gone downe to hell: whose sweardes are layed vnder their heades/ whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes / they haue brought feare in to the lande of the lyuinge? Yee amōge the vncircūcised shalt thou be destroyed/ and lepe with them / that perysshed thorow the sweard.

G There is the lande of Edom wt her kinges and princes also / which with their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the sweard / yee amonge the vncircuncyled/ & them which are gone downe in to the pytte. With their feare & strength they are come to confusion / and lye there vncircuncyled/ amonge those that be slayne wt the sweard: and beare their awne shame/ with them that be gone downe to ỹ pytte. Now whan Pharao seyth this / he shal be comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne with the sweard: both Pharao and all hys hoost / sayeth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in ỹ lande of the lyuyng. But Pharao and al hys people shal lye amonge the vncircuncised/ & amonge them that be slayne with ỹ sweard sayeth the Lorde God.

And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue Ezech.iij.c. made the a watchman vnto the house of Israell: that where as thou hearest eny thynge out of my mouth / thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto ỹ wicked thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye: & thou geuest hym not warnynge / that he maye bewarre of hys vngodly waye: then shall the wycked dye in hys awne synne / but hys bloude will I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles yf thou warne the wycked of hys waye/ to turne frō it/ where as he yet will not be turned from it then shall he dye because of hys synne / but thou hast delyuered thy soule.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Ye saye thus: Oure C offences and synnes lye vpon vs/ and we be corrupte in them: how shulde we then be reserued vnto lyfe? Tell them: As truly as I lyue / sayeth the Lorde God/ I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked/ but moch rather that the wicked turne from hys waye & lyue. Turne you / turne you from your vngodly wayes / O ye of the house of Israell. Why/ wherfore will ye dye? Ezech.xviij.e.

Thou sonne of man/ tell the chyldren of thy people: The ryghtuousnes of ỹ righteous shall not saue hym / whan soeuer he turneth awaye vnfaythfully: Agayne/ ỹ wickednesse of ỹ wicked shal not hurt him/ whan soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse. Ezech.xviij.d.

And the ryghtuousnesse of the ryghtuous shall not saue hys lyfe / whansoeuer he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghtuous / that he shall surely lyue/ and so he trust to his awne ryghtuousnesse / and do synne: then shall hys ryghtuousnesse be nomore thought vpon / but in but in the wyckednesse that he hath done he Ezech.xviij.b. shall dye. Agayne/yf I saye vnto ỹ wycked:

Jere.xvij.a. thou shalt surely dye: & so he turne from his synnes/ & do the thinge that is lawfull and ryght: In so moch that the same wicked man geueth the pledge agayne/ restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery/ walcketh in ỹ cõmaundementes of lyfe/ & doth no wrõge:
a. How the Scripturers & the vngodly mock out this text lohe before in ỹ xviij. Chapter.
Then shall he surely lyue & not dye. Yee the synnes that he hath done, a* shall neuer be thought vpõ. For in so moch as he doth now the thinge that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people saye:
Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght/
where as their awne waye is rather vnright.

When the righteous turneth frõ his righteousnesse/ & doeth ỹ thinge that is wycked/
he shall dye therfore. But yf ỹ wycked turne Ezech.xviij.f. from his wyckednesse, doing the thinge that Roma.v.a. is lawfull & right/ he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not equall.
O ye house of Israel/ I will iudge euery
one of you after his wayes.

In the.xij. yeare/ the.v. daye of the.x. mo-neth of oure captyuyte/ it happened/ ỹ one which was fled out of Jerusalem/ came vnto me/ and sayde: the cytye is destroyed. Now the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the euenyng afore this mã (which was escaped) came vnto me/ & had opened my mouth/ vntyll the morowyng that he came to me: yee he opened my mouth/ so that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me/ & sayde: Thou sonne of man/ these ỹ dwell in the wasted lande of Israel/ saye:
Abrahã was but one man/ & he had the lande in possessyon: now are we many/ & the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: In the bloude Leuit.xix.d. Deutero.xij.c. haue ye eaten youre eyes haue ye lyft vp to Idoles, and haue shed bloude: shall ye then haue the lande in possessyon?

Ye leane vpon youre swordes/ ye worcke abomynacyõs/ euery one defyleth his neghbours wyfe: & shall ye then possesse the lãde?
Saye thou these wordes vnto them: Thus b* As truely as I lyue is an othe which the Lorde commenly vseth/ when he pronounceth any thyng. Nume. xiiij.d.e. sayeth the Lorde God: b* As truly as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wyldernesse/ shalbe slayne w the swoard: what so euer is vpõ the feld, wyll I geue vnto ỹ beestes to be deuou-red: those that be in stronge holdes & dennes/shall dye of the pestylence. For I wyll make the lande so desolate and waste/ & the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shalbe so waste that noman shall trauayle therby.

Ezech.xxv.c. Then shall they lerne to knowe/ that I am the Lorde/ when I make the lande waste and desolate/ because of all their abomyna-cyons/ that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man/ the chyldrẽ of thy people that talcke of the/ by the walles & in the dores of their houses/ sayinge one to another: Come/let vs heare/ what worde is gone forth from the Lorde: These come vnto the/ after the maner of a greate people: yee my people syt downe before the/ and heare thy wordes/but they do not therafter: for in their mouthes they shewe them selues/ as though they were feruent/ but their herte goeth after their awne couetous lucre. And as a balet ỹ hath a swete tune/ and is pleasaunt to synge/ so shalt thou be vnto thẽ: thy wordes shal they heare/ but they wil not do therafter. When this commeth to passe (for lo/ it cõmeth in dede) thẽ shal they knowe/ that there hath bene
a prophet amonge them.

Agaynst Bysshoppes and curates that despyse the flock of Christ & feade their awne. The Lorde sayeth that he will vyset his dysparpled flocke/ & gather them together. He reproueth the malyce of certen of the flocke. He promiseth the true Shepherde Christ/ and with hym peace.

The.xxxiiij. Chapter.

And the worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of mã/prophecy agaynst ỹ shepherdes of Israel/ prophecy & speake vnto thẽ: Ezech.xix.a.
Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto the Jere.xxiij.b & l. shepherdes of Israel/ that fede them selues. xxij.a.
Shulde not the shepherdes fede ỹ flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fatte/ ye haue clothed you with the wol: the best fedde haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not norished.
The weake haue ye not holden vp/ the sicke
haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not Luc.xij.b.
bounde together/ the out castes haue ye not brought agayne: & lost haue ye not sought/but churlishly and cruelly haue ye ruled thẽ. 1. Petr.v.a.
Thus are they scatred here and there wythout a shepherde: yee al the beastes of ỹ felde deuoure them/ & they go astraye.

My shepe go wanderinge vpon all mos-taynes and vpon euery hye hyll. Yee they be scatred abrode in all feldes/ and there is no man/ that careth for thẽ/ or seketh after thẽ.
Therfore O ye shepherdes/ heare the worde of the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue/ for so moch as my shepe are robbed & deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the felde/ hauyng no shepherde: and seing that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe/ but fede them selues only/ and not my shepe: Therfore heare the worde of the Lord C O ye shepherdes: Thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God:
Beholde/ I my self wyll vpõ the shepherdes/and requyre my shepe from their handes/ & make them ceasse from fedynge of my shepe:
yee the shepherdes shall fede them selues no more: For I wyll delyuer my shepe out of their mouthes/ so that they shal not deuoure

them after this. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will loke to my shepe my selfe, & sehe the. Like as a shepherde amonge the flocke seketh after ỳ shepe that are scattered abroade/euen so will I seke after my shepe/ & gather them together out of all places/where they haue bene scatred in ỳ cloudy and darcke daye. I will bryng them out from all people / and gather them together out of al landes. I wil bryng them in to their awne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel/by the ryuers, and in all ỳ places of the countre. I will fede thē in right good pastures & vpon ỳ hie mountaynes of Israel shal there foldes be. There shal they lie in a good folde / & in a fat pasture shall they fede: euē vpon ỳ mountaynes of Israell.

John.x.a. Hebr.xiij.d. 1.Pet.v.c.b.d.

I will fede my shepe my selfe / and bryng them to their rest / sayeth the Lorde God.

Luc.xiij.d. John.x.a.

Soch as be lost / will I seke: soch as go astraye/ will I bringe agayne: soch as be wouñded/ will I bynde vp: soch as be weake / will I make stroge: soch as be fat & well lyking/ those will I preserue, and fede them with the thinge that is lauefull. And as for you (O my shepe) sayeth the Lorde God: I will put a difference amonge the shepe / amonge the wethers and the goates. Was it not ynough for you, to eate vp the good pasture / but ye must treade downe the residue of youre pastur with your fete also? was it not ynough for you to drincke cleare water, but ye must trouble the residue also with youre fete?

Mat.xxv.c.

Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate the thynge/that ye haue troden downe w̄ youre fete/ & todrycke it/that ye w̄ youre fete haue defiled. Therfore thus sayeth ỳ Lord God vnto them: Beholde / I will seuer the fatt shepe from the leane: for so much as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes & shoulders / and runne vpon them with youre hornes/ so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scatred thē abrode. I will helpe my shepe / so that they shall nomore be spoyled: yee I will dyscerne one shepe from another. I will rayse vp vnto them one only shepherde: euen my seruaunt* Dauid he shall fede them/ & he shal be their shepherde. I the Lorde will be their God, and my seruaunt Dauid shall be their prince: Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

* Christ here and in many other places is called Dauid because he was loked for of the Iewes to sytt on the seate of Dauid. After in the xxxvij.c.

Moreouer / I will make a couenaunt of peace with them & dryue all cruel beastes out of the lande: so that they maye dwell safely in the wyldernesse and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune & prosperite will I geue them/ and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyll. A prosperous shower & rayne will I sende them in due season/that the trees in the wodde maye bring forth their frutes/ & ỳ grounde her increase. They shalbe safe in their land/ & shall knowe/that I am the Lorde/ which G haue broken their yocke / and deliuered thē oute of the handes of those / that helde them in subiection.

They shal no more be spoyled of the Heathen/ nether deuoured w̄ the beastes of ỳ lande: but safely shall they dwell / and no mā shall fraye them. I will set vp an excellent plante for them/so ỳ they shall suffre no more hunger in ỳ lande/nether beare the reprofe of ỳ Heathen eny more. Thus shall they vnderstande/ ỳ I the Lord their God am w̄ them/ & ỳ they (euē the house of Israel) are my people/sayeth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke/ye are the shepe of my pasture: & I am youre God/sayeth the Lorde God.

Psal.xc.a.b.c.

¶ The destruccyon that shall come on the hyll Seir/ that is/ on the Idumeans / because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

¶ The xxxv. Chapter.

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/sayīg: Thou sonne of man/ turne thy face towarde ỳ mount Seir/ prophecy vpon it/ & saye vnto it: Thus sayeth the Lorde God) Beholde (O thou mount Seir) I will vpon the/ I will reach out myne hande ouer the/ yee waste and desolate will I make ỳ. Thy cyties will I breake downe/ & thou shalt lye voyde: ỳ thou mayst knowe/ how ỳ I am ỳ Lorde. For so much as thou beareste an olde enemyte agaynst the chyldren of Israel/ and with a cruel hēde hast make them afrayed/ what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne: Therfore/  as truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God I will prepare the vnto bloude, yee bloude shal folow vpō the: seing thou layest wayte for bloude/ therfore shall bloude persecute ỳ. Thus will I make the mount Seir desolate & waste/ & bringe to passe/ that there shall no man goo thyther/ ner come from thence. Hys mountaynes will I fyll wyth hys slayne men: thy hylles, dales & valleys shall lye full of thē/ ỳ are slayne with the swearde. I will make the a perpetuall wyldernesse/ so that no man shall dwell in thy cyties: ỳ ye maye knowe/ how that I am the Lorde.

B  As before in the xxxvij. Chap. f.

And because thou hast sayd: what/ b* both these nacyons and both these landes must be myne & I will haue thē in possession where as ỳ Lord was there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue / I will handle the accordynge to thy wrath and gelousy/ lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly w̄ thē: that I maye be knowen amonge them, how I haue punished the. Yee and that thou also mayest be sure/ ỳ I ỳ Lord haue herde all thy despytefull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayīg:

¶ The xxxvj. Chapter.

Eyech.vi.c. I Thou sonne of man, prophecie vpō ỹ mountaynes of Israel/ & speake:
Heare the worde of the Lorde / O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Because youre enemyr hath sayde vpon you: Ha, the hye euerlastynge places are now become ours: prophecy therfore / and speake: thus sayeth the Lord God: Seynge ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde, & become a possessyon vnto ỹ residue of the Gentiles/ wherby haue brought you in tomens mouthes & vnto an euell name amonge the people: Therfore/heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mou taynes of Israel: Thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God vnto the mountaynes & hilles/ valleys and & dales, to ỹ voyde wild. medes & desolat cytyes wherby are spoyled, and had in derysyon of euery syde, amonge the residue of ỹ Hea-
B then: Yee euen thus sayeth the Lorde God:
In the fyre of my gelously haue I taken a deyse, agaynst the residue of the Gentiles, & Eccl. xxxv.a. agaynst all Edom. wherby haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possessiō: which also reioyced from their whole hert wt a dys-pitefull stomacke/ to waste it, & to spoyle it.

Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israel speake vnto ỹ mountaynes and hilles/to valleys & dales thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God
Beholde, this haue I deuysed in my gelousy & terrible wrath: for so moch as ye haue suffred reproffe of ỹ Heathē, therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: I haue sworne, that ỹ Gentyles which lye aboute you, shal beare your confusyon them selues. And as for you(O mountaynes of Israel) ye shal shute out your braūches, & bringe forth youre fruite to my people of Israel for it is hard by that it wil come. Beholde/ I come vnto you / and vnto you will I turne me/ that ye maye be tylled and sowen.

I wil sende you moch people/which shal-be all of the house of Israel: the cytyes shalbe inhabited, & the decayed places shalbe repay-red agayne. I wyl prouyde you wt moch people and catell/which shall increase & bringe frute. I wil restore you also to your old estate & shewe you more kindnes then euer ye had before: wherby ye shall knowe/that I am the Lorde. Yee people wyll I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israell) which shall haue the in possessiō/ & thou shalt be their inheritaunce so that thou shalt nomore be wythout them.
Agayne thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moch as they saye vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men / nether destroye thy people eny more / sayeth the Lorde God.
D And I will not suffre the / for to heare thyne awne confusion amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reproffe of the nacions/ ner cast out thyne awne peo ple enymore/ sayeth the Lorde God.

Moreouer/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ sayeng: O thou sonne of man/ whē ỹ houle of Israel dwelt vpō their awne groūd they defiled them selues wt their awne waies & ymagynacyons: so that in my syght they?
waye was lyke the vnclennesse of a men-struous woman. Wherfore I pourrd my wrothfull displeasure vpon them / because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande/& because of their Idols/ wherwith they had defyled them selues. I scatred thē also amōg the Heathen, so ỹ they where strowed about in the landes. According to their wayes and after their awne inuencyons / so dyd I pu-E nysh them.

Now when they were gone vnto the Heathen / & come in amonge them they dyshоnoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God/ & must go out of their awne lāde? Then spared I my holy name, which the house of Israel had di-shonoured amonge the Gentyles / to whom they came. Therfore tell ỹ house of Israell:
Thus sayeth the Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israell) but for my holy names sake / wherby ye dyshonoured amonge the Heathen when ye came to them.
Therfore I will halowe my greate name a-gayne/ wherby amonge the Gentiles is euell spokē of: for ye youre selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And ỹ Gentiles shal knowe that I am the Lorde / whan I am honoured in you before their eyes/ sayeth ỹ Lord God.

As for you/ I wyll take you from amōge the Heathen/ and gather you together out of all countrees / and bringe you agayne in to your awne lande. Then wyll I poure cleare water vpō you/ & ye shalbe clene: yee frō all your vnclennesse and frō al your Idols shal
I clense you. A new herte also will I geue you / &

 To dyshonour the name of the Lorde is to blaspheme ỹ name of god amōge the vnbeleuyng / as when we shewe an appearaunce of goodnes & teach good doctryne / and yet lyue vnfaythfully. Ro.ij.d.

you /and a new spyrite will I put into you:
✠ As for that stonye herte, I will take it out of Deute.xxx.d. youre body/and geue you a fleshly herte. I will geue my spyrite amonge you, and cause you to walcke in my commaundemētes, to kepe my lawes and to fulfill them.

And ye shall dwell in the lande/that I gaue to youre forefathers and ye shalbe my people/& I wilbe youre God. I wyll helpe you out of all youre vnclennesse. I wyll call for the corne, & will increase it & will let you haue no honger. I wyll multiplye the frutes of the trees & the increase of ỹ felde for you/
so that ye shall beare no more reproke of hōger amōge the Heathē. Then shall ye remē-bre your awne wicked wayes/& youre imagynacyons/which were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at your awne selues/
by reason of youre synnes & abhominacyōs.

G But I wyll not do this for youre sakes (sayeth the Lord God)be ye sure of it. Therefore/O ye house of Israel/ be ashamed of your synnes. Moreouer/thus sayeth ỹ Lord God:what tyme as I shall clense you frō all youre offences, then will I make the cytyes to be occuppyed agayne/& wyll repayre the places ỹ be decayed. The desolate lande shal be buylded agayne/ which afore tyme laye waste in the sight of all thē that wente by.
Then shall it be sayde:this waste lande is become lyke a gardē of pleasure/ & the voyde/desolate and broken downe cytyes/ are now strong/and fensed agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye roundeabout you/shall knowe that I am the Lorde/which repayre that was broken downe/ and plante agayne/that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it/and will do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde agayne of ỹ house of Israel/
& do this for them: I shall increase them as a Ieremy.l.a. flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke & the flocke of Ierusalem are in the hye solempne feastes: so shall also the wylde wasted cyties be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The prophecieth the bryngynge agayne of the people beinge in captyuyte. He sheweth the vnyon of the ten trybes with the two. Christ is the kynge of the Christen people alone/and the onlye euerlastyng shepherde therof.

The.xxxvij. Chapter.

THe hande of the Lorde came vpon me/& caryed me out in ỹ spyrite of the Lorde/ and let me downe in a playne felde/ ỹ laye full of bones/& he led me round about by them: & beholde/the bones that laye vpō the felde/ were very many/ & marueilous drye also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered:
O Lorde God thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpō these bones, & speake vnto them: O ye dreye bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyll put breth into you, that ye may lyue: I will geue you synowes/ & make flesh grow vpō you/& couer you ouer with skinne: & so geue you Gene.ij.b.
breth that ye may lyue/ and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

So I prophecyed/ as he had cōmaunded 1.Corin.xv.c.
me. And as I was prophecyinge/there came a noyse and a greate mocyon/so that the bones ranne euery one to another. Now when I had loked beholde, they had synowes and flesh grewe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with skynne/but there was no breth in thē. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou tawarde the wynde:
prophecy/& speake to ỹ wynd: Thus saieth the Lorde God: Come(O thou ayre)from the foure wyndes, and blowe vpon these slayne/that they may be restored to lyfe. So I pro-phecied as he had cōmaunded me: then came ỹ breth into thē, & they receaued lyfe/& stode vp vpō their fete/a marueilous greate sorte.

Moreouer/he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man/ these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde/they saye: Oure bones are dryed vp/oure hope is gone/we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecye thou/ & speake vnto Ezec.xxxvij.b thē: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/I will opē youre graues(O my people)& take you out of youre sepulcres/& bringe you in to the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye know that I am the Lord, when I opē your graues/& bringe you out of thē. My spyrite also wyll I put in you/& ye shall lyue: I wil set you agayne in youre awne lande/ and ye shall knowe, ỹ I am the Lorde/which haue sayde it/& fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me/sayinge: thou sonne of man/take a stycke & wryte vpon it: Vnto Iuda & to the chyldrē of Israel his companyons. Then take another stycke/& wryte vpon it: Vnto Ioseph ỹ stocke of Ephraim/ & to all the housholde of Israel his companyōs. And thē/take both these together in thyne hande/ so shall there be one stycke therof. Now ỹ the childrē of thy people saye vnto the: wylt thou not shewe vs/what thou meanest by these? Then geue thē this answere: thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God: be-holde/I will take the stocke of Ioseph, which is in the hande of Ephraim & of the tribes of Ose.i.b.
Israel his felowes/& will put thē to ỹ stocke of Iuda, & make thē one stocke/& they shall be one in my hande. And ỹ two stycke where vpon thou wrytest/ shalt thou haue in thyne hand, that they may se/& shalt saye vnto thē:

Gog and Magog.

F Thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde / I wyll take awaye the chyldren of Israel frō amonge the Heathē / vnto whō they be gone / & wyll gather them together on euery syde / & bringe them agayne into their awne lāde: yee I wyll make one people of them in the lande / vpon the mountaynes of Israel / and they all shall haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples from hēceforth / neyther be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shall also defile thē selues nomore with their abhominacyōs / Idoles / & all their wickednes doinges. I will helpe them out of all their dwelling places wherin they haue synned: and wyll so clense them / that they shalbe my people / & I their God.

Dauid my seruaunt shalbe their king / & they all shall haue one shepherde only. They shall walcke in my lawes / & my cōmaundemētes shall they both kepe and fulfil. They shall dwell in ỹ lande / that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruaūt / where as youre fathers also haue dwelt. Yee euē in the same lāde shall they / their chyldren / & their childers children dwell for euermore: and my seruaūt Dauid shalbe their euerlasting prince. Moreouer / I wyll make a bonde of peace wyth them / which shalbe vnto them an euerlastynge couenaunt. I wyll settle thē also / and multiply them / my Sanctuary wyll I set amōge thē for euermore. My dwellynge shalbe wyth them / yee I wyll be their God / and they shall be my people. Thus the Heathen also shall knowe / that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel: whē my Sāctuary shalbe amōge them for euermore.

¶ He prophecyeth that Gog and Magog shall come with an appointed hoste in to the lande of promes. Their entent. He reherceth that the cōmyng of Gog was before prophecied of the prophetes. The destruccyon of hym.

¶ The xxxviij. Chapter.

I And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me / sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in the lande of Magog / whych is the chefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: prophecy agaynst him & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O Gog thou chefe prince Mesech & Tubal: beholde I wyll vpon the / and wyll turne the aboute / and put a bytt in thy chawes: I wyll bringe the forth & all thyne hoost / both horse and horsmen / which be all weapened of the best fashō: a great people / that handle altogether speares / shyldes / and swordes: the Perses Moryans & with them the Lybians / which all beare shyldes & helmettes: Gomer and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma out of the north quarters / and all his hoostes / yee & moch people with the.

Ezech. xxxix.
Apocalip. xx. c.

B Therfore prepare the / & set thy self in araye with all thy people / that are come vnto the by heapes / and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be vysited / and in the latter yeares thou shalt come in to ỹ lande / that hath bene destroyed with the swearde / & now is replenysshed agayne with dyuerse people vpō the moūtaynes of Israel / which haue longe lyen waste. Yet they be brought out of the nacyons / & dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wether / to couer the lande / and as it were a darcke cloude: thou wyth all thyne hoostes / & a greate multytude of people with the.

Moreouer / thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall many thinges come in to thy mynde / so that thou shalt ymagen myschefe / & saye: I will vp to ponder playne lande / seing they lyt at ease / and dwell so safely, for they dwell all without any walles / they haue nether barres nor dores / to spoyle them / to robbe thē / to laye hande vpon their so well inhabyted wyldernesses: agaynst that people / that is gathered together frō amōge the Heathen / whych haue gotten catell and good / and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba / and Dedan / and the marchaūtes of Tharsis wyth all their worthies / saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? hast thou gathered thy people together / because thou wylt spoyle? to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye catell and good: and to haue a greate praye?

D

Therfore / O thou sonne of man / thou shalt prophecye / and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God: In that daye thou shalt knowe / ỹ my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place out of ỹ north partes: thou & moch people with the / whych ryde vpon horses / wherof there is a greate multytude & an innumerable sorte Yee thou shalt come vpon my people of Israell / as a cloude to couer the lande. This shal come to passe in the * latter dayes: I wyll bringe ỹ vp in to my lande / that the Heathen maye knowe me / when I get me honoure vpō the O Gog / before their eyes.

* Of the latter or last dayes & what they signifye ye haue in Esa. ij. a.

E

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou art he / of whom I haue spoken afore tyme / by my seruaūtes ỹ prophetes of Israel / which prophecyed in those dayes & yeares / that I shulde bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme / when Gog commeth vp in to the land of Israel (sayeth the Lorde God) shall my indygnacyon go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousy and hote displeasure I haue decrysed that there shalbe a greate trouble in the land of Israel at that tyme. The very fishes in the see / the foules of the ayre / the beastes of the felde / and all the men that are vpon

the earth / shall tremble for feare of me.

G The hilles also shalbe turned vp syd downe/the stayres of stone shal fall/and all walles shal syncke to the grounde. I will cal for a swearde vpon thē in all my mountaynes / sayeth the Lorde God: so that euery mans swearde shal be vpon another. With pestylence and bloude will I punysh hym: for my rayne & hayle stones/fyre & brimstone/wil I cause to rayne vpō hym & all his heape yee & vpon al that greate people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnifyed / honoured / and knowne amonge the Heathen: & they maye be sure/how that I am the Lorde.

The sheweth the destruccyō of Gog & Magog. The graue of Gog & of his hoste. He prophecieth that Gog & his company shalbe deuoured of byrdes and beastes. Wherfore the house of Israel is wasted. Their bringynge agayne from captyuyte is promysed.

¶ The xxxix. Chapter.

Ezech. xxviij.

THerfore O thou sonne of mā/prophecye agaynst Gog/and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/O Gog: thou chefe prince at Mesech and Tubal/I wyl vpon the/& turne the about/& carie & forth/& leade the frō the north partes/& bring the vp to ỹ mountaynes of Israell. And so: thy bowe I wyll smyte it out of thy left hande / and cast thyne arowes out of thy ryght hande. Thou with all thyne heape and all the people that is wt the must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israell. Then will I geue the vnto the foules & wylde beastes of the felde / to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it/sayeth the Lorde God.

Into Magog / and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the Iles: will I sende a fyre / & they shal know/that I am the Lorde. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be knowne amonge my people of Israel: and I will not lett my holy name be euell spoken of enymore: but the very Heathē also shal knowe/that I am the Lorde / the holy one of Israel. Beholde/it commeth/& shalbe fulfilled in dede/sayeth the Lord God. This is ỹ daye wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in ỹ cyties of Israel/shall go forth & set fyre vpō the weapens/& burne them: shyldes & speres bowes and arowes, dysses & clubbes: seuen yeares shal they be burnynge therof/ so that

C they shall els bringe no stickes from ỹ felde/ nether haue nede to hewe downe eny out of the wodde: For they shal haue weapēs ynow to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled them sayeth the Lorde God.

At the same tyme will I geue vnto Gog/ a place to be buried in/in Israel: euē the valley/where thorow men go from the east to ỹ see warde. Those that trauayle therby/shall abhorre it. There shall Gog and all hys people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of ỹ people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shal the house of Israel be burienge of them that they maye clense the lāde. Yee al ỹ people of the lande shall burye them. O it shall be a glorious daye/ when I gett me that honoure sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordene men also to be deed buriers/euer going thorow the lande/& appoynte them certayne places to bury those in/ whych remayne vpō the felde/ỹ the lande maye be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seke/and that by.monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the land/where they se a mās bone/they shal set vp a toke bi it/till the deedburiers haue buried it also/in ỹ valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the citie shalbe called.* Hamonah: Thus shal they make the land clene.

* That is multitude.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Speake vnto all the foules & euery byrde/yee and to all the wylde beastes of the felde: heape you together and come / gather you rounde about vpon my slaughter/that I haue slayne for you: euen a greate slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israell: eate flesh/and drincke bloude. Ye shal eate ỹ flesh of the worthies, and drynke the bloude of the prynces of the lande: of the wethers/ of the lambes of the goates/and of the oxen that be al slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your belyfull/and drynke bloud/tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter / whych I haue slayne vnto you. Fill you at my table/with horses & stronge horsmen: with captaynes and al mē of warre/sayeth the Lorde God.

I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentyles / that all the Heathen maye se my iudgement/that I haue kepte/and my hand whych I haue layed vpon them: that ỹ house of Israell maye knowe/ how that I am ỹ Lorde theyr God / from that daye forth. And the Heathen shall knowe / that where as the house of Israell were led in to captyuite: it was for their wickednes sake/because they offended me.

For the whych cause I hyd my face from them/and delyuered them in to the handes of their enemyes that they myght all be slayne with the swearde. Accordinge to their vncleanesse and vnfaithful dealinges/ so haue I entreated them / and hyd my face from them.

F

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Now will I bringe agayne the captiues of Jacob and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell/ & be gelous for my holy names sake. All their confusiō and offence that they haue done agaynst me/shall be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in their lande/ that no man shall make them afrayed. And when

I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered thē togeth-er out of their enemyes rādes, & am prayfed in them before many Heathen: then shal they knowe / that I am ỹ Lorde their God / which suffred them to be led in to captyuyte amonge the Heathē / but now haue brought them agayne in to their awne lande / and not left one of them ponder.

After that / will I hyde my face nemore from them / but wil poure out my spyrete vpō the house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. Ezech. xxxix.o

¶ The restoringe of the cytye & of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the Prophete.

¶ The xl. Chapter.

In the xxv. yeare of oure captyuyte, in the beginning of the yeare / the .x. daye of the moneth: that is ỹ xiiij. yeare, after that the cite was smytten downe: the same daye came the hand of the Lorde vpon me / & caried me forth: euē into the lande of Israel brought he me in the vysyons of God: & set me downe vpō a marueilous hye moūtaye / wherupon there was a buyldynge (as it had bene of a cite) toward the north.

Thither he caried me / and beholde / there was a mā / whose similitude was like brasse / which had a threde of flax in his hande / and a metterodde also. He stode in ỹ doze / & sayde vnto me: marcke well with thyne eyes / herken to with thyne eares / & fasten it in thine hert, whatsoeuer I shall shewe the / for to ỹ intent that they myght be shewed the / therfore are thou brought hither. And whatsoeuer thou seyst, thou shalt certyfye the house of Israel therof.

Beholde / there was a wall on the outside roundc aboute the houfe: the metterodde that he had in his hand, was six cubytes long & a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the B. buylding / which was a metterodde / and the heygth also a metterodde. Then came he vnto the east doze / & wente vpthe stares / & measured the postes of ỹ doze: wherof euery one was a metterodde thicke. Euery chābze was a metterodde longe & brode: betwene the chābers were fyue cubytes. The poste of ỹ doze within the porche / was one metterodde. He measured also the porche of the vtmermer doze / wlych conteyned a metterodde. Then measured he the entrye of the doze / that conteyned eght cubytes, and his pylers two cubytes: and this entrye stode inwarde.

The chambers of the doze eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pylers also that stode of both the sydes / were of one measure. After this / he measured the wydenesse of the doze, which was .x. cubytes / & the heygth of the doze xiij. cubyts. The edge before the chambres was one cu- C byte brode vpon both the sydes / & the chambres six cubites wyde of either side. He measured the doze from the rygge of one chābze to another, whose wydnesse was .xxv. cubytes / and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pilers also .lx. cubites hye / roūde about the courte doze. Before ỹ inward parte vnto the fore entre of the vtmermer doze / were L. cubytes. The chābers & their pilers within / rounde about vnto the doze / had syde wyndowes: So had the fore entres also / whose wyndowes wente rounde about within. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the fore courte / where as were chambres & paued worches / made in the fore courte rounde aboute .xxx. chambres vpon one paued worche. Now the paued worche was a longe beside the dozes / & ỹ was the lower paued worche. After this / he measured the bredth frō the lower doze / vnto the vtmermer courte of the outsyde / which had an .C. cubytes vpon the east & the north parte. And the doze in the vttermost courte towarde the north / measured he after the length & bredth: his thre chambres also on either side / with his pylers & fore entres: which had euen the measure of the first doze. His heygth was fyfty cubytes, ỹ bredth xxv cubytes: his wyndowes & porches with hys date tres / had euen lyke measure as ỹ doze towarde the east: there were .viij. steppes to go vp vpō, & their porche before them. Now the doze of ỹ vtmermer court stode streight ouer agaynst the doze, that was toward the north east. Frō one doze to another / he measured .C. cubytes.

After that / he brought me to ỹ southside / where there stode a doze towarde the south: whose pilers and porches he measured / these had the fyrst measure / & wyth their porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute / lyke the first wyndowes. The heygth was .l. cubites / the bredth .xxv. And steppes to go vp vpon: his porche stode before him, with his pylers and date tres on either side. And the doze of the vtmermer courte stode towarde the south / & he measured from one doze to another an .C. cubites. So he brought me in to ỹ vtmermer courte / thorow ỹ doze of ỹ south syde: which he measured / and it had the measure afore sayde. In lyke maner, his chambres, pylers / and fore entres, had euē the fore sayde measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute, wyndowes of .L. cubytes heyght / & xxv. cubytes brode. The porches roūd about were .xxv. cubytes longe / and .v. cubytes brode: and his porch reached vnto the vttermost court: vpon his pylers there were date trees/and.viij.steppes to go vp vpon.

E He brought me also in to ỹ vtmost courte vpon the east syde/ and measured the doze/ accordyng to ỹ measure afore sayd. His chãbers/pylers/and porches had euen the same measure/as ỹ fyrst had: & with his porches he had wyndowes roũde aboute. The heigth was.l.cubytes. the bredth.xxv. cubytes: His porches reached vnto the vttermost courte: his pilers also had date trees on eyther syde/ & viij. steppes to go vp vpõ. And he brought me to the northy doze, and measured it wyth also had ỹ fore sayd measure. His chãbres/ pylers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heygth was.l.cubytes / & the bredth.xxv. Hys pylers stode towarde ỹ vtemost courte / & vpon them both were date trees/and.viij. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also/ whose intraunce was at the doze pylers / and there the burntofferynges were washed.

In the doze porche / there stode on ether F syde two tables for the slaughtrynge: to laye the brentofferynges / synneofferynges and trespaceofferynges therupon. And on the out syde as men go forth to the northy doze/there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether syde of the doze, ỹ is.viij. tables / wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntofferynges/of a cubyte & a half longe and brode/ and one cubyte hye: wherupon were layed the vessels and ornamentes / whych were vsed to the burnt and slayne offerynges/ whẽ they were slaughted. And within there were holes foure fyngers brode / fastened rounde aboute / to hange flesh vpon/and vpon the tables was layed ỹ offrynge flesh. On the outsyde of the ynnermer doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde courte besyde the Northy doze ouer agaynst ỹ South. There stode one also/ besyde the east doze northwarde.

G And he sayde vnto me: This chambre on the South syde belongeth to the prestes / ỹ kepe the habytacyon: and thys towarde the North / is the Prestes that wayte vpon the aulter: which be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do seruyce before the Lorde in stede of the chyldren of Leui. So he measured the fore courte/ whych had in length an.C.cubytes/ and as moch in bredth by the foure corners. Now the aulter stode before the house: And he brought me to the fore entre of the house/ and measured the walles by the entre doze: wich were fyue cubytes longe on ether syde. The thicknesse also of the doze on ether syde/ was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was.xx.cubytes/ the bredth.xj.cubytes/ and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by ỹ walles also were pylers/on ether syde one.

¶ The disposicyon and denyce of buyldynge agayne the temple & of the other thynges therto belongyng.

¶ The.xlj. Chapter.

AFter this he brought me to ỹ tẽple/ & measured the postes: whych were vj of both ỹ sydes. vj. cubytes thicke/ accordynge to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was.x. cubytes and the walles of the doze on either syde fyue cubytes. He measured the length therof/ whych conteyned.xl.cubytes/ and the bredth.xx. Then went he in/ and measured the doze postes / whych were two cubytes thicke: but ỹ doze it selfe was syxe cubytes/ & the bredth of the doze was.viij.cubytes. He measure ỹ length and bredth therof/ whych were euery one.xx.cubytes/ before ỹ tẽple.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the holyest of all. He measured also the wall of ỹ house/ whych was syxe cubytes. The chambres ỹ stode roũde aboute ỹ house/ were euery one foure cubytes wyde/ & one stode harde vpon another/ wherof there were.xxxiij. And there stode postes beneth by the walles rounde aboute the house, to beare thẽ vp: but in the wall of ỹ house they were not fastened: The syde chambres were the hyer the wyder/ and had steppes thorow them rounde aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue/ that from the lowest men might go to ỹ hyest & mydd chambers. I sawe also that the house was B very hye rounde aboute. The foundacyon of the syde chambres was a meterodde (that is syxe cubytes) brode. The thicknesse of ỹ syde wall without/ conteyned fyue cubytes/ & so dyd ỹ outwall of the chãbres in the house.

Betwene the chambers/ was the wydenes xx. cubytes roũde about the house. The chambre doores stode ouer agaynst the outwall/ the one doze was towarde the north/ ỹ other towarde the South: & the thycknesse of ỹ outwall was.v. cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldynge that was separated towarde the west/ was lxx. cubytes wyde: the wall of the buyldyng was.v. cubytes thicke rounde aboute/ & the length foure score cubytes & ten. So he measured ỹ house which was an.C. cubytes longe/ and the separated buyldyng with the wall were an.C. cubytes longe also. The wydnesse before the house & of it that was separated towarde the East/ was an.C. cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buyl- C dynge before and behynde wyth the chãbers vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an.C. cubites. The ynnermer temple/ the porch of the fore courte/ the side postes/ these thre had syde wyndowes / and pylers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes / from the grounde

t. Para. lij. a. ij. Reg. v. f.

vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes themselues were syled ouer with bordes: and thus was it aboue the doze/ vnto the vttemost house/ and without also: Yee the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was syled ouer w greate bordes. There were Che-
D rubins and date trees made also/ so that one date tree stode euer betwixte two Cherubins: One Cherub had two faces/ ỳ face of a man lokynge a syde towarde the date tre/ and a lyons face on ỳ other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in al the house: Yee ỳ Cherubins & date trees were made frō the groūd vp aboue the doze/ & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The bysshes of the temple were foure squared/ and the fashion of the Sanctuary was euen as it apparedvnto me a foze in ỳ vision. The table was of wodde/ thze cubytes hye and two cubytes longe: hys cozners/ the length and the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table, that shal stande before the Lozde. The temple & the holyest of al had ether of them two dozes & euery doze had two lytle wychettes which were folden in one vpon another/ on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple there were made Cherubins & date trees/ lyke as vpon the walles: & a greate thicke baike of wodde was before on the out syde of ỳ porche. Upon both the sydes of the walles of the porche/ there were made depe windowes & date trees/ hauynge beames and balkes/ lyke as the house had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple for the Preastes/ & the holy thynges.

¶ The.xlij. Chapter.

A Then caryed he me out into ỳ foze court towarde ỳ nozth/ & brought me in to the chambze ỳ stode ouer against the backebuyldyng nozthwarde/ which had the length of an. C. cubytes whose doze turned toward the nozth. The wydenesse cōteyned. L. cubites: ouer against the. xx. cubites of the ynnermer courte/ and against the paued wozke that was in ỳ foze court. Beside all these thze/ there stode pyllers/ one ouer against another: And before this chambze there was a walkyng place of x. cubites wyde/ & within was a waye of one cubite wyde/ & their dozes towarde ỳ nozth. Thus the hyest chambzes were allwaye narower then the lowest and myddelmost of ỳ buildyng: for they bare chambze vpon chambze/ and stode thze together one vpō another not hauynge pilers lyke the foze court: therfoze were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest/ to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chambzes towarde the vttemost courte vpon the foze syde of the chambzes/ was L. cubytes longe: for the length of the vttemost chābzes in the foze courte was L. cubites also: but ỳ length therof before the temple was an C. cubites. These chambzes had vnder them an intraūce of the east syd/ wherby a mā might go in to them out of the foze courte/ thorow the thicke wal of the foze courte toward the east, right ouer against the separated buyldinge. Before the same buyldynge vpon thys syde there were chambers also whych had awaye vnto thē/ lyke as the chambers on ỳ nozth syde of the same length & wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashyon and dozes were also of the same maner. Yee euen lyke as the other chamber dozes were, so were those also of the south syd. And before the waye toward the fingers steppes on the east side, there stode a doze to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambers toward the nozth & the south which stande before the backe buyldynge: those be holy habitacyons/ wherin the preastes that do serupce before the Lozde/ must eate the most holy offeringes: and there must they laye the most holy offerynges: meatofferinges/ synne offringes & trespasse offerynges/ for it is an holy place. When the preastes come therin, they shal not go out in to ỳ foze courte: but (seyenge they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministracyon/ and put on other garmētes/ when they haue eny thynge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured al the ynnermer house/ he brought me forth thorow the east porte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde w the metezodde/ which rounde aboute conteyned v. C. meterodes. And the nozth syde measured he/ which conteyned rounde aboute euen so moch. The other two sydes also toward the south and the west (which he measured) conteyned ether of them v. C. meterodes. So he measured all the foure sydes where there wente a wall rounde aboute v. C. meterodes longe/ & as brode also which separated ỳ holy from the vnholy.

¶ He seyth the glozy of God goyng in to the Temple/ from whence it had before departed. He mencioneth the Idolatrye of the children of Israell/ for which they were confumed & brought to nowght. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

¶ The.xliij. Chapter.

So he brought me to ỳ doze/ ỳ turneth towarde the east. And beholde/ then came the glozy of the God of Israell from out of the east/ whose voyce was like a greate noyse of waters/ & the earth was lyghtened with hys glozy. His lyght to loke vpon was lyke the fyzst/ that I sawe, when I wentè in, what tyme as the cytye Ezech.xi cytie shulde haue bene destroyed: and lyke ye bysyon that I sawe by the water of Cobar.

Then fell I vpon my face but the glory of ye Ezechiel.f.a. Ezech.x.c.xlv Lorde came in to the house thorow the East doze. So a wynde toke me vp/ and brought me in to the vnnermer courte: & beholde/ the house was full of the glory of the Lorde.

B I herde one speakyng vnto me out of the house/ and there stode one by me/ that sayde Esa.vi.a Ierem. Apoca.xxi.c vnto me: O thou sonne of man this rowme is my seate / & the place of my fote steppes:
where as I wyll dwell amonge the chyldren of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shall nomore defile my holy name: nether they/ ner their kynges/ thorow their whor-dome/ thorow their hye places/ & thorow the dede bodyes of their kynges: whych haue buylded their thresholdes in maner harde vpon my thresholdes / & their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wall betwyxte me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name with their abhominacyons / that they haue cõmytted. Wherfore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shall put awaye their whordome and the dede bodyes of their kynges out of my syght/ that I maye dwell
C amõge thẽ for euermore. Therfore, O thou Zach.v.a. sonne of man) shewe thou the housholde of Israel a temple/ that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse/ and measure thẽ selues an example therat.

And when they be ashamed of all their worckes / then shewe them the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the commynge in/ the goynge oute/ all the maner and descripcion therof/ yee all the vses and ordynaunces of it/ & they maye kepe & fulfill all the fashiõs
D and customes therof.

This is the descripcyon of the house: Aboue vpõ the moũt rounde aboute all ye corners/ it shalbe ye holyest of all. Beholde/ that is the descripcyon and fashyon of the house.
This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubyte: whych is a spanne longer then another cubyte) hys botome in the myddest was a cubyte longe and wyde/ and the ledge that wente rounde aboute it/ was a spanne brode. This is the heygth of ye aulter: From the grounde to the lower steppes the length is two cubytes / and the bredth one cubyte:
and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubytes/ & the bredth but one cubyte.
Exodi.xxvij.a The aulter was foure cubytes hye/ & frõ the aulter vpwarde stode foure hornes / and it was. xij. cubytes longe and. xij. cubytes E brode, vpõ ye foure corners: the couerynge of ye aulter was. xiiij. cubytes longe and brode vpon the foure corners / and the ledge that wente rounde aboute, had half a cubite: and the botome therof rounde aboute one cubyte:
hys steppes stode towarde the East. And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of mã, thus sayeth the Lorde God: these are the ordynaunces & lawes of the aulter / in the daye when it is made to offer burntoffrynges & to sprẽckle Exech.xliij.c. bloude therupon. To the prestes/ to the Le-uites that be of the sede of Sadoch/ & treade before me to do me seruyce/ sayeth the Lord God: Vnto these geue thou a yõge bullocke/for a synoffrynge: & take the bloude of hym and sprenckle his fourehornes withall and the foure corners of the aulter couerynge/with ye ledge that goeth rounde aboute: here Leuit.vi.f.
wyth shalt thou clense it / and reconcyle it.
Thou shalt take the bullock also of the syn-offrynge/ & burne him in a seuerall place wtout the Sanctuary.

The nexte daye / take a gootbuck wythout blemish for a synoffryng/ to reconcyle ye aulter withall: lyke as it was reconcyled wt the bullocke. Now when thou hast made it cleane / then offre a yonge bullocke without blemysh. & a ramme out of the flocke wythout blemish also: Offre thẽ before the Lord, Leuit.xxij.c.
and let the prest cast salt therupon and geue them so vnto the Lorde for a burntoffryng. Leuit.vj.b.
Seuen dayes shalt thou bringe/ euery daye
a gootbuck. A yonge bullocke & a ramme of the flocke (both wythout blemysh) shall they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle G and clense the aulter/ & offre vpon it. When these dayes are expired/ then vpon the. viij.
daye and so forth/ the prestes shal offre their burntoffrynges & healthoffrynges vpon the aulter: so wyll I be mercyfull vnto you/sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xliij. Chapter.

AFter thys / he brought me agayne H to the outwarde doze of the Sanctuary on the East syde / and that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: This doze shall be styll shut / & not opened for eny man to go thorow it/ but only for the Lorde God of Israel: yee he shall go thorow wt it/ ergo shall it be shut styll. The prynce hym selfe shall come thorow it / that he maye eate bread before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in/ and there shall he go out agayne. Then brought he me to ye doze/vpon the North syde of the house. And as I loked aboute me/ beholde, ye glory of ye Lord fylled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, * laye this to thyne herte / B

* That is cõsyder or ymagyne it yo in thyne hert.

beholde / & take diligent hede to all ỹ I will saye vnto the, concernyng all the ordynaunces of the Lorde & all his lawes: ponder wel with thyne herte the cõmyng in of the house & the goinge forth of the Sanctuary: & tell that obstynate housholde of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O house of Israel / ye haue now done ynough withall youre abhominacyons / seynge that ye haue brought into my Sanctuary straungers / hauynge vncircuncysed hertes and flesh / where thorow my Sanctuary is defiled / when ye offre me bred / fat / and bloude.

Thus with all youre abhominacyons ye haue broken my couenaunt / and not kepte the holy ordinaũces of my Sanctuary: but set keepers of my Sanctuary / euẽ after youre awne mynde. Therfore thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God. Of all the straũgers that dwell amõge the chyldren of Israel / no straunger (whose herte & flesh is not circumcysed) shall come within my Sanctuary: No nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me / and haue dyscaued the people of Israel with all errours / goinge after their idoles: therfore shall they beare their awne wickednes. Shulde they be set & ordened to mynystre vnder the dores of the house of my Sanctuary? And to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burntoffringes & sacrifyces for the people: to stande before thẽ, & to serue them: seynge the seruyce that they do thẽ / is before their Idoles / & cause ỹ house of Israel to stombie thorow the wickednes: for the which cause I haue plucked out myne hande ouer them (sayeth ỹ Lorde) so that now they must beare their awne iniquyte / and not to come nye me / to serue me with their presthode / in my Sanctuary / & moost holyest of all: that they maye beare their awne shame & abhominacyõs / which they haue done. Shulde I vse thẽ to be porters of the house / and to all the seruyce that is done therin? But the Prestes the Leuytes ỹ sonnes of Sadoch, that kepte the holy ordynaũces of my Sanctuary / when the chyldren of Israel were gone fro me: shall come to me / to do me seruyce / to stande before me / and to offre me the fat and the bloude / sayeth the Lorde God.

They shall go in to my Sanctuary / and entre before my table / to do me seruice / and to wayte vpon myne ordynaũces. Now whẽ they go in at ỹ dores of the vtmermer court: they shall put on lynen clothes / so ỹ no wollyne come vpon them: whyle they do seruyce vnder the dores of the vtmermer courte / and within. They shall haue fayre lynen bonettes vpon their heades / and lynẽ breches vpõ their loynes / which in their labour they shall not put about them. And when they go forth to the people in to the outward courte / they shall put of ỹ clothes / wherin they haue mynystred / and laye them in the habytacyon of the Sanctuary / and put on other apparel lest they vnhalowe the people wyth their clothes.

They shall not shaue their heades, ner norysh the bushe of their hearre / but rounde their heades only. All the Prestes that go in to the vtmost court, shall drynke no wyne. They shall mary no wydow / nether one that is put from her husband: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israel / or a wyddowe / ỹ hath had a prest before. Leuit.xxi.a.

They shall shewe my people the dyfferẽce betwene the holy and vnholy / betwixte the clene and vnclene. If any discorde arise / they shall discerne it / and geue sentence after my iudgementes. My solempne feastes / my lawes and ordynaũces shall they kepe / and halowe my Sabbathes. They shall come at no dede persone / to defyle thẽselues (except it be father or mother / sonne or daughter / brother or syster ỹ hath had yet no husbande) in soch they maye be defyled. Leuit.xxi.c.xxii. Ose.i.a. iij.a.

And when he is clensed / there shall be reckened vnto him vij dayes: and yet he go in to ỹ Sanctuary agayne to do seruyce / he shall bringe a synnoffrynge sayeth the Lorde God.

They shall haue an heretage, yee I my selfe will be their heretage: els shall ye geue thẽ no possessyon in Israell / for I am their possessyon. The meatoffrynge / synnoffryng & trespaceoffryng shall they eate / and euery dedycate thing in Israel, shalbe theirs. The firstlynges of all the first frutes / and all fre willoffrynges shall be the prestes. Deute xviij.a. Numer xviij.c Iosu.xiij.b.

Ye shal geue vnto the prest also the firstlynges of youre dowe / that God maye prospere the resydue. But no deed caryon shal ỹ prest eate / ner soch as is deuoured of wylde beestes / foules or catell. Exod.xxij.d. Leui.xxij.a.

¶ The xlv. Chapter.

When ye deuyde the lãde by the lot / ye shall put aside one parte for ỹ Lorde / to be holy frõ other lãdes: namely xxv. M. meterodds lõge / and .x. M. brode. This shalbe holy / as wyde as it is rounde aboute. Of this parte there shal belonge vnto the Sanctuary v. C. meterodds in all the foure corners / and .L. cubytes wyde rounde aboute to the suburbes. And from this measure / namely of .xxv. M. meterodds longe / & .x. M. brode, there shall measure Exech.xlviij.b measure/wherin the Sanctuary and ỹ holyest of all maye stande.

. The residue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes/ which do seruyce in ỹ Sanctuary of the Lorde / and goo in before the Lorde to serue hym / that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.

B . As for the Sanctuary/it shall stande for it self: & to the Leuites ỹ serue in the house/ there shalbe geuen.xx.habytacyons / of the xxv.M.length & x.M.bredth: ye shall geue also vnto the cytie a possession of.v.M.meterodes brode/& xxv.M.longe / beside the parte of the Sanctuary: that shall be for ỹ Ezech.xlviij.d. whole house of Israell. Upon both the sydes of ỹ Sanctuarys parte & by the cytie, there C shalbe geuē vnto ỹ prynce, whatsoeuer lieth quer agaynst the cytie/ as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde: whych shalbe as longe as one parte / frō ỹ west vnto ỹ east.

This shalbe his awne lande in Israel/ ỹ my princes be no more chargeable vnto my people. And soch as remayneth yet ouer in ỹ lande/ shalbe geuē to ỹ house of Israel accordynge to their trybes. The cyle shall be measured with the Bath: euen the tenth parte of one Bath out of a b* Cor. C Ten Bathes make one Homer: for one Homer fylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth sheepe out of the pasture of Israel for a meatoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge/ to reconcyle thē/ sayeth the Lorde God. All the people of the lande shall geue thys heaueoffrynge wyth a free will. Agayne, it shall be the princes parte to offre burntofferynges/ meatofferynges and drynckoffrynges vnto the Lorde/ in the holy dayes/ new Moones/ Sabbathes/ and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The F synoffrynge, meatoffrynge/ brentofferynge and healthoffrynge shall he geue / to reconcyle ỹ house of Israel. Thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God: The first daye of the fyrst moneth thou shalt take a yonge bullocke wythout blemysh/ and clense the Sanctuary: So the preste shall take of the bloude of the synoffrynge/ and sprenckle it vpon the postes of the house/ and vpon the foure corners of the aulter/ with the dorepostes of the innermer courte. And thus shalt thou do also ỹ seuēth daye of the moneth (for soch as haue synned of ignorance/ or beyng deceaued) to reconcyle the house withall. Upon the. xiiij. daye of ỹ fyrst moneth ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shall the feast contynue / wherin there shal no sower nor leuēned bred be eatē.

Upon the same daye shal the prynce geue for him selfe and all the people of the lande/ G a bullocke for a synoffrynge. And in ỹ feast of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery daye a bullocke & a ram/ that are without blemysh/ for a burntoffrynge vnto the Lorde: and an he gaote daylye for a synoffrynge. For the meatoffrynges he shal geue euer an Ephah to a bullocke/ an Ephah to a ram / & an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the.xv. daye of ỹ seuēth moneth/ he shall kepe the seuē dayes holy one after another/ euē as the other seuē dayes: with the synoffrynge/ burntoffryng/ meatoffrynge/ and with the oyle.

C The sacrifices of the Sabboth & of the new mones. Thorow which dores they muste go in/ or come out of the temple &c.

C The.xlvi.Chapter.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: the dore of the innermer courte towarde ỹ A East / shall be shut the.vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabboth and in daye of the newe Moone / it shalbe opened. Then shall the prynce come vnder the dore porche/ and stande styll wythout by the dore cheke. So ỹ prestes shall offre vp his burnt and healthoffrynge. And he shall worshype at ỹ doreposte/ & go his waye forth agayne: but the dore shall nomore be shut tyll the euenynge.

On the same maner shall ỹ people of the lande also do their worshipe before ỹ Lorde/ wythout thys dore vpon the Sabbathes & newe Moones. This is now the burntoffe- B rynge / that the prynce shall bringe vnto ỹ Lorde vpō the Sabboth: syxe lambes without blemysh/ and a ram without blemysh/ and an Ephah for a meatoffrynge / with the ram. As for the lābes / he maye geue as many meatoffrynges to them / as he wyll / & an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shal be a yonge bullocke without blemysh, syxe lambes & a ram also without blemish. With the bullocke he shal geue an Ephah/ and wyth the ram an Ephah also for a meatofferyng: but to the lābes/ what he maye come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to C an Ephah. Whē the prynce cōmeth/ he shall go vnder the doze porche/and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lorde in the hye solempne feast / as many as come in by the North doze to do worshippe / shall goo oute agayne at the South doze. And they ꝑ come in at the South doze/ shall go forth agayne at the North doze. There shall none go oute at the doze where he came in / but shall goo forth ryght ouer on the other syde/ & ꝑ prince shall go in and out amonge them.

D. Upon the solempne and hye feaste dayes/this shalbe the meatofferinge: In Epha to a bullock and an Epha to a ram/ and to the lambes: as many as he wil/ but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Now when the prynce bryngeth a burntofferynge or an healthe offe-rynge wyth a fre wyll vnto the Lorde / the east doze shalbe opened vnto him/ & he maye do with hys burnt and healthofferynges / as he doth vpon the Sabboth / and when he goeth forth/ the doze shall be shutt after hym agayne He shal dayly bryng vnto ꝑ Lorde a lambe of a yeare olde without blemysh for a burnt offringe: this shall he do euery mor-nynge. And for a meatoffringe he shal gene the sixte parte of an Epha/ & the thyrde parte of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery mournynge.) ee this shalbe a dayly meatoffringe vnto the Lorde/ for an euerlastinge ordinaunce: & thus shal the lambe/the meatoffrynge and oyle be geuen euery mornynge/ for a dayly burntoffringe.

Moreouer/ thus sayeth the Lorde God:
If the prynce gene a gyfte vnto eny of hys sonnes/ then shall it be hys sonnes herytage perpetuall/ ꝑ he maye possesse it. But if he wyll gene one of his seruauntes some of his herytage, it shall be his to the fre yeare and then to returne agayne vnto ꝑ prynce: for hys herytage shalbe his sonnes only. The prince also shall take none of the peoples enherytaunce/ ner put them from their possessyon: but to his awne sonnes shall he gene his possess-syon/ that my people be not scatred abrode/but that euery man maye haue his awne.

And he brought me thorow the intraunce at the syde of the doze to the habytacyon of ꝑ Sanctuary/ that be longeth to ꝑ prestes and stode towarde the north/ & beholde/ there was a place vpon the West syde/ then sayde
he vnto me: This is ꝑ place/ where ꝑ prestes shall dyght the trespace and synoffrynges / & bake the meatofferinges: that they nede not beare them in to the outwarde courte / and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vttermost courte/ rounde aboute all the foure corners. Beholde/ in euery corner of the forе courte/ there was yet a lytle courte. Yee in all the foure corners of the courte/ there was made a lytle courte of. xl.
cubytes longe/ and. xxx. cubites brode: these foure lytle courtes were of one lyke measure/ & there wer a rygge wall rounde aboute them all foure / vnder the wyrch there were harthes made rounde aboute. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the kechin / where the mynisters of the house shal dyght the sayne of-ferynges of the people.

The. xlvij. Chapter.

After thys he brought me agayne before the doze of ꝑ house: and be-holde/ there gushed out waters frō vnder the postes of the house east-warde (for the house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vpon the ryght syde of the house/ which lyeth to the aulter south ward.
Then caried he me out to the north doze/ and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vttemost doze that turneth east warde. Be-holde / there came forth the water vpon the right side. Now whā the man ꝑ had ꝑ mete-rodde in his hande wente vnto the east doze/he measured a M. cubites/ & thē he brought me thorow the water/ euen to ꝑ ancles: so he measured yet a thousand/ & brought me tho-row ꝑ water agayne vnto ꝑ knees: yet measured he a thousande / & brought me thorow the water vnto the loines. After this he measured a thousande agayne / then was it soch
a ryuer / that I myght not wade thorow it:
The water was so depe/ that it was nedeful to haue swimmed/ for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this/ O thou sonne of man? and wyth that/he brought me to ꝑ ryuer banck agayne.

Now when I came there/ there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer bāke.
Then sayde he vnto me: This water that flo-weth oute towarde * the East / and runneth downe in to the playne felde/ commeth in to the see: and from the see it rūneth out/ & ma-keth the waters whole. Yee all that lyue and moue/ where vnto this ryuer commeth/ shal recouer. And where thys water commeth/there shalbe moch fysh. For all ꝑ cōmeth to this water/ shal be lust yand whole. By this ryuer shall the fyshers stande from Engad-di vnto En Eglaim/ & there spreade oute their nettes: for there shalbe greate heapes of fysh/lyke as in the mayne see. As for hys claye & pyttes/ they shall not be whole / for why/ it shalbe occupyde for salt.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the

¶ The.xlviij.Chapter.

THese are ꝑ names of the trybes ꝑ lye vpon the northsyde by ꝑ waye of Hetlon/ tyll thou cōmest vnto Hemath & Hazar Enam/ the borders of Damascus towarde the north beside Hemath: Dan shal haue his portiō from the east quarter vnto the west. Upō the borders of Dan frō the east syde vnto the west/ shall Aser haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Aser from the east parte vnto the west shall Nephthali haue his porcyon.

Upon the borders of Nephthali from the east quarter vnto the west/ shall Manasses haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west/ shall Ephraim haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto ꝑ west/ shall Ruben haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west shall Iuda haue his porcyon: Upon the borders of Iuda frō the east parte vnto the west/ ye shall set aside one porcion of.xxv.M. metroddes longe and brode (like as another porcyon from the east syde vnto the west) wherin the Sanctuary shall stāde.

As for the porcyon that ye shall separate Ezech.xlv.a. out for the Lorde/ it shalbe. xxv.M. longe/ and.x.M brode. Which separated holy porcyon shall belonge vnto these: namely to the prestes/ towarde the north. xxv. Now of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the west/shall Beniamin haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Benjamin from the east syde vnto ỹ west/shall Symeon haue his porciō. Upon the borders of Symeon from the east parte vnto the west/shal Issakar haue hys porcyō. Upon the borders of Issakar frō the east side vnto ỹ west/shal Sabulon haue his porciō. Upon the borders of Sabulon frō the east parte vnto the west/shall Gad haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Gad southwarde/ the coastes shall reach frō Thamar forth vnto the waters of stryfe to Cades/and to the floude/euen vnto the mayne see.

¶ The ende of the Prophecye of Ezechiel.

¶ The boke of the prophete Daniel.

¶ The Prophete sheweth the captyuite of Jehoakim kynge of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captyuytye/the kynge commaundeth to chuse which of them shuld be taught the lernyng & language of the Chaldees. They are alowed the kynges feadyng. Daniel abstayneth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon. The semer and mistru cepon of these chyldren.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

IN the thyrde yeare of ỹ raygne of Jehoakim kyng of Juda/came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon vnto Jerusalem/& besieged it: and the Lord delyuered Jehoakim the kynge of Juda in to his hande/with certayne ornamentes of ỹ house of God which he caried awaye vnto the lande of Sennar/ to the house of his god, and there he brought them into his goddes treasury. And the kyng spake vnto Asphanaz ỹ chefe chāberlayne/ that he shulde bryng hym certayne of the chyldren of Israell/that were come of the kinges sede & of princes. yonge spryngaldes without any blemysh but fayre & welfauored instructe in all wysdome, connynge and vnderstandynge: which were able to stande in the kynges palace/to reade and to lerne for to speake Caldeish. IV Reg.xxiiij.a ij.Par.xxxvi.c

Unto these ỹ kyng appoynted a certayne porcion of his awne meate/& of the wyne/ which he dranche himselfe, so to norysh them thre yeare: & afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these now were certayne of the childrē of Juda: namely Daniel/Ananias/Misael and Azarias. Unto these ỹ chefe chamberlayne gaue other names. & called Daniel/Balthasar: Ananias/ Sydrach: Misael/Misach: and Asarias/ Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynt wt him selfe/ỹ he wolde not be defyled thorow ỹ kinges meate/ner ỹ wyne which he dronke. And thys he desyred of the chefe Chamberlayne lest he shulde defile hymselfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberlayne/that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayed of my lorde the kynge/whych hath appoynted you youre meate & drincke: lest he spye youre faces to be worse lykynge then ỹ other spryngaldes of youre age/& so ye shall make me lose my head vnto ỹ king. B Gene.xliij.k. Tobi.b. Judit.xij.a. C

Then Daniel answered Melasar/whom ỹ chefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel/ Ananias/Misael and Asarias/& sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes/& let vs haue potage to eate/& water to drincke: then loke vpon oure faces/& theirs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seist/ so deale so deale with thy seruaũtes. So he consented to them in this matter/ & proued them .x. dayes. And after the ten dayes/ their faces were better ilyking & fatter/ then all ỹ yõg sprygaldes/ which ate of the kinges meate.

Thus Melassar toke awaye their meate and wyne/ and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue now these foure sprygaldes connynge and lernyng in all scripture and wysdome: but vnto Daniel specyally/ he gaue vnderstandinge of all vysions and dreames. Now when the tyme was expyred/ that the kynge had appoynted to bringe in these yõg sprygaldes vnto hym: the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor/ and the kyng communed wyth thẽ. But amonge them all were founde none soch as Daniel/ Ananias/ Misael/ and Asarias. Therfore stode they before ỹ kyng/ which in all wysdome & matters of vnderstanding/ ỹ he enquered of thẽ/ founde thẽ ten tymes better/ then all the sothsayers & charmers/ that were in all hys realme. And Daniel abode styll/ vnto the fyrst yeare of kynge Cyrus.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers/ and requyreth of them both the dreame and the interpretacyon therof. They answere that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solute the question. The Lorde openeth the mystery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kyng & sheweth him his dreames the interpretacyon therof. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christ. The stone Christ. Daniel is exalted & promoted of the kynge.

¶ The.ij. Chapter.

Job. ix.d. Daniel.iij.a. & v.a.

IN the seconde yeare of the raigne of Nabuchodonosor/ had Nabuchodonosor a dreame where thorow his spyrite was vexed and his slepe brake from him. Then the kynge commaunded to call together al the sothsayers/ charmers/ witches & Caldees/ for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came/ & stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame/ & my spyrite was so troubled therw/ ỹ I haue clene forgotten/ what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syrians speach:* O king. God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruaũtes the dreame & we shall shewe the what it meaneth. The kyng gaue ỹ Caldees their answere & sayde: It is gone fro me.) Except ye wyll not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacyon therof/ ye shall dye & youre houses shalbe prysed. But yf ye tell me the dreame & the meanyng therof/ ye shall haue of me gyftes/ rewardes & greate honoure: only shewe me the dreame and the sygnyfycacyon of it. They answered agayne/ and sayde: the kynge must shewe his seruauntes the dreame/ and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kyng answered/ sayinge: I perceaue of a trueth/ that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so moch as ye se/ ỹ the thinge is gone frome. Therfore ye wyll not tell me ỹ dreame/ ye shall al haue one iudgemẽt. But ye layne & dyssemble wt layne wordes/ which ye speake before me/ to put of ỹ tyme. Therfore tell me ỹ dreame/ & so shall I knowe/ yf ye can shewe me/ what it meaneth. Upon this/ ỹ Caldees gaue answere before the kyng/ and sayde: there is no man vpõ earth/ ỹ can tell the thynge/ which the kynge speaketh of: yee there is nether kynge/ prynce ner Lorde/ that euer asked soch thinges at a sothsayer/ charmer or Caldeer: for it is a very harde matter/ ỹ the kyng requyreth. Nether is there any/ that can certifye the kynge therof/ except the goddes: whose dwelling is not amõge the creatures.

For the which cause the kyng was wroth with greate indignacion/ and comaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: & the proclamacõ went forth/ that the wyse men shulde be slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his cõpanyons. Then Daniel enquered Arioch the kinges stewarde/ of the iudgement and sentẽce/ that was gone forth alredy/ to kyll soch as were wyse at Babylõ. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beinge then the kynges debyte: Why hath the kynge proclamed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this/ went Daniel vp/ and desyred the kynge/ that he myght haue leysoure/ to shewe the kynge the interpretacyõ: & then came he home agayne & shewed the thinge vnto Ananias/ Misael & Asarias his compamõs: ỹ they shulde beseche ỹ God of heauẽ for grace in this secret/ that Daniel & his felowes with other soch as were wise in Babylõ/ perished not. Then was the mystery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyght. And Daniel praysed ỹ God of heauẽ. Daniel also cried loude/ & sayde: O that the name of God myght be praysed for euer and euer/ for wysdome & strength are hys awne: he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges: he geueth wysdome vnto the wyse & vnderstandinge to those that vnderstande/ he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thinge that lyeth in darcknesse/ for the light dwelleth with him. I thanke the/ & prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) ỹ thou hast lent me wysdome & strength/ & hast shewed me the thinge/ that we desyred of ỹ/ for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch/ whom the kynge had ordened to destroye the wise at Babylon: he went vnto him/ & sayde: destroye not soch as are wyse in Babylon/ bu

but bryngeme in vnto ꝧ kynge/ and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in all the haste/ and sayd vnto him: I haue founde a man amonge the preſoners of Juda / that shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then answered the kynge/ & sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he/ that canst shewe me the dreame/ which I haue sene/ & the interpretacyon therof? Daniel answered the kyng to his face / & sayde: As for this secrete / for the whych the kynge maketh inquisycion: it is nether the wyse/ the sorcerer, the charmer ner ꝧ deuell conjurer/ that can certyfye the kynge of it: Only God in heauen can open secretes / & he it is/ that sheweth the kynge Nabuchodonosor/ what is for to come in the latter dayes. Mat.xi.c.

Thy dreame/ & that whych thou hast sene in thyne head vpon thy bed is this: O kyng/ thou dydest cast in thy mynde / what shulde come herafter: So he that is the opener of mysteryes/ telleth the / what is for to come. As for me/ this secrete is not shewed me/ for eny wysdome ꝧ I haue/ more then eny other lyuyng: but only ꝧ I myght shewe the kyng the interpretacyon/ & that he myght knowe ꝧ thoughtes of his awne herte. Thou kyng sawest/ and beholde: there stode before the a greate Jmage/ whose fygure was marueilous greate/ and his vysage grymme. The Jmage head was of fyne golde/ hys brest & armes of syluer / hys body & loynes were of copper, his leggs were of yrõ / his fete were parte of yron/ and parte of earth.

This thou sawest/ tyll the tyme that (without eny handes) there was hewen of a stone which smote the Jmage vpon the fete / that were both of yron and earth / and brake thẽ to pouder: then was the yron/ the earth/ the copper/ the syluer and golde broken altogether in peces: and be came lyke the chaffe of corne / that the wynde bloweth awaye from the somer floores / that they can no more be founde. But ꝧ stone that smote the Jmage / became a greate mountayne / which fulfylleth the whole earth: This is ꝧ dreame. And now wyll we shewe before the kynge / what it meaneth. Mat.xxi.c Luc.xx.b.

O kynge / thou art a kynge of kynges: For the God of heauẽ hath geuẽ the a kyngdome/ ryches/ strength and maiesty: & hath destructed the all thynges / that are amonge ꝧ chyldrẽ of men: the beastes of the felde / & the fowles vnder the heauẽ/ and geuẽ the dominyon ouer them all. Thou art that golden head. After ꝧ there shall aryse another kingdome, which shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shalbe like copper, & haue dominyacion in all lãdes. The fourth kyngdome shall be as stroge as yron. For lyke as yron brosteth and breaketh all thynges: Yee euen as yron beateth euery thynge downe/ so shall it beate downe and destroye. Dan.b.b.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes/ parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome / whych neuertheles shall haue some of the yron groũde mixte with it/ for so moch as thou hast sene the yron mixte with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye/ sygnifyeth: that it shalbe a kyngdome partely strong and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron mixte wyth claye: they shall myngle themselues with the sede of symple people / & yet not contynue one with another/ like as yron wyll not be soudered with a potsherde.

In the dayes of these kyngs/ shall the God of heauen set vp an euerlastyng kyngdome which shall not perish/ & his kyngdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: yee the same shall breake & destroye all these kyngdomes/ but it shall endure for euer. Dan.ii.b.

And where as thou sawest/ that wythout eny handes there was cut out of the mounte a stone/ which brake the yron/ the copper/ & earth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kyng/ what wyll come after this. This is a true dreame/ and the interpretacyon of it is sure. Deu.xxj.c.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face/ and bowed him selfe vnto Daniel/ and cõmaunded that they shulde offre meatoffrynges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kynge answered Daniel / and sayde: yee of a treuth youre God is a God aboue all goddes/ a Lorde aboue all kyngs/ and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this mysterie. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man / and gaue hym many and greate gyftes.

He made hym ruler of all the countrees of Babylon/ and lorde of all the nobles/ that were at Babylon. Now daniel intreated the kynge for Sydrach / Misach and Abednago/ so that he made them rulers ouer all the offyces in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel hym selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

¶ The kynge setteth vp a golden Jmage/ which he cõmaundeth to be worshyped. Sydrach/ Misach/ and Abednago are accused because they dispysed ꝧ kynges cõmaundement. They are brought vnto the kynge & commaunded to worshyp the Jmage. They refuse to do it and are put in to a burnynge ouen. By beleue in God they are delyuerd from the fyre. Nabuchodonoser confesseth the power of God after ꝧ syght of the myracle.

¶ The.iij. Chapter.

Nabu-

NAbuchodonosor the kynge caused a golde Image to be made/which was.lx.cubytes hye/and syxe cubytes thyche. This he made to be set vp in the fylde of * Dura in the lande of Babylon & sent oute to gather together the dukes lordes and nobles/the iudges and officers, & debytes & shyrues with all the rulers of the lande: that they might come to the dedicacion of the Image which Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles/the iudges and officers/ debytes and shyrues with all the rulers of the lande gathered them together/and came vnto the dedycatynge of the Image/ that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

* After the Greke. Some reade: in the fylde that maye be inhabited: wherupon Josephus in the x booke of his antiquyties the.vi. chap. layeth in a very greate fylde.

Now when they stode before the Image/ which Nabuchodonosor set vp/ the herolde cried out with al his might: O ye people/kynredes and tunges/to you be it sayde: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes/ which shalbe blowen, with the harpes/shawmes/ Psalteries/Symphonies and all maner of Musick: ye fall downe and worshype the golden Image that Nabuchodonosor the kyng hath set vp. Who so then falleth not downe & boweth him self/ shall euen the same houre be cast in to an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore/when all the folcke herde the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen/with the harpes/shawmes/Psalteries/Symphonies & all kynde of Melody: then all the people/kynredes and nacyons fell downe/ and bowed them selues vnto the golden Image/ the Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now were there certayne men of the Caldees/ that wente euen then and accused the Iewes/and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kyng/God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kynge hast geuen a commaundement/that all men when they heare noyse of the trompettes/harpes/ shawmes/ psalterres/ symphonyes and all the other melodies: shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golden Image: who so then fell not downe and worshipped not/that he shulde be cast in to an hote burnynge ouen. Now are there certayne Iewes/ whom thou hast set ouer the offyces of the lande of Babylon: namely/Sydrach/ Mysach & Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundemēt yee they wyll not serue thy goddes, ner bowe them selues to the golde Image/that thou hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure/cōmaunded that Sidrach/ Misach and Abednago shulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them/and sayd: what? O Sidrach Misach and Abednago/ wyll not ye serue my goddes: nor bowe youre selues to the golden Image/that I haue set vp: well/ be redy hereafter/ when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe wyth the harpes/ shawmes/ psalteries/symphonies and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe/ & worshyppe the Image which I haue made. But yf ye worshyppe it not/ye shall be cast immediatly in to an hote burnyng ouen. Let se/ what God is there/ that maye delyuer you oute of my handes? Sydrach/ Misach and Abednago answered the kynge/ & sayde: O Nabuchodonosor/ we ought not to consente vnto the in this matter, for why: oure God whō we serue/ is able to kepe vs frō the hote burnynge ouē (O kynge) and can right well delyuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wyll not/ yet shalt thou knowe (O kyng) that we will not serue thy goddes ner do reuerence to the Image/which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacyon/ so that the countenaūce of his face chaūged vpō Sidrach/ Misach/and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded/ that the ouen shulde be made seuen tymes hoter/ then it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoste for to binde Sidrach/ Misach and Abednago/ & to cast them in to the hote burnynge ouen.

Luce.xvi.g.

So these men were bounde in their cotes hosen, shues wyth their other garmentes/ & cast in to the hote burnynge ouen: for the kinges commaundement was so strate/and the ouen was exceadinge hote. As for the men that put in Sydrach/ Mysach & Abednago/ the flāme of the fyre destroyed thē. And these thre mē Sydrach/ Misach & Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen/ beinge faste boūde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng marueled/and stode vp in all hast: he spake vnto hys councell and sayde: dyd not we cast these thre men bounde in to the fyre? They answered/and sayde vnto the kynge: Yee O kinge. He answered and sayde: Lo for all that/ yet do I se foure men goynge lowse in the myddest of the fyre/ and nothinge corrupte: and the fourth is lyke an angell to loke vpon. Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen: he spake also/ & sayde: O Sydrach/ Mysach & Abednago/ ye seruauntes of the hye God: go forth/ and come hither. And so Sydrach/ Mysach/ & Abednago wēte out of the fyre. Then dukes lordes and nobles/ and the kynges councell came together to se these men/ vpon whō the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes: In so moch that the very hearre of their head was not burnte/ & their clothes vnchāged: Yee there was no smel of fyre felt vpō them.

Then

Dan.i.g.g. Act.iv.a. Dan.i.b. D Eccl.xlij.a. C

Then spake Nabuchodonosor / and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach / Misach & Abednago: which hath sent hys angell / & defended his seruaūtes / that put their trust in him: that haue altered ỹ kynges cōmaundement: and ieoperde their bodies therupon: rather then they wolde serue or worshype eny other God / excepte their awne God only.

Therfore I will and commaunde / that all people, kynredes and tunges / which speake any blasphemy agaynst ỹ God of Sidrach / Misach, and Abednago, shall dye / and their houses shalbe prysed: Because / there is no God that maye saue / as this. So the kynge promoted Sidrach / Misach / and Abednago / in the lande of Babylon.

¶ Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his realme / and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God / and is restored into his kyngdome.

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor kynge vnto all people / kynredes and tunges ỹ dwell vpō ỹ whole earth: peace be multiplyed amōge you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelous worckes / that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O how greate are his tokens / and how mightie are hys wonders? His kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome / and his power lasteth for euer and euer.

I Nabuchodonosor beyng at rest in myne house / and florishynge in my palace / sawe a dreame / which made me afrayed: and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed / with the vysyons of myne head / troubled me. Then sent I out a cōmission / ỹ all they which were of wysdome at Babylon shulde be brought before me / to tell me the interpretacyon of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers / charmers / Caldees and coniurers of deuels: to whom I tolde the dreame / but what it betokened / they couldе not shewe me: tyll at ỹ last / there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar / accordyng to the name of my God) which hath ỹ spyrete of the holy goddes / in him: to whom I tolde the dreame / saying:

O Balthasar thou prince of Southesayers: B For so moch as I knowe / that thou hast the spyrete of the holy Goddes and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therfore / what the vysyon of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye sygnifye. I sawe a vysyon in my head vpon my bed: and beholde / there stode a tre vpon the grounde / which was very hye / greate and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto the heauen / and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: his leaues were fayre / he had very moch frute / so that euery man had ynough to eate therin.

The beastes of the feld had shadowes vnder it / and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly / all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a vysyon vpon my bed: & beholde / * a watcher came downe frō heauen / & cryed myghtely / saying. Hew downe ỹ tre / breake of his braunches / shake of his leaues / and scatre his frute abrode: that all the beestes maye get them awaye frō vnder him / and the foules from his braūches. Neuertheles leaue the grounde of his rote styll in the earth / and bynde him vpon the playne felde / with cheynes of yron and stele. He ỹth the dew of heauen shall he be wet / & he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes. ¶

That mans herte of his shall be takē frō him / and a beastes herte shall be geuē him / tyll seuē yeares be come and gone vpō hym.

This erande of ỹ watcher is a cōmaundment grounded and sought out in the councell of him / that is most holy: to learne men for to vnderstande / that ỹ hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men / & geueth thē / to whom it lyketh hym / & bryngeth the very oute caytes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame / that I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthasar / tell thou me what it sygnifyeth: for so moch as all ỹ wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me / what it meaneth. But thou canst do it / for ỹ spyrete of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peace by the space of an houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So the kynge spake / & sayde: O Balthasar, lett neither the dreame ner the interpretacyon therof feare the. Balthasar answered / saying: O my Lorde / this dreame happen to thyne enemyes / & the interpretacyon to thyne aduersaryes. As for ỹ tre that thou sawest which was so great & myghtye / whose heygth reached vnto the heauē / and hys bredth in to all the world: whose leues were fayre / & ỹ frute moch: vnder the which the beastes of ỹ felde had their habitacyon / and vpon whose braūches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou (O kynge) art the tre / greate & stronge. Thy greatnesse increaseth / & reacheth vnto the heauē / so doth thy power to ỹ endes of the earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holy angell / ỹ came downe from heauen / and sayde: hew downe the tre / and destroye it: yet leaue the ground of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne feld with cheynes of yron & stele: He shall be wet with the dew of heauē / and his parte shall be with ỹ beestes of the feld / & tyll seuē yeares be come and gone vpō hym: This (O kynge) is the interpretacion / yee it is the is the very deuyce of him/that is hyest of al/ and it toucheth my lorde the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast oute fro men/and thy dwellyng shalbe with the beastes of ỹ felde: *wyth grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dew of the heauen: yee seuen yeares shall come/& go vpon the/tyll thou knowe/ ỹ the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men/& geueth them to whom he lyst. Moreouer/where as it was sayde/that the rote of the tree shulde be left styll in the grounde: it betokeneth/that thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto the/after thou hast lerned to know/that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore O kyng/ be contēt with my coūceil/that thou mayest lowse thy synnes wyth ryghtuousnesse/and thyne offences wyth mercy to poore people: for soch thynges shall prolonge thy peace. All these thinges touche the Kynge Nabuchodonosor.

*Job.xlij.b. Daniel.v.a.

Daniel.iij.c. Jere.xxvij.a

¶ So after.xij.monethes/the kyng walked vp & downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon/and sayde: This is the greate cyte of Babylō/which I my selfe(with my power & strength)haue made a kynges courte/for ỹ honour of my magestye. Whyle these wordes were yet in the Kynges mouth/there fell a voyce from heauen/sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to ỹ be it spokē: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the/thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellyng shalbe with the beastes of ỹ felde/so that thou shalt eate grasse like as an oxe/till seuē yeares be come & gone ouer the: euen vntyl thou knowest/ ỹ the hyest hath power vpō the kyngdomes of men/and that he may geue them/vnto whō it pleaseth hym. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast oute of mens company/ and ate grasse like an oxe. His body was wet with the dewe of heauē, tyll his heares were as greate as Aegles fethers/& his nayles like hyrdes clawes.

¶ When this tyme was past/I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen/and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyghest. I magnifyed and praysed him that lyueth for euermore/whose power endureth alwaye/and his kyngdome from one generacyon to another: in comparison of whom all they that dwell vpon the earth/are to be reputed as nothinge.

Daniel.iij.f.

He handleth accordinge to his will/amōge the powers of heauen & amōge the inhabytours of the earth: and there is none ỹ maye resyste hys hande/or saye: what doest thou?

Job.xlij.b.

At the same tyme was myne vnderstandynge geuen me agayne/and I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome/to my dygnite/& to myne awne shappe agayne. Myne greate estates and Pryuces sought vnto me/and I was set in my kyngdome agayne/so that I had yet greater worshyppe.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor/loue/magnyfye and prayse the kynge of heauen: for all his workes are true/and hys wayes right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

¶ Balthazar kyng of Babylon/abusynge the vessels of the temple/seith an hande wrytinge in the wall. The sothesayers called of the kynge/can not expounde the wrytyng. Daniel is called/which readeth it/and interpreteth it also. Balthasar beinge slayne/Darius succedeth in his rowme.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

KYnge Balthazar made a greate banckett to his thousande Lordes: wyth all these thousande he made greate chere/& whē he was dronckē with wyne/he cōmaunded to bringe him the golden & syluer vessels/which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the tēple ỹ Dan.xxxb.c at Jerusalem: that the kynge and hys lordes with his quene & concubynes might drincke therout.

So they brought the golden vessell/that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene & concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne/and praysed their Idoles of golde, syluer, copper/yrō/ wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fingers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytynge/right ouer against the candelstycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: & the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. Then chaunged the kyng his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled hym/so that the ioyntes of hys body shoke/and hys knees smote one against ỹ other. Wherfore the kynge cryed myghtely that they shulde bringe hym the charmers/Caldees and coniurers of deuels. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon/and sayde: Who so cā rede this wrytinge/and shew me the playne meanyng therof: shalbe clothed with purple/ haue a cheyne of golde about his necke/and rule the thyrde part of my kyngdome.

tes trouble the/ and let not thy countenaūce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome / that hath the spyete of the holy goddes within him / as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandyng & wyldome lyke ỹ goddes. Yee the kyng Nobuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of ỹ sothsayers/charmers/Caldees and deuelcōiurers: because that soche an aboundaunt spyete/knowledge and wyldome (to expoūde dreames/to open secretes/ & to declare harde doubtes) was founde in him: yee euen in Daniel / whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sente for / and he shall tell/what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kynge. So the kynge spake vnto Daniel/ & sayde: Art thou that Daniel/ one of the presoners of Juda / whom my father the kynge brought out of Jewry? I haue hearde speake of the / that thou hast the spyete of the holy goddes/experience and vnderstandyng/and that there hath bene greate wyldome found

Well than / yf thou canst reade thys wrytynge/and shewe me the meanynge therof: thou shalt be clothed with purple/haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke / & rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered/ & sayde before ỹ kyng:

He was shot out from amonge men, his herte was lyke a beastes herte/ and hys dwellynge was wyth the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe/ and hys body was wet with the dew of the heauen: tyll he knew/ that ỹ hyest had power vpon the kingdomes of men/ and

And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for all this/ hast not submytted thyne herte/ though thou knewest all these thynges: but hast magnyfyed thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauē/ so that the vessels of his house were brought before the: that thou/ & thy lordes/ wyth thy quene and concubynes might drynche wyne therout: And hast praysed the Idoles of syluer and golde/ copper and yron/ of wodd and stone: As for the God in whose hande consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou hast not loaued him. G Therfore is the palme of thys hande sent hyther from hym/ to token vp this wryting. And this is the scripture/ that is written vp: Mane/ Thetel/ Phares. Now the interpretacyon of the thynge is thys: Mane/ God hath nombred the kyngdome/ and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balaunce/ and art founde to lyght: Phares/ thy kingdome is delt in partes/ and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar / to cloth Daniel wyth purple / to hange a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke / and to make a proclamacyon concernynge hym: that he shulde be the ruler of the thyrde parte of his kyngdome. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree/ magnyfyeth the God of Daniel.

¶ The.vj. Chapter.

IT pleased Darius to set ouer hys kyngdome an. C. and. xx. Lordes/ A which shulde be in all his kyngdome aboute. Aboue these he set thre Pryuces (of whom Daniel was one) that the lordes myght gene accomptes vnto them/ & the kynge to be vndefeased.

But Daniel exceaded all these Prynces & lordes/ for the spyete of God was plenteous in hym: so that the kynge was mynded to set hym ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the Prynces and Lordes sought / to pycke out in Daniel some quarell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasyō ner faute vpon hym. For why? he was so faythfull/ that there was no blame ner dishonesty founde in him.

Then sayde these men: we will get no quarell agaynst this Daniel/ excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Vpon this/ wente the prynces and lordes together vnto the kynge / and B sayde sayde thus vnto him: king Darius God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greate estates of the realme: as ꝑ Prynces/Dukes/Senatours and Judges, are determed to put out a commaundement of the kynge/& to make a sure statute: namely/ꝑ who so desyreth any petycō/ether of any god or mā (within this .xxx. dayes) excepte it be only of the/O king: the same person may be cast into the lyōs denne. Wherfore/O kyng/confyrme thou this statute/and make a wrytinge: that the thynge whych the Medes and Perses haue ordened be not altered ner broken.

So Darius made the wrytinge/and cōfirmed it. Now when Daniel vnderstode that the wrytinge was made/he wente into hys house: and the wyndowes of his hal towarde Jerusalem stode opē. There kneled he downe vpon his knees/thre tymes a daye: there he made his peticyon/and praysed his God/like as his maner was to do a fore tyme.

Then these men made searche/& founde Daniel makynge hys peticyon/& prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kynge, & spake before him concernyng hys commaūdement/saying: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute/ꝑ within .xxx. dayes who so requyreth his peticyon of any god or mā but only of thy self, O kynge: he shalbe cast in to the denne of the lyons? The kynge answered, & sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses/that maye not be broken.

Then answered they/and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the preconers of Juda O kyng/regardeth nether ꝑ nor thy statute/ that thou hast made/but maketh hys petycō thre tymes a daye. When the kynge herde these wordes, he was sore greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to delyuer hym/& put of the matter/vnto the Sunne wēt downe/ to the intent that he myght saue him.

These men perceauyng the kyng̃ mynde/ sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that ꝑ commaundement & statute which the kyng maketh, maye not be altered. Then the kyng bad them bynge Daniel, and they cast hym in to the Lyons denne. Daniel. vi.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel/and sayde: thy God/whom thou alwaye seruest/ euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone/and layed vpon the hole of the dēne: this the kynge sealed with ꝑ s awne ryng/& wyth the sygnet of hys princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel/shulde not be broken.

So the kynge wente into his palace/& kepte hym sober all nyght so that there was no table spred before hym/nether sould he take any slepe. But bytymes in the morning at the breake of the daye/the kynge arose/ and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nye vnto the denne/he cried with a pyteous voyce vnto Daniel: ꝑe the kynge spake/and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyuynge God/ is not thy God whom thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer the from the lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: O kynge/God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sent his aungell/which hath shut the lyons mouthes, so that they ought not hurte me. For why? myne ongyltynesse is founde out before hym. And as for the/O kynge/I neuer offended the. Daniel. vi. Acts. v. Judicum. v. 1. Reg. xvij. Heb. xi.

Then was the kynge exceading glad, and cōmaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne/ & no maner of hurte was founde vpon hym for he put his trust in hys God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel/the kyng cōmaunded to bringe thē/& to cast thē in the Lyons denne: them, their children and their wyues. So the Lyons had the maistry of them, and brake all their bones a sonder/ or euer they came at the grounde. Hester. vi. Daniel. xiij.

After this/wrote kyng Darius vnto all people kynredes, and tunges that dwelt in all lāde: peace be multiplied vnto you: My cōmaundemēt is/in all my dominyon & kyngdome, that men feare & stande in awe of Daniels God. Daniel. vi.

For he is the lyuynge God/which abydeth euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his power is euerlastynge. It is he that deliuereth/and saueth: he doth wonders and marueilous workes, in heauē and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reygne of Darius and Cirus of Perlia. Daniel. vi. Esay. xlv. Luce. xxi. Daniel. xij.

The .vij. Chapter.

In ꝑ fyrst yeare of Balthazar king of Babylō, saw Daniel a dreame/and a vision was in his head vpon his bedde. Which dreame he wrote/ and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake/and sayde: I sawe in my vysyon by nyght/and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see/and foure great beestes came vp from the see one vnlyke another.

The first was as a lyon/and yet had he Aegles wynges. I sawe/that hys wynges were plucte from him/and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a man/and that there was geuen him a mans herte.

Beholde ꝑ seconde beast was like a beer/ and stode vpō the one side. Amonge his teeth in hys mouth he had.iij. greate longe teeth, & it was sayde vnto him: Arise, eate vp / moch flesh. Then I loked/ and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a leoparde: thys had wynges as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. Thys beast had foure heades, and there was power geuen him. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde the fourth beast was grymme and horrible/ and maruelous stronge. It had great yron teeth it deuoured and destroyed/ & stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hornes/ wherof I toke good hede.

And beholde there came vp amōge them/ another lyttle horne, before whom there were thre of the fyrst hornes pluckte awaye. Beholde this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakynge presumptuous thynges. I loked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyll ꝑ olde aged sat hym downe. His clothing was as whyte as snowe, and the heares of hys head lyke the pure woll. Hys trone was lyke the fyrye flame, and hys wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forth a fyrie streame, & went out from hym. A thousande tymes a thousande serued him. x.M. tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgement was set/ and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede there vnto/ because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which ꝑ horne spake. I beheld/ tyll the beaste was slayne/ and hys body destroyed/ & geuen ouer to be brent in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vyson by nyght / and beholde, there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man/ which wente vnto the olde aged/ before whom they brought him: Then gaue he hym power & dignite regall, that all people tribes and tunges shulde serue him. His power is an euerlastinge power, which shal neuer be put downe: & his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My herte was vexed, & I Daniel had a troubled spirite within me / & the visions of my head made me afrayed: tyll I gat me vnto one of them that stode by / to knowe the trueth concernyng all these thinges. So he tolde me, & made me vnderstande the interpretacyon of these thinges.

These foure greate beastes / are foure kynges which shall aryse out of the earth. These shall take in ꝑ kyngdome of ꝑ saynctes of the most hyest / and possesse it tyll more & more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth / concernyng ꝑ fourth beast / which was so farre vnlyke the other beastes / & so horrible: whose teeth were of yron / and hys nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed / & stamped the residue vnder hys fete. I desyred also to knowe the treuth / as touchynge the ten hornes that he had vpon his head / & this other which came vp afterwarde / before whose face there fell downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thinges, and loked wyth a grymmer bylage then his felowes. I beheld / & ꝑ same horne made battayll agaynst the saynctes / yee and gat the victory of them: vntyll the tyme that the olde aged came that the iudgement was geuē to the chefe saynctes: and till the tyme / that the saynctes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answere: That fourth beast shalbe the fourth kingdome vpō earth: it shalbe more then all other kyngdomes / it shall deuoure / treade downe / and destroye all other landes.

The ten hornes / are ten kinges / that shall aryse out of ꝑ kyngdome / after whom there shall stande vp another / which shalbe greater then the fyrst. He shall subdue thre kynges / & shall speake wordes agaynst the hyest of all: he shal destroye the saynctes of the most hyest / and thynke / that he maye chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be geuen vnder hys power, vntyll a tyme, two tymes, & half a tyme.

But the iudgement shalbe kepte / so that hys power shalbe takē from him / for he shal be destroyed / and perysh at the last. As for ꝑ kyngdome / power and all myght that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe geuen to the holy people of the moost hyest / whose kyngdome is euerlastynge / yee all powers shall serue & obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheles / I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes that my countenaūce chaunged / but the wordes I kepte styll in my herte.

¶ The.viij Chapter.

In the thyrde yeare of the raygne of kynge Balthazar / there apeared a vysiō vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the fyrst. I sawe in a vyson (& when I sawe it I was at Sulis in the chefe cyte, which lyeth in the lande of Elam) and in the vyson, me thought I was by the ryuer of Vlai.

Then I loked vp / and sawe: and beholde there

Balthazar ... Daniel.viij.

there stode before the ryuer/a rãme/which had hornes: and these hornes were hye/but one was hyer then another, & the hyest came vp last. I sawe that this ramme pushed with hys hornes/against the west/against the north/and against the south: so that no beastes myght stande before hym/ner defende them from hys power: but he dyd as hym lysted/& waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this/ & then came there an he goate from the west ouer the whole earth/and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous goodly horne betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the rãme/ that had the two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpõ hym with his myght. I sawe hym drawe nye vnto the ramme beinge very fearce vpõ hym: yee he gaue him soch a stroke/that he brake his two hornes: Nether had the rãme so moch strength as to stande before hym: but he cast him downe/trodde him vnder his fete: & no man was able to deliuer the rãme out of his power.

The goate waxed exceadinge greate/and whẽ he was at the strõgest/his greate horne was broken also. Then grewe there other foure soch like in the stede, towarde the. iiij. wyndes of the heauen.) & out of one of the least of these hornes/there came vp yet another horne/which waxed maruelous greate: towarde the south/towarde the east/and towarde the faire pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen/wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde/& of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yee it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the hoost/from whom the dayly offerynge was taken/& the place of his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuẽ vnto it/against the dayly offerynge (because of wyckednesse) that it myght cast downe the veryte to the grounde/and so to prosper in all thinges, that is wente aboute.

Dani.viij.a.vers. 8.Dach.i.a.

Vpon this I herde one of ỳ sayntes speakinge/which sayute saide vnto one that asked this question: How longe shall this vyson of the dayly sacrifice & of the wastyng abhomynacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenynge & the morynge/euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuary be clensed agayne.

Now when I Daniel had sene this vyshõ/ and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde/there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Vlai/which cryed/& sayde: O Gabriel/make this mã vnderstande the vision. So he came/and stode by me. But I was afrayed at hys commynge/and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man/marcke well/for in the last tyme shall thys vysyon be fulfylled. Now as he was speakinge vnto me/I wared faynte/so that I suncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me/& set me vp agayne/saying: Beholde/I wyll shewe the/what shall happen in ỳ last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfylled.

The ramme whych thou sawest with the two hornes/is the kynge of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kynge of Grecke lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes/that is the prycypall kynge. But where as it brake/and foure other rose vp in the stede: it signifieth/that out of this people shall stande vp foure kyngdomes/but not so myghtye as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growinge) there shall aryse a kyng of an vnshamefast face/which shalbe wyse in darcke speakynges.

He shalbe myghtye and stronge/but not in his awne strẽgth. He shall destroye aboue measure/and all that he goeth aboute shall prosper. he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorow his craftynes/falshed shall prospere in his hande/his herte shalbe proude/and many one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shal stãde vp against the Prynce of Prynces/but he shalbe destroyed without hande. And this vysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenung & the morynng. Therfore wryte thou vp this sight, for it wylbe longe or it come to passe.

ij. Dach. ix. c. v. Esai. viij. d.

Vpon this was I Daniel very faynte/so that I laye sicke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp/I wente aboute the kynges busynesse/and marueled at the vysyon/neuertheles no man knewe of it.

¶ There appeareth vnto Daniel a mā clothed in lynen/which sheweth him wherfore he is sent.

¶ The.x.Chapter.

IN the thyrde yeare of kyng Cirus of Perſia, there was shewed vnto Daniel(otherwise called Balthasar) a matter/yee a true matter/ but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderſtode the matter well/ & perceaued what the vyſyon was. At the ſame tyme / I Daniel mourned for the ſpace of thre weekes/ſo that I had no luſt to eate bred: as for fleſh & wyne there came none wythin my mouth: No / I dyd not ones anoynte my ſelf/ tyll the whole thre wekes were out.

Upon the.xxiiij.daye of the firſt moneth/ I was by the greate floude/called Tigris: I Daniel.vij.b. Apoca.i.c. lyft vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde / a man clothed in lynen / whoſe loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Araby: his body was lyke the Chryſolite ſtone/ his face(to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge/ hys eyes as the flame of fyre, hys armes & fete were lyke fayre glyſtering metall/ but ỳ voyce of his wordes was like ỳ voyce of a multitude.

B I Daniel alone ſawe this viſion/the men Daniel.ix.e Act.ix.a. that were with me / ſaw it not: but a greate fearfulneſſe fell vpon them / ſo that they fled awaye/ & hyd them ſelues. I was left there my ſelf alone/ & ſawe this greate vyſyon/ſo longe tyll there remayned nomore ſtrength within me: yee I loſt my coloure clene / I waſted awaye / and my ſtrength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes: and as ſoone as I herde it/ fayntneſſe came vpō me/ & I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde/an hande touched me/ which ſet me vp vpon my knees & vpon the Daniel.x.b. palmes of my handes. ſayinge vnto me: O Daniel / thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I ſhall ſaye vnto ỳ/ & ſtāde right vp/ for vnto the am I now ſent.

And when he had ſayde theſe wordes / I ¶ ſtode vp trembleyng. Then sayde he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why ſence ỳ firſt daye that thou ſet thyne herte to vnderſtande/and dydeſt chaſten thy ſelfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the/ when thou begānеſt to ſpeake had not ỳ prince ouer the kyngdome of ỳ Perſes Joſue.v.d. Daniel.xj.a. withſtande me.xxi.dayes. But lo/ Michael one of the cheſe princes / came to helpe me / hym haue I left by the king of Perſia/ & am come to ſhewe the / what ſhall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes: for it wylbe longe yet or the vyſyon be fulfylled.

Now when he had ſpoken theſe wordes vnto me/ I kaſt downe my head to ỳ grounde and held my tunge. Beholde/there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth / & ſayde vnto him/that ſtode before me: O my Lorde/ my ioyntes D are lowſed in the viſion/and there is no more ſtrength within me: How may my Lordes ſeruaunt then talke with my Lorde? ſeinge there is no strēgth in me/ſo ỳ I cannot take my breth? Upō this there touched me agayne/one moch lyke a man/and conforted me/ ſayinge: O thou man ſo well beloued, feare Daniel.ix.b. not: be contēt/take a good herte vnto the/ & be ſtrōge. So when he had ſpoken vnto me/ I recouered/ & ſayde: Speake on my Lord/ for thou haſt refreſhed me. Then sayde he: knoweſt thou wherfore I am come vnto ỳ? now wil I go againe to fight wỳ the prince of ỳ Perſes. As ſoone as I go forth/lo/ ỳ prince of Grekelande ſhall come. Neuertheles / I wyll ſhewe the the thinge/ that is faſt noted in the ſcrypture of trueth. And as for all ponder matters / there is none that helpeth me in them/but Michael your prince.

¶ The.xi.Chapter.

AND in the firſt yeare of Darius of I Medea / I ſtode by hym/ to comforte hym/ & to ſtrength him / and now will I ſhewe the the trueth. Beholde/there ſhall ſtande vp yet thre kinges in Perſia/but the fourth ſhalbe farre richer then they all. And when he is in the cheſeſt power of his riches/ he ſhall prouoke euery man agaynſt ỳ realme of Grekelande. Then ſhall there aryſe yet a myghtye kinge / that ſhall rule with greate dompnyon/ & do what him liſt. And as ſoone as his kyngdome co- Daniel.vij.a. meth vp / it ſhalbe deſtroyed/anddeuyded to warde the foure wyndes of the heauen. They i. Mach.i. that come after hym/ſhall not haue ſoch power & dompnyon as he: but hys kyngdome ſhalbe ſcatred / yee euen amonge other then thoſe. And the kyng of ỳ ſouth ſhalbe myghtyer / then hys other princes. Agaynſt hym there ſhall one make himſelf ſtronge/ & ſhall rule his dompnyon with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they ſhalbe ioyned together/and the kynges daughter of the ſouth ſhall come to the kynge of the North/ for to make frendſhyp/ but ſhe ſhall not optayne the power of that arme / neither ſhall B ſhe be able to endure thorow his myght: but ſhe, and ſuch as brought her / yee and he that begather/& cõfoȝtedher foȝ hys tyme) shalbe delyuered vp. Out of the braūches of her rote/there shall one stande vp in his steade: which with power of armes shall go thoȝow the kynges lande of the noȝth/ & handle hym accoȝding to his strength. As foȝ their Idols & princes/ with their costly Jewels of golde & syluer/he shall cary them awaye captyues into Egypte/& he shall preuayle agaynst ỹ kyng of the noȝth certayne yeares. And whē he is come into ỹ kynges realme of ỹ south/ he shalbe fayne to turne agayne into hys awne lande. Wherfoȝe his sonnes shalbe displeased/and shall gather together a myghty greate hoost of people: and one of them shall come/ & go thoȝow like a water flowed: then shall he returne/& gofoȝth with defyinge & boastynge vnto his awne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shalbe angry/ and shall come foȝth to fight agaynst ỹ king of ỹ noȝth: yee he shall bringe a greate multytude of people together/ & a greate heape shalbe geuē into his hande: these shall he cary awaye with greate pryde/ foȝ so moche as he hath cast downe so many thousandes/ neuertheles he shall not preuayle. For the king of the noȝth shall gather (of ỹ new) a greater heape of people then afoȝe/ & come foȝth (after a certayne tyme & yeares) with a mighty hoost & exceadynge greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp agaynst the kinge of the south, so that ỹ wicked chyldren of thy people also shall exalte themselues (to fulfill the vysyon) & then fall. So the kyng of the noȝth shall come to laye sege/ & to take the stronge fensed cities: And the power of them of the south shall not be able to abyde hym / & the best men of the people shal not be so stōge/as to resist him. Shoȝtely, when he commeth, he shall hādle him as he list/ & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst him. He shal stāde in ỹ pleasaunt cōtre/ which thoȝow him shalbe destroyed. He shall set his face wt all his power to optayne his kingdome/ and to be lyke it. Yee that shall he do, and geue hym vnto the daughters amōge wemen/to destroye hym. But he shall fayle/ nether shall he optayne his purpose. After thys shall he set hys face vnto the Iles/ & take many of thē. A prince shall stoppe him, to do hym a shame/ besyde the confusyon that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he tourne agayne to hys awne lande/ stomble/ & fall/ & be nomoȝe founde: so he that came vpō him & dyd hym vyolēce/ shall stande in his place/ & haue a pleasaunt kyngdome: and after few dayes he shalbe destroyed/ & that nether in wȝath / nor in battell. In hys steade there shall aryse a vyle person, not holden worthy of a kynges dygnytye: thys shall come in craftely/ and optayne the kyngdome wyth fayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of ỹ myghtye (and destroye them) yee and agaynst ỹ prince of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath taken truce wyth him, he shal handle dyscreatfully: that he may get vp & ouercome him with a small flocke: & so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of the lande / and to deale otherwyse/ then ether his fathers oȝ graundfathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thing, that they had robbed & spoyled/ yee & all their substaunce: ymagenynge thoughtes agaynst the strong holdes/ & that foȝ a tyme. His power & herte shalbe sterred vp wt a greate armye agaynst the kinge of the south: where thoȝow ỹ king of the south shalbe moued then vnto battell/ with a greate & myghtye hoost also. Neuertheles, he shall not be able to stāde/ foȝ they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yee they ỹ eate of his meate, shall hurte him: so ỹ his hoost shall fall/ & many be slayne downe.

These two kynges shalbe mynded to do mischefe, and talke of dyscreate at one table: ỹ. Mac. v. a. but they shal not prosper: foȝ why/ the ende shall not come yet/ vnto the tyme apoynted. Then shal he go home agayne into his awne lande with great good, & set his hert agaynst the holy couenaunt, he shalbe busy agaynst it, & then returne home. At ỹ tyme appoynted he shall come agayne / & go towarde the south: So shall it happen otherwise then at ỹ fyrst, yet ones agayne. And why/ ỹ shippes of Cethym shal come vpon him/ that he may be smytten & turne agayne: that he may take indignacyon agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yee he shal turne him/ & drawe such vnto him/ as leaue the holy couenaunt. Num. xxiiij.

He shall set myghty men to vnhalowe the Sanctuary of strength/ to put downe the daylye offerynge & to set vp the abhomynable desolacyon. And such as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wyth fayre wordes. But the people ỹ wyll know their God/ shal haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstanding amonge the people shall enstruct the multytude: and foȝ a longe season / they shalbe persecuted wyth sweardе / with fyre/ with captiuite and with stalynge awaye of their goodes. Now whē they fall, they shalbe sett vp wt a lytle helpe: but many shall cleue vnto them faynedly.

Ye some of those which haue vnderstandynge shall be persecuted also: ỹ they maye be tryed, purifyed and clensed / tyll the tyme be out: foȝ there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what him lyst, he shal exalte and magnifye himselfe agaynst all/ thus that is God. Yee he shall speake maruelous thyngs agaynst the God of all goddes/ wherin he shall prospere / so longe tyll the wrath be fulfylled/ for the cõclusyon is decyded alredy. He shall not regarde the God of hys fathers/ but his lust shall be vpon wemen: Yee he shal not care for eny God/ for he shal magnifye him selfe aboue all. In his place shal he worshype the myghtye Idols: and ỹ God whom his fathers knewe not / shall he honoure with golde and syluer/ with precyous stones and pleasaunt Jewels.

Apoca.xv.a.

¶ Thys shall he do, seekynge helpe and succoure at ỹ myghtie Idols & straunge Goddes. Soch as will receaue him/ and take him for God, he shall geue them greate worshype & power: yee and make them lordes of ỹ multytude/ & geue thẽ the land wyth rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kynge of ỹ south stryue with him: and the kynge of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst him wyth charettes/ horsmen and with a greate nauy of shippes. He shall come in to the landes/ destroye and go thorow: he shall entre also in to the fayre pleasaunt lande. Many cyties and countrees shall decaye, excepte Edom/ Moab & the best of the children of Ammon/ which shall escape fromhis hande. He shall stretch forth his hãdes vpon the countrees/ & the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym. For thorow his goynge in / he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer & golde/ & ouer all ỹ precious Jewels of Egypt/ Lybia and Ethiopia. Neuertheles the tydyngs out of the East & the north shal trouble him: for the whych cause he shall goo forth to destroye & curse a greate multitude. The tẽtes of his palace shall be pytch betwyxte ỹ two seas vpon the hyll of the noble Sanctuary/ for he shall come to the ende of it/ & then shal no man helpe him.

¶ The ende of the Prophecy of Daniel.

¶ The tyme wherin Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by takynge an harlot to his wyfe signifieth the Idolatrye of the people. The destrucpõ of the offspring of Jehu/ and of the Israelytes/ as prophecyed.

¶ The. first. Chapter.

THis is the Worde of the Lord/ that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery, in ỹ dayes of Oseas, Joathan / Ahas & Jezekiah kynges of Juda: & in the tyme of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israell.

First when the Lorde spake vnto Oseas he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, take an harlott to thy wife/ and get children by her: for the lande hath committed greate whordome

a. That is cõsummacion: because the kingdome of Israel and Juda shulde shortly be consumed.

b. That is/ Example of hygges: because of the greate delicyousnes & voluptuousnes þ Juda & Israel were in.

against the Lorde. So he went / and toke *Gomer þ daughter of  Deblaim: which conceaued, and brought forth a sonne. And þ Lord sayde vnto him: call his name *Jesrael, for I will shortly auenge the blonde of Jesrael vpon the house of Jehu / and will bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israell to an ende. Then will I breake the bowe of Israel in the valley of Jesrael.

She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayde vnto hym: Call her name *Loruhamah, that is, not optayning mercy) for I will haue no pyte vpõ þ house of Israel, but forget them, & put thẽ cleane out of remembraunce. Neuertheles I will haue mercy vpon the house of Juda / & will saue thẽ euen thorow the Lorde their God. But I will not delyuer them thorowe eny bowe/ swearde/ batell/ horses or horsmen.

Now when she had weaned Loruhamah/ she conceaued agayne/ & bare a sonne. Then sayde he: call his name, *Lo amy. For why? ye are not my people / therfore wyl not I be yours. And though the nombre of the childrẽ of Israel be as the sande of the see / whych cã nether be measured ner tolde: yet in the place where it is sayde vnto thẽ / ye be not my people: euẽ there shal it be thus reported of thẽ: they be the childrẽ of the lyuyng God. Then shall the childrẽ of Juda and the children of Israel be gathered together agayne / & chose thẽ selues one head / and then departe out of the lande: for greate shalbe þ daye of Israel.

¶ The people is called vnto repentaunce.

¶ The .ij. Chapter.

Tell youre brethren / that they are my people: and youre systerẽ / that they haue optayned mercy. As for your *mother / ye shal chyde with her & reproue her: for she is not my wyfe / nether am I her husbande / vnlesse she put awaye her whordome out of my syght, & her aduoutry from her brestes. If no I shal stripe her naked, & sett her euen as she came in to the worlde: yee I shall laye her waste, and make her like a wildernesse / and slaye her for thyrste. I shal haue no pite also vpõ her children, for they be the children of fornicacyon.

Their mother hath brokẽ her wedlocke / and she that bare thẽ, is come to confusyon. For she sayd: I will go after my louers, that geue me my water and my bred / my woll & flax / my oyle and my drynke. But I will hedge her waye with thornes / and stoppe it / that she shall not fynde her foteteppes: and though she runne after her louers / yet shall she not get them: she shall seke them / but not fynde them. Then shall she saye: well / I will go turne agayne to my fyrst housbande / for at that tyme was I better at ease / then now

But this wolde she not knowe / where as I yet gaue her corne / wyne / oyle / syluer and golde / which she hath hanged vpon Baall.

Wherfore now will I go take my corne & wyne agayne in their season / and fet agayne my woll and my flax / whych I gaue her / to couer her shame. And now will I discouer her foolyshnesse / euen in the syght of her louers / and no man shall delyuer her out of my handes. Moreouer / I wil take awaye al her myrth / her holy dayes / her newmoones / her Sabbathes and all her solempne feastes: I will destroye her vynyardes and fygetrees / though she sayeth: lo / here are myne rewardes / that my louers haue geuẽ me. I will make it a wodde / and the wylde beestes shall eate it vp: I will punish her also for the dayes of Baall / wherin she censed him / decking him with her earinges & cheynes: when she followed her louers / & forgat me / sayeth þ Lord.

Wherfore beholde / I will call her agayne bringe her in to a wildernes / & speake frendly vnto her: there wil I geue her her vynyardes agayne / yee and the valley of Achor also to shewe her hope and comforte. Then shall she synge there as in the tyme of her youth / & lyke as in the daye when she came out of þ lande of Egipte. Then, sayeth the Lorde she shall saye vnto me: O my housbande, & shall call me nomore Baal: for I wil take awaye those names of Baall from her mouth / yee she shall neuer remembre theyr names eny more. Then will I make a couenaunt wyth them, with the wylde beastes / wyth the foules of the ayre / & with euerythynge that creepeth vpon the earth.

As for bowe / swerde and batell / I will destroye sech out of the lande / & will make thẽ to slepe safely. Thus will I mary the vnto myne awne selfe for euermore: yee euẽ to my selfe will I mary the / in ryghtuousnesse / in equyte / in louynge kyndnesse and mercy. In fayth also will I mary þ vnto my self / & thou shalt knowe the Lord. At the same tyme will I shewe my selfe frendly and gracious vnto the heauens / sayeth the Lorde: & the heauẽs shall helpe the earth / & the earth shall helpe the corne / wyne and oyle / & they shall helpe Jesrael. I will sowe them vpon earth / for a sede to myne awne selfe / & will haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy And to thẽ which were not my people / I will saye: thou art my people. And he shall saye: thou art my God.

¶ A cõplaynte agaynst ꝑ people & ꝑ prestes of Israel.

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

Heare the worde of the Lord / O ye chyldren of Israel: For the Lorde must punish thẽ / that dwell in the land. And why? There is no faithfulnesse / there is no mercye / there is no knowledge of God in the lande: but swearyng, lyenge, manslaughter theft & aduoutry haue gottẽ the ouerhande / & one bloudgyltinesse foloweth another. Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case & all they ꝑ dwell therin / shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre / & the fysshes in the see shall dye. Yet is there none / ꝑ wyll chasten nor reproue another. The prestes wyche shulde reforme other men / are become lyke the people.

Therfore stombleste thou in the daye time & the prophet with the in ꝑ nyght. I will bring thy mother to sylence and why? my people perysshe / because they haue no knowledge. Seing then ꝑ thou hast refused vnderstandyng therfore will I refuse ꝑ also: so ꝑ thou shalt nomore be my prest. And for so moch as thou hast forgottẽ ꝑ lawe of thy God I will also forget thy chyldren The more they increased in the multitude / ꝑ more they synned agaynst me / therfore wyll I change their honoure in to shame. They eate vp the synnes of my people / & corage them in their wyckednesse. Thus the prest is become lyke the people, Wherfore I wyll punysh thẽ for their wicked wayes / & rewarde them accordinge to their awne ymagynacyons. They shall eate and not haue ynough: They haue *vsed whordome / therfore shall they not prosper: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde / and not regarded him.

Whordome, wyne and dronckennesse take the herte awaye. My people aske counsell at their stockes their staffe must tell them. For an whorish mynde hath disceaued them / so that they cõmytte fornycacyõ agaynst their God. They make sacrifices vpõ the hye mountaynes, & burne their incense vpõ the hilles / yee amonge the okes, groues & bukkes for there are good shadowes. Therfore youre daughters are become harlottes / and youre spouses haue brokẽ their wedlocke / I wyll not punysh your daughters for beinge defyled / & youre bydes ꝑ became whores: seing ꝑ fathers thẽselues haue medled with harlottes / & offered with vnthryftes: but the people that wyll not vnderstande must be punysshed.

Though thou b Israel art disposed to playe the harlot yet shuldest not thou haue offended O Iuda: thou shuldest not haue runne to Galgala, nether haue gone vp to Bethauen / nether haue sworne, ꝑ Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe like a wãton cowe. The Lorde therfore shal make her fede as ꝑ lãbe ꝑ goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idols, wel let hi go. Their drõckennes hath put thẽ backe & brought them to whordom. Their rulers loue rewardes, bynge (sayeth they) to their awne shame. The winde shal take holde of their fethers / & they shalbe confounded in their offrynges.

¶ Agaynst the prestes & rulers of Israel. The helpe of man can do nothinge agaynst God.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

Ye prestes: heare this / take hede / O thou housholde of Israel: geue eare / O thou kyngly house: for this punishment wyll come vpon you ꝑ are become a snare vnto Maspha / & a sprednet vnto ꝑ mount of Thabor. They kyll sacrifyces by heapes, *to begyle ꝑ people therwith: therfore wyll I punish the all. I know Ephraim well ynough & Israell is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot: & Israell is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God for they haue an whorish hert, for they can not know ꝑ Lorde.

But the pryde of Israel will be rewarded him in his face yee both Israel & Ephraim shall fall for their wickednesse / and Iuda with them also. They shall come with their shepe & bullockes to seke the Lorde / but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone frõ thẽ. As for the Lorde, they haue refused him, & brought vp bastarde chyldren: a moneth therfore shal deuoure thẽ with their portions. Blowe with the shawmes at Gabea / & with the trõpet in Rama cry out at Bethauẽ vpõ the tõpe of Benjamin. In ꝑ tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layed waste, therfore vpon I faithfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are the prynces of Iuda become lyke thẽ, ꝑ remoue ꝑ lãdemarches therfore wyll I poure out my wrath vpon thẽ lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no ryght of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrynes of men.

For I haue pleasure in louyng kyndnesse, and not in offeryng: yee in the knowledge of God, more then in burnt sacrifice. But euē like as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt / and set me at naught. Galaad is a cite of wicked doers: of malycyous people and bloudshedders. The multytude of the Prestes is lyke an heape of theues, murtherers & bloudthurstye: for they haue wrought abhomynacyon. Horrible thinges haue I sene in the house of Israel / there playeth Ephraim the harlot / & Israel is defyled: but Juda shal haue an harueste for ỹm selfe / when I returne the captyuite of my people.

¶ The.vij. Chapter.

When I vndertake to make Israel whole, then the vngracyousnesse of Ephraim and the wickednes of Samaria cōmeth to lyght: then go they aboute with lyes. At home, they be theues: and without they fall to robbynge. They consydre not in their hertes that I remembre all their wickednes. They go about with their awne inuencyons but I se them well ynough. They make the kynge and the pynces / to haue pleasure in their wickednes a lyes. All these burne in aduoutry / as it were an ouen that the baker heateth / whē he hath lefte kneadynge / tyll the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kynges and pynces / for they begynne to be wode dronken thorow wyne: they vse famyliarite with soch as dysceaue them. They with the ymagynacyō of their herte are lyke an ouen / their slepe is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker / in the morning is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their awne iudges / all their kynges are fallen: yet is there none of them that calleth vpō me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixte amōge ỹ Heathē. Ephraim is become lyke a cake / that no man turneth: straūgers haue deuoured his strēgth / yet he regardeth it not: he wareth full of grayheares / yet wyll he not knowe it: & the pryde of Israel is cast downe before their face / yet wyll they not turne to ỹ Lorde their God ner seke him for all this.

The abhominacyon of Ephraim is come also in to Israel. He is gone backe to Baal / therfore must he dye. And now they synne more and more: of their syluer/they make them moltē Images / lyke the Idols of the Heathen/and yet all is nothyng but ỹ worcke of the craftesman. Sophi.i.c. Amos.v.c.

lous fearfull daye of the Lorde: And who is able to abyde it.

Now therfore sayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes/wyth fastynge, wepyng and mournynge/rente youre hertes/& not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde youre God / for he is gracyous & mercyfull, longe sufferyng & of greate compassyon: & redy to pardone wickednes. Then (no doute) he also shall turne/& forgeue: and after his chastenynge/he shall let youre increase remayne/for meate & drynkoffringes vnto the Lorde youre God? Blowe out with the trompet in Syon/ proclame a fastinge/ call the congregacyō/& gather the people together: warne the congregacyon / gather the elders/bringe the chyldrē & suckelynge together. Let the bridgrome go forth of hys chābre/& the bryde out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lorde betwixte ꝧ porch & the aulter/wepinge & sayinge: be fauourable/O Lorde / be fauorable vnto thy people: let not thyne heretage be brought to soch cōfusion/lest the Heathen be lordes therof. Wher for shulde they saye amonge the Heathen: where is now their God?

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer hys lande/& spare his people: yee the Lorde shal answere/& saye vnto his people: Beholde/I will sende you corne/wyne/& oyle/so that ye shall haue plenty of them: & I wyll nomore geue you ouer to be a reproffe amōge ꝧ Heathen. Agayne as for hym of ꝧ North, I shal dryue him farre from you: & shute him out into a drye & waste lande/his face towarde the east see/and hys hynder partes towarde the vtmost see. The stynche of hym shall go vp/and his fylthy corrupcion shall fall vpon hymselfe/ because he hath dealte so proudly. Feare not (O lande) but be glad and reioyse/ for the Lorde wyll do greate thinges. Be not ye afrayed nether (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shalbe grene/ and the trees shall beare their frute: the fygetrees & vynes yardes shall geue their increase.

Beglad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) & reioyse in the Lorde youre God/ for he hath geuē you a teacher of ryghtuousnes: & he it is ꝧ shal sende you downe shuwers of rayne/ early and late in the first moneth: so that the garners shalbe full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeares ꝧ the grashopper locuste blastinge & caterpyller (my greate hoost/which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp/I shall restore them to you agayne: so that ye shall haue ynough to eate/and be satysfyed: and prayse the name of the Lorde youre God/ that so marueloussly hath dealte with you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall well knowe / that I am in the middest of Israel and that I am your God: yee & ꝧ there is none other/& my people shall no more be brought to confusyon.

After this / wil I poure out my spyrete vpō all flesh: and your sonnes & your daughters shall prophecy: your olde men shall dreame *dreames & youre yōge men shall se visiōs yee in those dayes I will poure out my spyrete vpon seruauntes and maydens. I will shewe wonders in heauen aboue & tokēs in ꝧ earth beneth: bloude and fyre/ and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shalbe turned in to darknesse/& ꝧ moone into bloude: before ꝧ greate & notable daye of ꝧ Lorde come And ꝧ tyme shall come: ꝧ whosoeuer calleth on the name of ꝧ Lorde/shalbe saued. For vpon the mount Syon & at Jerusalem/there shalbe a saluacyon/ lyke as the Lorde hath promysed: yee and amonge the other remnaunt whom the Lorde shall call.

Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of his people.

The .iij. Chapter.

For take hede: in those dayes & at ꝧ same tyme, whē I turne agayne the captyuyte of Juda & Jerusalē: I shall gather all people together/ & bringe them in the valley of Josaphat: and there will I reason with thē: because of my people & heretage of Israel: whō they haue scatred aboute in the nacyons / & parted my lande: yee they haue cast lottes for my people/the ponge men haue they set in ꝧ bordel house/& solde the Damsels for wyne/ ꝧ they might haue to drincke. Thou Tirus & Sidō and all ye borders of the Philystynes: what haue ye to do wyth me? Wyll ye deale me? well/ yf ye wyll nedes delye me I shall recōpence you/euē vpon youre head/& ꝧ right shortly: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer & golde/ my fayre & goodly Jewels/ & brought thē in to youre godes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto the Grekes that ye might bringe them farre frō the borders of their awne countrees.

Beholde therfore/I wyll rayse them out of the place/where ye haue solde them & will rewarde you euen vpon youre head. Youre sonnes & youre daughters will I sell thorow the handes of the chyldrē of Juda / & so they shall geue thē forth to sell / vnto thē of Saba a people of a farre coūtre: for the Lorde hymself hath sayde it. Crie out these thinges amonge ꝧ Gentiles, proclame warre, wake vp the grauntes / let them drawe nye let thē come vp all the lusty warryours of thē. Make you swearedes of youre plowshares / and speares of youre sycles & sythes. Let ꝧ weake man saye: I am stronge. Muster you, and HEare thys worde / O ye house of Israel/ & why: I must make thys mone for you: The virgyn Israel shall fall/ & neuer ryse vp agayne: she shalbe cast downe vpō her awne groūde/ & no man shall helpe her vp. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Where as there dwelt a M. in one cyte/ there shalbe left scarce an hundreth therin: & where there dwelt an C. there shall scarce ten be left for & house of Israel. Neuertheles/thus sayeth the Lorde vnto & house of Israel: Seke after me/and ye shall ¶ lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Galgal, and go not to Berlaba: for Galgal shalbe caried awaye captyue/ & Bethel shal come to naught. Seke the Lorde/ that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Joseph be brent with fyre and consumed/ & lest there be none to quench Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwod/ and cast downe ryghtuousnes vnto the grounde. The Lorde maketh the. vii. starres and the Ory- Iob.ix.a ons he turneth the nyght into dayr / and of ¶ the daye he maketh darcknesse. He calleth the Amos.v.b waters of the see/ & poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: the Lorde is hys name. He rayseth destruccyō vpon the myghty people/ & bryngeth downe the stronge holde: but they owe him euell wyll/ & reproueth them opēly: & who so telleth thē the playne trueth/ they abhorre him. For so moch then as ye oppresse the poore/ & robbe hym of his best substenaunce: therfore/ where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone/ye shall not dwell in them. Shall not the daye of the Lorde be darcke/ and not cleare? shall it not be cloudy / and no shyne in it?

I hate and abhorre youre holy dayes/and where as ye cense me whē ye come together I will not accepte it. And though ye offre me brentofferynges and meatofferynges/ yet haue I no pleasure therin. As for youre fat thanckofferynges/ I wyll not loke vpon thē I waye with that noyse of thy songes/ I wil not heare thy playes of musick: but se that ¶ equyte flowe as the water / and ryghtuousnesse as a myghtye streame. ¶ The fyrst Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas ỹ sonne of Amithai/saying: Aryse and get the to Nynive that greate cyte: & preache vnto them/how that their wyckednes is come vp before me. And Jonas made hym ready to flē vnto * Charsis frō the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Joppa: where he founde a shyppe ready for to go vnto Charsis. So he payde his fare/& went aborde/that he myght go wyth them vnto Charsis/from the presence of ỹ Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde in to

Then the maryners were afrayde/ and cryed euery man vnto hys god: & the goodes that were in the shyppe, they cast in to the see /to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gatt hym vnder the hatches / where he layed him downe and slombred.

B So the master of the shyppe came to him and sayde vnto hym: why slomberest thou? vp/call vpon thy God: yf God (happely) will thynke vpon vs / that we perysshe not. And they sayde one to another: come / lett vs cast lottes: that we maye knowe/for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes/and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Josu. vij. c

C Then sayde they vnto him: tell vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacyon? whence commest thou? what countre man art thou/ and of what nacyon? He answered them: I am an Ebrue / and I feare the Lorde God of heauen /whych made both the see and drye lande. Then were the men exceadingly afrayed/ & sayde vnto hym: why didest thou so? (for they knewe/ that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde / because he had tolde them) and sayde moreouer vnto hym: What shall we do vnto the / that the see maye ceasse from troublinge vs? I

* The scripture speaketh of hell comenly as of a place comen for all that go doune in to the earth/as in to a graue: to the depe of ffleesh &c. as ye haue in Genesi and in the Psalmes.

But the Lorde prepared a greate fyshe/to swalow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fysh / thre dayes & thre nightes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God out of ỳ fysshes belly, and sayde: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde & he herde me: out of the belly of * hell I cryed / & thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the see / and the floude compased me about: yee all thy wawes and rowles of water went ouer me/I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syght: but I will yet agayne loke towarde thy holy temple.

The waters compased me/euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me / & the wedes were wrapte aboute myne head. I went downe to the botome of the hylles / and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou /O C Lorde my God / hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcyon. When my soule fainted within me/I thought vpō the Lorde: & my prayer came in vnto the/ euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vani- D ties/will forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifyce with the voyce of thankesgeuynge/and will paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacion cōmeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysh/ and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

And Jonas wente to / and entred in to the cyte: euen a dayes iourney & cryed/ sayēge: There are yet xl. dayes and then shal Nínive E be ouerthrowen. And the people of Nínive beleued God/and proclamed fastynge / and arayed them selues in * sack cloth / as well the greate as the small of them. And the tydinges came vnto ỳ kinge of Nínive/ which arose out of his seate / & layd his apparell of/ and put on sack cloth / and sate hym downe in asshes.

* The arayenge the in sack cloth was an outewarde signe of great repentaūce / as in ii. reg. iii. f.

And it was cryed and commaunded in Nínive by the auctorite of the kinge and hys lordes/sayenge: se that nether man or beest / ore or shepe taste ought at all: and that they nether fede ner drynke water: but put on sack cloth both man and beest/and crye mightely vnto God: yee se that euery man turne from hys euell waye / and from the wyckednesse/ that he hath in hande.

Who can tell? God maye turne/ & repente/and cease from his fearce wrath/that we perysh not. And when God sawe their workes/how they turned from their wicked wayes. he repented on the euell/ which he sayde he wolde do vnto them/ and dyd it not.

IT happened also in the fourth yeare of kinge Darius / that the worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto Zacharyah in the fourth daye of the .ix. moneth / which is called. *Casleu: what time as Sarasar & Regomelech & the men that were with thẽ sent vnto Bethell for to praye before the Lorde: & that they shulde saye vnto the prestes / which were in the house of the Lord of hoostes, & to the prophetes: Shuld I wepe in the fyfte moneth / and absteyne / as I haue done now certayne yeares? Then came the worde of the Lorde of hoostes vnto me / sayenge: Speake vnto all the people of the lande, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in the v and vii. moneth (now thys .lxx. yeares) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke / dyd ye not eate & drinke for youre awne selues? Are not these the wordes / which the Lorde spake by hys prophetes afore tyme / when Jerusalem was yet inhabyted and welthy / she and the cytyes rounde about her: when there dwelt mẽ / both towarde the south and in the playne countrees?

And now make youre prayer before God / that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for soch thinges haue ye done. Shal he regarde youre persones / thynke ye / sayeth the Lorde of hostes? Yee what is he amonge you / ꝑ wyll do so moch as to shut ꝑ dores / or to kyndle ꝑ fyre vpō myne auiter for naught? I haue no pleasure in you / sayeth the Lorde of hostes: and as for the meatoffringe / I wyll not accepte it at youre hande. For from the rysyng vp of the sonne vnto the goinge downe of the same / my name is greate amonge the Gentiles: yee in euery place shall there sacrifice be done / & a clene meatoffring offred vp vnto my name: for my name is great amonge the Heathē, sayeth ꝑ Lord of hostes. But ye haue vnhalowed it / in that ye saye / ꝑ auiter of the Lorde is not to be regarded / & the thing that is set therupon not worthy to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but laboure and trauayle / and thus haue ye thought scorne at it (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) offerynge robbery / yee the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meatoffryng / shulde I accepte it of youre hande / sayeth the Lorde? Cursed be the dissembler / which hath in his flocke one that is male / and when he maketh a vowe / offereth a spoted one vnto the Lord. For I am a greate kynge (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) and my name is fearfull amonge the Heathen.

And now (O ye prestes) this commaundement toucheth you: yf ye wyl not heare it, ner regarde it / to geue ꝑ glory vnto my name / saieth the Lorde of hostes / I wyll sende a curse vpō yeu / & wyll curse youre blessynges: yee curse them wyll I yf ye do not take hede. lempne fealtes and it shal cleue fast vpō you And ye shall knowe / that I haue sent thys commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made vō Leui / myght stande sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

I made a couenaunt of life & peace wyth him: thys I gaue hym / that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me / and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of trueth B was in his mouth and there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with Rom.xvb.c. me in peace and equyte / and dyd turne many one awaye from their synnes. For the prestes lippes shulde be sure knowledge / & men maye seke the lawe at his mouth / for he is a messaunger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you / ye are gone clene out of ỳ waye / and haue caused ỳ multytude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue vyoken the couenaunt Deute.xxviij.b of Leui / sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Therfore wyll I also make you to be despised / and to be of no reputacyon amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes / but bene parciall in the lawe.

Haue we not all one father? Hath not one Eph.iiij.a. God made vs? why doth euery one of vs then C despyse his awne brother / and so breake the Zach.xij.b. couenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Juda xiij.c. offended: yee the abhominacyon is done in 1.Esd.ix.a. Israel & in Jerusalem / for Juda hath despy- Leui.xxi.c. led the Sanctuary of the Lorde which he loued / & hath kepte the daughter of a straūge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the mā ỳ doth this (yee both the master and the scolar) out of the tabernacle of Jacob / with hym ỳ offreth vp meatofferynge vnto the Lorde of hostes. Now haue ye brought it to thys poynte agayne / that the aulter of the Lorde is couered with teares weppynge and mournynge: so that I wyll nomore regarde the meatofferyng / nether wyll I receaue or accepte eny thynge at youre hādes. So dyd not* the one / & yet had he an excellent spyrte. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promysed of God. Therfore loke well to youre spyrte / & lett no man despyse ỳ wife of his youth. If thou hatest her put her awaye / sayeth the Lorde God of Israel and geue her a clothinge for the scorne / sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Loke well then to youre spyrte / and despyse her not. Ye greue the Lorde with youre wordes / and yet ye saye: wherwith all haue we greued hym? In this / ỳ ye saye: All that do euell are good in the sight of God / and such please hym. Or els where is the God that punisheth?

¶ Josias holdeth passeouer. After his death is Jechonias hys sonne made kynge in hys steade: whom the kynge of Egypt putteth out/& setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed/& Sedechias taken.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

AND Josias helde the feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lorde and slewe the Passeouer the .xiiij. daye of ỹ fyrst moneth. He set the Prestes also in ordre accordynge to their dayly courses, being arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto ỹ Leuytes the holy mynisters of Israel/that they shulde halowe thē selues vnto the Lorde/to set the holy arcke of the Lorde/in the house that King Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded/ and sayde: Ye shall no more beare the Arcke vpon youre shulders. Now serue youre Lorde/& take ỹ charge of hys people of Israel/ after youre villages and youre trybes: accordynge as Kynge Dauid the kynge of Israel hath ordened/& accordynge as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: yee loke that ye al do seruyce in the temple/ accordynge to the ordring & distribucyō of the principall men which are appoynted out of the tribes/& do seruice for the childrē of Israel. Kyll ỹ Passeouer/& prepare offringes for your brethrē/ & do accordynge to the commaundement of the Lorde/which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto ỹ people ỹ was founde Josias gaue .xxx. thousande of shepe/lambes/kyddes/& goates/& thre thousande oxē. These the kynge (of his kyngly liberalite) gaue vnto the people/accordynge as he had promysed: & to the Prestes for the Passeouer) he gaue two .M. shepe/ & an hundreth oxen. Moreouer/Jechonias & Semeias/& Nathanael brethrē/ & Halabias, Jehiel, and Jolabad gaue them to the Passeouer/ fyue thousande shepe and fyue hundreth bullockes.

B And when these thynges were brought to passe/the Prestes & the Leuytes stode goodly in their ordre/and had the vnleuened bred throwout the trybes. And after the ordring of the principall men in the trybes/they offered vnto the Lorde in the syght of the people/accordyng as it is written in the boke of Moses/& so they rosted the Easter lambe as accordynge was. As for the thanckeoffrings and the other/ they dight them in kettels and pottes/& set them before the people wt good wyll/and afterwarde before them selues/ & the Prestes. For the Preastes offred the fatt/ vntyll the tyme was expyred/but ỹ Leuites prepared for them selues & for their brethrē the childrē of Aaron. The syngers also ỹ children of Asaph stode in their ordre/accordyng as Dauid had deuised. So did Asaph Zacharye & Jduthun/which were appoynted by the kynge. Moreouer the porters & dore kepers stode by ỹ dores & ỹ diligētly/so ỹ none wēt out of his standynge & seruyce: for their brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thynges perfourmed/ that belonged to the offerynge of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Passeouer/& offred thankofferynges beside the sacrifyce of the Lorde/ accordyng to ỹ cōmaundemēt of kyng Josias.

So ỹ childrē of Israel which were then present helde an honorable Passeouer/& the feast of swete bread .vij. dayes lōge. Yee soch a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel/frō the tyme of the Prophet Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel helde not soch an Easter/ as this which kyng Josias helde/& ỹ prestes/ỹ Leuites/the Jewes & all Israel/of all thē ỹ were at Jerusalē. And in ỹ .xviij. yere of ỹ raigne of Josias was this Passeouer kept. And wt a parfecte herte dyd kyng Josias ordre all hys workes/before ỹ Lorde/& ỹ thynges ỹ were wrytte of him in times past/cōcerning those ỹ synned & were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before all people/ & ỹ sought not the worde of ỹ Lorde vpō Israel.* After al these acters of kyng Josias/Pharao ỹ kyng of Egypte went vp & came towarde Carcamus by Euphrates/& Josias wēt to mete him Then sent the kyng of Egypte vnto Josias sayīg: what haue I to do wt the/ O kyng of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the/for my warre is vpo Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayne in all the haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpō his chare, but vndertoke to fight agaynst him/and herkened not vnto the worde of the prophet/ which he tolde him out of the mouth of God/ but pytcheda battayll agaynst him in ỹ feld of Mageddo. And ỹ princes preached to king Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto hys seruaūtes: Cary me awaye out of the battayll/ for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes tooke him awaye out of the front of the battayll. Then sat he vp vpō ỹ seconde charett/came to Jerusalem/ dyed/ and was buryed in his fathers sepulcre. And in all Jewry they mourned for Josias/yee the rulers also with their wyues made lamentacyō for him vnto this daye: And thys was done euer syth in Israel.

¶ Syr / thy seruaūtes Rathimus the storye wryter/ Sabellius the Scribe/ & other iudges of the courte in Celosyria & Phenyces. Be it knowne & manyfest to oure Lorde the Kynge/ ỹ the Jewes which are come vp from you vnto vs vnto the rebellyous & wicked cite/ begynne to buylde it agayne/ & ỹ walles aboute it/ & to set vp the temple of the new. Now yf this cytye & the walles therof be set vp agayne/ they shall not only refuse to geue trybutes and tares / but also rebell vtterly agaynst the Kynge. And for so moch as they take this in hande now aboute the tēple/ we thought it reason/ to thynke no scorne of it/ but to shewe it vnto oure Lorde the Kyng/ & to certyfye hym therof: to thintent that yf it please the Kynge/ he may cause it be sought in the bokes of olde: & thou shalt fynde sothe warnynge wrytte/ & shalt vnderstande/ that this cytie hath all waye bene rebellyous and disobediēt/ that it hath subdued Kynges and cytyes/ and that the Jewes which dwell ther in/ haue euer bene a rebellyous/ obstynate/ vnfaythfull/ & fyghtyng people/ for ỹ which cause this cytye is wasted. Wherfore now we certyfye oure Lorde the Kynge/ ỹ yf this cytye be buylded & occupyed agayne/ and the walles therof set vp a new/ thou canst haue no passage into Celosyria and Phenices.

D Then wrote the Kynge to Rathimus the storye wryter/ to Balthemus/ to Sabellius the Scribe/ & to the other officers & dwellers in Syria and Phenyces / after thys maner: I haue red the epistle which thou sentest vnto me/ & haue commaunded to make diligēt search/ & haue founde/ ỹ the cytye hath euer resysted Kynges / that the same people are dysobedient/ and haue caused moch warre/ & that myghty Kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem / which also haue rayscd vp tares of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore I haue cōmaunded those people / that they shall not buylde the cytye/ that they make no more in it and that they proceade no further with the buyldynge: for so moche as it myght be the cause of warre/ & dysplcasure vnto Kynges.

Now when Rathymus and Sabellius the Scrybe/ & the rulers in the lande had red the wrytinge of Kyng Artaxerses/ they gatt them together/ & came in all the haste to Jerusalem wᵗ an hoost of horsmen/ & wᵗ moche people of fote/ & forbad thē to buylde. And so they left of from buyldynge of the temple/ vnto the second yeare of Kynge Darius.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The .iij. sentences of the .iij. younge men of which the first is declared.

¶ The .iij. Chapter.

KYnge Darius made a great feast vnto his seruauntes, vnto all hys courte/ & to all ỹ officers of Medea & Persia/ yee to all the debytes & rulers that were vnder him/ from India vnto Ethiopia/ an hundreth & .xxvij. countres. So when they had eaten & dronken beinge satysfyed/ and were gone home agayne. Darius the Kyng wēte into his chambre/ layed hym downe to slepe/ & so awaked. B

Then the thre yonge men/ that kepte the Kynges persone/ and watched his body/ cōmoned amonge them selues/ & spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye some thing/ & loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other/ vnto hym shall Kynge Darius geue greate gyftes/ and clothe hym wyth purple. He shall geue hym vessels of golde to dryncke in/ clothes of golde & couerynges: he shall make hym a costely charet & a brydle of golde/ he shall geue hym a bonet of whyte sylke/ & a cheyne of golde aboute hys neck: yee he shalbe the seconde and principall nexte vnto Kynge Darius / and that because of hys wysdome/ and shalbe called the Kynges kynsman. B.

So euery one wrote his meaning/ sealed it/ & layed it vnder the Kynges pelowe / and sayde: when the Kyng arysyth/ we wyll geue hym oure wrytinges: and loke whose worde the Kynge and hys chefe Lordes iudge to be the moost wysely spokē/ the same shall haue the victory. One wrote: Wyne is a stronge thynge. The second wrote: The Kyng is strōger The thyrd wrote: Women haue yet more strēgth/ but aboue all thinges ỹ trueth beareth awaye ỹ victory Now when the Kynge was risen vp/ they toke their wrytinges and delyuered them vnto hym / and so he red thē. Then sent he forth to call al his chefe lordes/ all the debytes and rulers of the contrees of Medea and Persia. And when they were set downe in the councell / the wrytinges were C red before them. And he commaunded to call for the younge men that they myght declare their meanynges thē selues by mouth. So when they were sent for/ & came in the kyng sayde vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnderstande/ what the thynges are that ye haue wrytten.

Then beganne the fyrst (which had spokē of the strength of wyne) & sayde: O ye men/ wyne is maruelous stronge/ & ouercōmeth them y dryncke it: it disceaueth the mynde/ & bryngeth both the poore man & the kynge to bondage and vanite. Thus doth it also with the bondman and with the fre with the poore & ryche: it taketh awaye their vnderstandyng/ and maketh them careles and mery/ so that none of them remembreth any heuynes/ dett or bewtie: It causeth a man to thynke also that the thinge which he doth/ is honest and good: & remembreth not that he is a kynge/ nor that he is in auctorite/ & y he ought not to do soch thynges. Moreouer/ whē men are dryncknynge they forget all frendshyppe all brotherly faythfulnes & loue: but as soone as they are dronkē/ they drawe out y swerde & wyl fight: & when they are layed downe frō the wyne/ & so rysen vp agayne/ they can not tell what they dyd: iudge ye now/ is not wyne the strōgest? For who wolde els take in hand to do soche thynges? And when he had spokē this he helde his tonge.

¶ The declaracyō of the .v. last sentences of the yōg men/ propounded in the Chapter before: of which the last/ that is/ that veritye beareth the victorye in all thinges/ is most cōmended & alowed. Darius writeth letters to all the rulers vnder hym/ that they shulde ayde Zorobabel to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

Then the seconde/ which had sayde/ that the kynge was stronger/ begāne to speake saying: O ye men/ are not they the stronge & most excellent, that conquere the lande & the see, & all that is in the see & in the earth? Now is the kynge lorde of all these thynges/ & hath dominyō of them all: and loke what he commaūdeth it is done. If he sende his men forth a warfare they go & breake downe hylles/ walles & towres. They are slayne and slaye (other men) them selues, & ouerpasse not the kynges worde. If they get the victory they bringe y kyng all y spoyle. Like wise y other that medle not with warres & fyghtinge but tyll y grounde: when they reape they bringe tribute vnto the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do but cōmaunde to kyll/ they kyll: yf he cōmaunde to forgeue/ they forgeue: yf he commaunde to smyte/ they smyte: yf he bydde forgue awaye, they forgue awaye: yf he commaunde to buylde/ they buylde: yf he commaūde to breake downe/ they breake downe: yf he cōmaunde to plante/ they plante. The cōmen people & the rulers are obediēt vnto hym. And the kyng in y meane season sitteth hym downe eateth & drynketh, & taketh his rest: then kepe they watch rounde about y kyng/ & not one of thē darre get him out of y waye/ to do his awne busynes, but must be obediēt vnto the kyng at a worde. Judge ye now/ O ye men/ how shulde not he go farre aboue vnto whō men are thus obediēt? And whē he had spokē this he helde his tōge. The third whose name was Zorobabel/ which had spoken of wemen & of trueth/ begāne to saye after this maner: O ye mē/ it is not y greate kyng, it is not the multitude of men, nether is it wyne y excelleth: Who is it then y hath the lordshippe ouer them? Haue not wemen borne y kyng/ & all the people y rule those thinges? Haue not wemē borne thē, & brought thē vp, & plante the vynes/ wherout y wyne cōmeth? They make garmentes for all men/ they geue honour vnto all men, & wout wemen cā not men lyue. If they gather golde & syluer & all precious thinges/ & se a fayre well fauoured womā/ they leaue all together/ & turne their eyes only vnto y womā/ & gape vpon her/ & haue more desyre vnto her/ then vnto y syluer & golde/ or any maner of precious thing. A mā leaueth his father y brought hym vp/ he leaueth his awne natural coūtre/ & cleaueth vnto the womā: yee he reopardeth his lyfe with the woman/ & remembreth nether father/ ner mother/ ner coūtre. By thys then ye must nedes knowe/ y wemē haue y domynyon ouer you. ¶ Doth it greue you? A mā taketh his swerde/ & goeth his waye to steale/ to kyll/ to murther/ to sayle vpon the see/ & seyth a ryō/ & goeth in the darcknes: & when he hath stolen, disceaued & robbed/ he bringeth it vnto his loue. Agayne/ a man loueth hys wyfe better then father & mother: yee many one there be/ that rēne out of their wyttes/ & become bondmen for their wyues sakes: many one also haue perysshed/ & haue bene slayne/ & haue sinned because of wemē.

And now beleue me/ I knowe a kynge which is greate in his power, and all landes stande in awe of hym/ and no man darre laye hande vpō him: yet dyd I se/ that Apame (the daughter of y greate kynge Bartacus) the kynges cōcubyne/ sat beside y kynge vpon the ryght hande/ & toke of his crowne frō his head/ & set it vpon her awne head/ & smote the kynge with her left hande. Moreouer/ y kynge loked vpō her with opē mouth: yf she laughed vpō him/ he laughed also: but yf she toke any displeasure with hym/ the kynge was fayne to flatter her/ & to geue her good wordes/ tyll he had gottē her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not wemen then stronger?

Greate

Greate is the earth/ & hye is the heauen that do these thinges Then the kyng & ỳ Princes loked one vpon another. So he beganne to speake of ỳ trueth: O ye men are not we mē stronger? Greate is the earth, hye is the heauen, swyft is the course of the sunne, he cōpaseth the heauen rounde aboute, & fetcheth his course agayne to his awne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doth thys? Yee greate is ỳ trueth, & strōger then all thinges. All the earth calleth vpo the trueth, the heauen prayseth it, all worckes shake and tremble at it, & with it is no vnrighteous thynge. Wyne is vnrighteous: ỳ kyng is vnrighteous: womē are vnrighteous: all ỳ childrē of men are vnrighteous, yee all their worckes are vnrighteous/ & there is no trueth in thē/ in their vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroyed & perysh. As for the trueth / it endureth, & is all waye stronge: it lyueth & cōquereth for euermore worlde without ende.

The trueth accepteth no personnes / it putteth no differēce betwixte riche or poore/ betwyxte the myghtye or symple / but doth right vnto euery man whether they be euell or good & all men are louyngly dealt with all in the workes of it. In the iudgemēt of it there is no vnrighteous thinge, but strēgth/ kyngdom & power & maiesty for euermore. Blessed be the God of trueth.

And with that he held his tonge, and all the people cried & sayde: Great is the trueth/ & aboue all. Then sayde the kyng vnto him: Aske what thou wylt more then is appoynted in the wrytinge, & I shall geue it the, for thou art founde wyser then thy companyōs: thou shalt syt next me, and be my kynsman. Then sayde he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse & vowe, which thou hast vowed & promised (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome, to buylde vp Jerusalem and to sende agayne all the vessels & Jewels that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: which Cyrus separated/ when he offred in Babylō/ & wolde sende them agayne. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the temple/ which the Edomytes brent, when Jerusalē was destroyed ❡ by the Chaldees. This only O kynge) is ỳ thinge that I requyre, thys is the maiesty/ which I desyre & aske of the: that thou performe the vowe, which thou vowest vnto the kynge of heauen, with thy awne mouth hast made vnto the kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge stode vp & kyssed him & wrote a letter vnto all the debytes and shreues to all the Lordes & nobles that they shulde conueye hym forth, & all thē that wolde go vp with hym. He wrote a letter also vnto all the Shreues that were in Celosyria & Phenices, & vnto Libanus, that they shuld drawe cedre trees from Libanus vnto Jerusalem to buylde ỳ citie withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome that no officer, no ruler, nor Shreue, shuld come to their dores: & that al their lande which they had conquered, shuld be fre & not tributary: And that the Edomits shulde geue ouer the cytyes & villages of ỳ Jewes, which they had takē in: yee and that they shulde yearly geue .xx. talentes to the buyldinge of the temple vntyll the tyme ỳ it were fynyshed: & to the dayly halowyng of ỳ brent offrynges as it is commaunded/ ten talentes yearly also: And that all they which come frō Babylon to buylde the cytie/ shuld haue fre lyberty/ they and their children/ & all the Preastes.

He wrote the greatnesse also/ & cōmaunded that the holy garment shulde be geuen them, wherin they mynystred: & wrote that commaundement. s shulde be geuen to the Leuites, vntill the daye, that the house were fynyshed & Jerusalem buylded vp: and commaunded that all they that watched the cite/ shulde haue their porcyons & wages.

He gaue ouer also all the vessels ỳ Cyrus had separated frō Babylon: & all that Cyrus had geuē in cōmaundemēt/ ỳ same charged he also ỳ it shulde be done & sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this yonge man was gone forth, he turned hys face towarde Jerusalē/ & praysed the kynge of heauē, & sayde: Of ỳ cōmeth the victory/ of the cōmeth wysdome & clearnesse, & I am thy seruāut. Blessed art thou, which hast geuen me wysdome: ỳ will I prayse, O Lord, thou God of oure fathers.

And so he toke the letters, and wente vnto Babylon: And when he came there/ he tolde this vnto all his brethrē that were at Babylon, & they praysed the God of their fathers/ that he had geuē them rest/ kyng & lyberte to go vp/ & to buylde Jerusalem & ỳ temple (which is there called after the name of the Lorde) and they reioyced with instrumentes and gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

¶ They that returne to Jerusalē are nombred. They begynne to laye the foundacyō of the temple/ but are lett by the meanes of enemyes: & so is the buylduge dryuen of by the space of two yeares.

¶ The .v. Chapter.

After this were the principall men of all the villages chosen in the tribes & kynredes, that they shuld go vp with their wyues & children/ with their seruauntes & maydens / with all their catell and substaunce. And Darius the kynge sent with thē a thousande horsmē to conueye them safely vnto Jerusalē: & their brethrē were glad playēg vpō instrumētes/ & syngynge. And these are the names of the men/which wente vp out of ꝑ vyllagies/ accordyng to ꝑ trybes. Of the Prestes/ ꝑ sonne of Phinches/ ꝑ sonne of Aarō: Iesus ꝑ sonne of Iosedec/ Ioachim the sonne of Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel (of the kynred of Dauid/ out of the kynred of Phares/ of the tribe of Iuda) whych spake wonderfull thynges vnder Darius the kynge of Perlia / in the seconde yeare of his raygne in the fyrst moneth of Nisan.

There also are they of Iewry. which came vp/ and turned agayne vnto Ierusalem/ out of the captyuyte that Nabuchedonosor the kynge of Babylon had brought vnto Babylon. And euery man sought hys porcyon agayne in Iewry his cite, they that came w Zorobabel, & with Iesus / Nehemias. D These folowynge are they ꝑ went vp frō Thelmellat Thelarsa (whose Prynces were Carmelā & Careth) & might not shewe forth their cytyes & kynredes, how they were of Israel: The sonnes of Dalarus/ ꝑ sonnes of Ruben/ the sonnes of Nechodaicus. Of the Prestes that executed the office of the Prestehode/ & were not foūde: The sonnes of Obia/ the sonnes of Achitos / the sonnes of Addin/ which maried one of the daughters of Phargelen/gelen & were named after him. The writing of the same kynred was sought in the regi-ster of their generacō/but it was not foūde: & therfore were they forbyddē to execute the office of the preshode. Vnto the sayde Nehemias & Atharas/ þ they shulde haue no porcyon in the Sanctuary/tyll there rose vp an hye Prest, þ were well instruct in the playne clearnes & trueth Of all Israel, besyde seruauntes & maydēs) there were. xlij. M. iij. C & .xl. Now were there of seruauntes & maydens. bij. M. iij. C. & xxvj. Of syngyng men & syngyng women there were. ij. C. and. lxv. Fourehūdreth & .xxv. Camels. Seuē thousande/ & .xxvj. horses. Two hundreth thousand & .xlv. Mules. Fyue. M. & .xxv. asses.

¶ Their heades also & the rulers in the trybes when they came to Jerusalem & wolde buylde & set vp the temple of God agayne in his place/they gaue (after their abilitye/ vnto the temple/to the treasure & to the seruyce of the Sanctuary. xij. M. poundes of golde/ v. thousande of syluer/ and an hundreth Prestes garmētes. And so dwelt the Prestes and the Leuytes/and the people that wente out to Jerusalem/ & in the countre there about/ the syngers also and the porters/ euery one of Israel in his awne lande.

1. Esdr. iij. a. So when the seuenth moneth came and when the children of Israel were euery man at his busynes/they came all whone consen in to the courte, which was before the East doze. And there stode Jesua the sonne of Josedec & his brethren the Prestes/& Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel & hys brethren/ setting vp an aulter/to offre brent sacrifices vpō it as it is writtē in the lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other coūtrees/ & the heathē out of all lands to set vp þ aulter in his place/& offred sacrifices and brent-offringes vnto the Lorde in the morynge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles/as it is commaunded in the lawe. And dayely offred they as accordyng was/ and made the sacrifyces appoynted/ the offrynges also of the Sabbathes & of the new Mones/& all holy feastes. And all they þ vowed offringes vnto the Lorde, begane at the new Moone of the. vij. moneth to offre vnto God/ for the tēple of the Lorde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto the Masons & Carpenters/ money/meate/& drynke with chearfulnesse. ¶ Vnto them of Sydon also & Tyre they gaue carres/that they shuld carry Cedre trees frō Libanus to betastes and beames/ and that they shulde make shyppes in the hauen of Joppe, accordyng as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus Kynge of the perslans.

And in the seconde yeare they came into the temple of God at Jerusalem. In the second moneth begāne Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel/ & Jesua the sonne of Josedec & their brethren the Prestes & Leuites/and all they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captyuyte of Babylon/ and layed the foundacō of the temple/in the new Moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yeare þ they were come into Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuytes (that were aboue xx. yeare olde) vnto the seruyce of the Lorde: so Jesua and his sonnes and his brethren all the Leuytes stode to gether/ and perfourmed the lawe and ordynaunce in the house of the Lorde.

And the Prestes stode/ and had their garmentes & trompettes/ and the Leuytes/ the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbals/ geuynge thankes and prayses vnto the Lorde/ accordyng as Dauid the Kynge of Israel had ordeyned. And the song that they dyd synge vnto the Lord/was after this maner: * O synge vnto the Lorde/for he is gracyous/ and hys goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trompettes/ & songe with loude voyce/prayesyng the Lorde to gether in the reasyng vp of þ house of the Lorde. * There came also from amonge the Prestes and Leuites the rulers and elders/ accordynge to the trybes and kynredes (soch as had sene the house afore) to the buylding of this temple with greate crye and greate mournynge/many also with trompettes & greate ioye: In so moch, that the trompettes myght not well be hearde for the weppynge & mournynge. For the commen people blewe goodly vpon the trompettes.

* Psal. cxxxv. a

* 1. Esdr. iij. b.

* Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda and Benjamin/ to knowe what that trompettynge and noyse of shawmes myght be. And they perceaued that it was they which were come agayne out of captyuyte/ and wolde buylde the temple vp a new vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they wente to Zorobabel and Jesua/ and to the rulers of the vyllages/ and sayde vnto them: Shall we buylde with you also? For we lyke wyse haue hearde youre Lorde/ and we walke after the same maner/ from the dayes of Asbazareth the King of Assria/which brought vs hyther. Then Zorobabel and Jesua and the Rulers of the vyllages of Israel sayde vnto thē: It is not mete/that ye shuld buylde the temple of oure God wyth vs: we oure selues alone wyll buylde vnto the Lord, like as Cyrus the Kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

* 1. Esd. iij. b.

But the Heathen in the lande layed them selues agaynst thole that were in Jewry/ helde vp the buyldynge frō thē/ layed wayte vpō them preuely/ stopped soche as brought any thinge to them, forbad them to buylde & hyndered thole that made thē paſſage, ꝑ the buyldynge ſhulde not be fynyſhed: & this contynued ſo longe as Kynge Cyrus ꝛeygned: & ſo they put of the buyldynge for the ſpace of .ij. yeares, vntyll the raygne of Kynge Darius.

¶ Aggeus and Zachary prophecye. They buylde the temple with out let or hynderaunce, by the commaūdement of Darius.

¶ The.vj. Chapter.

NOt wythſtandynge in the ſeconde yeare of ꝑ raygne of Darius, Aggeus & Zachary the ſonne of Addo prophecyed vpō them in Jewry & Jeruſalem, in the name of the God of Iſrael. Then Zorobabel the ſonne of Salathiel & Jeſua ꝑ ſonne of Joſedec ſtode vp, & begāne to buylde ꝑ houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem, when the Prophetes of the Lorde helped thē. At the ſame tyme came Syſennes & vnder Shreue in Syria & Phenices, & the land-Lordes & hys companyōs, & ſayde vnto thē: Who hath bydde & cōmaunded you to buylde the houſe, to make the rofe & all other thinges agayne? And who are the worcke men, that buylde them? Neuertheleſſe the elders of the Jewes had ſoche grace of the Lorde, ꝑ they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on ſtill, vntyll the tyme ꝑ Kynge Darius were certyfyed therof, & an anſwere receaued from hym. The letter that theſe men ſent vnto Kyng Darius, was after this maner.

B Syſennes the vnder Shreue in Syria & Phenyces, & the landlordes with their companyons, which are headrulers in Syria & Phenyces, ſende their ſalutacyon vnto Darius the Kynge. We certyfye oure Lorde the Kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry, & went to Jeruſalē: where we foūde thē buyldynge the greate houſe of God & the tēple, with greate coſtely ſtone and with goodly tymbre for the walles: yee they make greate haſte with ꝑ worke, & helpe one another, and it goeth forth proſperouſly in their handes, & with greate dylygence & worſhyp is it made. Then aſked we ꝑ elders, who had cōmaunded thē to make vp the houſe and the buyldyng, and this we dyd to the intent that we myght certyfye the perfectly, & write vnto the, the names of thoſe ꝑ were the rulers of ꝑ worcke. So they gaue vs this anſwere: we are the ſeruauntes of the Lorde, which made heauē and earth: & as for this houſe, it hath bene buylded & ſet vp afore tyme by the greate & myghtye Kyng of Iſrael. But whē oure fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, & ſynned agaynſt the God of Iſrael, he gaue thē ouer into the power of Nabuchodonoſor Kynge of Babylon the Kyng of the Caldees, which brake downe the houſe, & brēt it, and caried awaye the people priſoners vnto Babylon. * Neuertheles, in the firſt yeare that Kynge Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cyrus the Kynge wrote & cōmaunded to buylde vp this houſe agayne: & all the ornamētes that Nabuchodonoſor caried awaye frō Jeruſalē vnto Babylō, & appropriated vnto his awne temple: theſe brought Cyrus forth agayne, & deliuered thē to Zorobabel & to Saimanaſar the vnder Shreue, cōmaunding them ꝑ they ſhulde bringe thoſe ſame ornamētes agayne to Jeruſalem in to the temple, and to begynne frō the tyme forth, to buylde the tēple agayne in his awne place. C Then Saimanaſar layed the foundacyō of the Lordes houſe at Jeruſalem, & euer ſence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore, O Kynge, yf thou thincke it good, let it be ſought in the Lybrarye & rolles of Kynge Cyrus: yf it be founde then, that it is done wt the counceil & conſent of Kynge Cyrus, and yf oure lorde the Kyng be ſo mynded, let him wryte vnto vs therof.

* 1. Eſdr. v.c.

* Then cōmaunded Kyng Darius, to ſeke in the Lybraries: and ſo at Egbathanis in a lytle cytye in Medea there was founde ſoche a wrytynge: In the firſt yeare of the raygne of Cyrus, the ſame Kyng Cyrus cōmaunded that the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalē ſhuld be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there cōtimually vnto ꝑ Lord) whoſe heygth ſhalbe .x. cubytes, & ꝑ breedth .xl. cubytes, & iij. ſquare with thre hewē ſtones, with a loft of tymbre of the ſame countre, yee wt a new loft, & the expenſes therof to be geuen of the houſe of Kynge Cyrus. And the ornamentes of gold & ſyluer, ꝑ Nabuchodonoſor toke out of the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem, ſhalbe ſet agayne in the tēple at Jeruſalē, where they were afore. Syſennes alſo the vnder ſhreue in Syria & Phenyces, the Prynces & their cōpanyons, & the other that be headrulers in Syria and Phenyces ſhall not medle nor haue anythinge to do with that place.

* 1. Eſdr. vi.a. & v. Eſdr. xij.c.

D Cyrus haue cōmaunded alſo that they ſhall buylde the houſe of the Lorde whole vp, & haue ordeyned them, to helpe thoſe that be come out of captyuyte: tyll the houſe of the Lorde be fynyſhed: and out of the tribute and taringe that is yerely rayſed vp in Syria & Phenices, dylygētly to geue them a certayne ſumme to the offerynge of the Lorde: and the ſame to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel the officer: that he therwithall may ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes, & corne, ſalt, wyne & oyle, and that contynually euery yeare: after the expences which the Prieſtes that be at Jeruſalē ſhewe to be made dayly: this ſhalbe geuē vnto thē without delaye that they maye offer ſacri-sacrifyces dayly to the hyest God / for the kynge and for his seruauntes / and to praye for their lyues. Lett it be proclamed also on euery syde / that whosoeuer breaketh or despyseth this commaundement of the kynge / shalbe hãged vpõ a galow (made of his awne good) and all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto ỹ kyng. The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpõ) rote out and destroye all the kynges and people / that vndertake by violence to hynder the same / or to deale vncurteously with the house of the Lord at Ierusalem. ¶ Darius the kyng haue ordeyned / that these thynges shalbe done wyth all dylygence.

¶ The temple is fynished and dedycate: and the feast of vnleuened bredde is holden.

¶ The.bij.Chapter.

1 When Sysennes the vndershreue in Celosyria / and Phenices & the other Landlordes with their companyons / obeyed the thynges that kynge Darius had ordened / were dylygent in the holy worckes / and were felowhelpers wyth the olde rulers of the Iewes. And so ỹ worcke of the Sanctuary wente forth and prospered / when Aggeus and Zachary prophecyed. And they perfourmed all thynges thorow the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel / & after the deuyce of Cyrus / Darius / and Artaxerles kynges of Persia.

2 And thus was oure house fynished vnto the.xxiij.daye of the moneth Adder in the.vj. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel the prestes and the Leuites / and the other that were come out of captyuyte / and soch as were ioyned vnto them / dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And in the dedycacion of the temple they offred an hundred oxen / an hundred rammes. iiij.hundred lambes / and.xij. goates for the synnes of all the people of Israel / after the ¶ nombre of the trybes of Israel. The prestes also & the Leuites stode arayed in the prestly garmentes / after the trybes / ouer all the worckes of the Lorde God of Israell accordynge to the boke of Moses / and the porters by all the dores.

3 And the chyldrẽ of Israel (with those that were come out of captyuyte) helde the passeouer the.xiiij.daye of the fyrst moneth / whẽ the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that came out of captyuite / were not all sanctified together: but ỹ Leuites were all sanctifyed together. And so all they that came out of captyuite / kylled ỹ easter lãbe / for their brethren / for the prestes & for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel that came out of captyuyte / and escaped from all the abhominacyons of the heathen / sought the Lorde / & kepte the feast of vnleuened bread bij.dayes longe / eatyng & drinckyng & were mery before the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Assyria / & comforted their handes to the worckes of ỹ Lorde God of Israel.

¶ Eldras calleth the people to assemble and come together / and then readeth them the lawe. ¶ They kepe the feast of Tabernacles.

¶ The.biij.Chapter.

1 And after him / when Artaxerles ỹ kynge of the Persians raigned / there wente vnto hym Eldras the sonne of Saraias / the sonne of Azarias the sonne of Helchiah / the sonne of Sallum / the sonne of Sadoc / the sonne of Achitob / the sonne of Amarias / the sonne of Azarias / the sonne of Boccus / the sonne of Abisu / the sonne of Phineas / the sonne of Eleazar / the sonne of Aaron the fyrst prest. This Eldras wente vp from Babylon) for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moses / that was geuẽ of the Lorde God of Israel / to be taught & done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured him / & dyd him greate worshipe & honoure / after all his desyres. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldrẽ of Israel / of the prestes / of the Leuites / of the syngers / porters and mynysters of the temple at Ierusalem.

2 In the.vij.yeare of the raygne of kynge Artaxerles in the.v.monethe / that is in the vij.yeare of the raygne / they went from Babylon in the newe moone of the.v.moneth / & came the hye waye to Ierusalem after hys commaundemẽt / lyke as the Lorde had prospered their iourney. For vnto Eldras gat greate instruccyon that he shuld leaue none of the thynges behynde / which are in ỹ lawe & commaundemẽtes of God. And he taught whole Israel all ryghtwysnes & iudgment.

3 Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerles / and delyuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artaxerles the kyng) to Eldras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: And thys is the copye of the letter. Kynge Artaxerles sendeth his gretynge vnto Eldras the prest and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: Of frendshipe & good wyll I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be eny of the Iewes / of the prestes and Leuites in my realme / which desyreth and is content to go wyth the vnto Ierusalẽ / that he maye doit. Therfore yf eny be minded to beare the company / let them come together / and goo wyth the (lyke as I am content & my.vij. frendes my councelers:) to se what they do at Ierusalem & in Iewry / & kepe the thynges accordyng as thou hast in ỹ lawe of ỹ Lorde: and to bynge to bryngе the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I & my frendes haue promysed to Ierusalem, & all the syluer & golde that is in the countre of Babylon/vnto the Lord to Ierusalem, with the thinge that is geuen for the people in the Lordes tẽple at Ierusalẽ: Yee that ỳ same syluer & golde maye be gathered/and oxen/rammes/shepe and goates & other that be longe to these thynges: & that they maye offer sacrifyces vnto the Lorde/ vpon the auiter of their Lorde/whych is at Ierusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou & thy brethren will do wyth the syluer & golde/ that do after thy mynde/ and after the cõmaundement of the Lorde thy God: & lyke wyse with all the holy vessels/that are geuẽ the for the seruyce of ỳ house of the Lorde thy God: & other thynges whatsoeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the tẽple, that shalbe geuẽ the of ỳ kynges treasure: & loke what thou with thy brethrẽ wilt do with the golde and syluer/ that do after the wyll of the Lorde. And I kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded the keepers of ỳ treasures in Syria and Phenices/ ỳ whatsoeuer Esdras the prest and reder of ỳ lawe of the Lorde doth wryte/it shalbe geuẽ him: tyll an.C.talentes of syluer/ and of golde in lyke maner: Of corne also an.C.measures/ and tyll an hundreth vessels of wyne/ & other plenteous thynges without nombre. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of ỳ hyest God, that the wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the king and of his sonnes. I cõmaunde you also/that ye requyre nere tribute of ỳ prestes/Leuytes, syngers/ and mynisters of the temple/ner of the writers: and ỳ no man haue auctorite to medle eny thynge agaynst them. As for the (O Esdras) set thou iudges & arbytrers in ỳ whole lande of Syria and Phenices/after the wysdome of God: & learne all such as are ignoraunt in the Lawe of God thy Lorde/ & lett all thẽ that offende agaynst the lawe/ be punyshed: whether it be wyth death/ wt payne/ to be cõdemned in money/or to be banished.

Then sayde Esdras ỳ wryter. * Blessed be the God of oure fathers, that hath geuen so good a mynde and wyll in to the herte of the kynge/ to magnifye his house that is at Ierusalem/and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kyng of his councell/ of his frendes & of hys nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde/accordynge as the Lorde my God helped me/ and I chose oute men of Israel to go vp with me. * And these are the heades (after their kynred & houses of their fathers) that wente vp with me from Babylon/out of the kyngdome of Artaxerses: Of ỳ sonnes of Phares/ Gerſomius. Of ỳ sonnes of Sicmarith Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid/Accus/the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zachary: & with hym there turned agayne an hundred and fyfte men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabilon, Zaraei, and with him.ii.C. and l.men Of ỳ sonnes of Zachnes/Iechonias Zecholy and with hym ii C.and.l men. Of the sonnes of Salamiaalias, Gotholie, and lxx.with him. Of ỳ sonnes of Zaphacia. Zarias Micheli/ & with hym.lxx. Of ỳ sonnes of Iob, Abdias Iehelt, and with hym.ii.C. & xij.men. Of the sonnes of Bania/Salimoth the sonne of Iosaphia/and with hym an.C. & lx.men. Of the sonnes of Beer, Zachari Bebei/and with him.iij.C.and.viij.men. Of the sonnes of Elead/Iohannes Ezechan/ & with hym.C.& x.men. Of ỳ sonnes of Adonicam those that were the last/ and these are their names: Eliphalam the sonne of Gebel and Semeias/ and with him.lxx.men. All these called I together by ỳ wather This/ where we pitched oure tentes thre dayes/and there I mustered them. D

As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuites/I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazar/and Ecelom/ and Maiman/ & Maiobam and Enaathan & Samea, and Iozibimathan/ Eunagan/ Zachary/ Mosollamum (these were the leders & men of experyence) and I sent them worde/that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, whych was by ỳ place of the treasury/ & commaunded them that they shuld speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren & to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs soch men/as might execute the prestes office in the house of the Lorde oure God. And wyth the myghtye hande of oure Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from amõge the sonnes of Mooli us/the sonne of Leui/the sonne of Israel Sebebeiam & the sonnes & bys brethren Iabin and Iaun, of whom there were xviij. From amonge the chyldren of ỳ sonnes of Chananeus/ & their sonnes were.xx.men. And of them that serued in the temple/ whõ Dauid had ordeyned/ & the pryncypall men that myntstred for the worcke vnto the Leuites in the temple.ii.C.and.xx.men/ whose names are all tokened vp in wrytynge.

Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto ỳ yonge men before the Lorde, that I myght desyre of him a prosperous iourney & a good waye for vs/yee for vs/for oure chyldrẽ and for ỳ catell/because of ỳ layenges awayte/ and I durst not requyre of the kynge men of horse & of fote/to conueye vs safely agaynst oure enemyes/for we had sayde vnto ỳ king/ that the power of the Lorde oure God shuld be with them, that seke him with their whole herte.

herte. And therfore we beſought God oure Lorde earneſtly because of theſe thinges/ & he was mercyfull vnto vs/ and hearde oure prayer. And I ſeparated from amonge ỹ rulers of the people/ & from the Prieſtes of the temple. xij. men/ & Sebeia & Asania/ & ten men of their brethrē with them. And I weied them the golde & the ſyluer & all the Prieſtly ornamentes of the houſe of oure God/ which ỹ King/ & his counſell/ & his Princes/ & wholle Iſrael had geuē. And when I had weyed it/ I gaue thē an. C. & l. talētes in ſyluer/ & C. talentes of ſyluer veſſell/ an. C. talētes of gold/ & of goldē veſſell ſeuē tymes twentye/ & veſſels of other metall (yee of good metall) ru. & glyſteringe as the golde/ & ſayde vnto thē: ye alſo are holy vnto the Lorde/ & the veſſels are holy/ & the golde and the ſyluer is promyſed vnto the Lorde ỹ God of oure fathers. Be diligent now & kepe it/ vntyll the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people/ to the Prieſtes/ to the Leuites/ & to the principall men of the cities of Iſrael in Ieruſalem/ & in the chambre of the houſe of oure God.

So ỹ Prieſtes & ỹ Leuites which receaued of me the golde/ the ſiluer and the veſſell/ brought it to Ieruſalē into the temple of the Lorde. And from Ahia we brake vp the. xij. daye of the fyrſt moneth/ tyll we came to Ieruſalē. And when the thyrde daye was paſt/ the weyed golde & ſyluer was delyuered in ỹ houſe of the Lorde ỹ fourth daye/ vnto Marimoth the ſonne of Ioz the Prieſte/ and with him was Eleazar the ſonne of Phineas/ and with thē were Iozabadus the ſonne of Iehuet/ Medias & ỹ ſonne of Banus/ & certayne of the Leuytes to the nombre & to the wayght: and the wayght of them was wrytten vp the ſame tyme. As for thoſe that were come out of captyuyte/ they offred ſacrifyce vnto the Lorde the God of Iſrael: euē. xij. oxen for all Iſrael lxxvi. rammes. lxxij. ſheepe. xij goates for ſynne. xij. kyne for a thankoffrynge/ all to the ſacrifice of the Lorde. And ỹ Kynges cōmyſſyō delyuered they vnto the ſtewardes and debytes of the Kynge/ and to the vnderſhreues in Celoſyria and Phenices.

Now when theſe thynges were done/ the rulers came vntome/ and ſayd: The generacyon of Iſrael/ the Princes/ the Prieſtes and Leuites/ the ſtraunge people & indwellers of the land/ haue not put awaye their vnclēneſſe/ from the Cananites/ Hethites/ Pherezites/ frō the Moabites/ Egyptyās/ & Edomytes. For both they and their ſonnes haue mengled them ſelues with the daughters of them/ & the holy ſede is myxte with the outlandyſh Heathen/ & ſens the begynnynge of their raygne haue the rulers & heades bene partetakers of their wyckednesſe.

*As ſoone as I had hearde theſe thynges/ I immediatly I rente my holy garmentes/ and pulled out the heare of my heade & my beerd/ & ſat me downe ſorouful & heuy. So all they that were moued thorow the worde of ỹ God of Iſrael/ came vnto me: & I ſat ſtyll full of heuyneſſe vntill the euenyng ſacrifice. Then ſtode I vp frō faſting/ hauyng rente clothes and the holy garmēt/ kneled downe vpō my knees/ helde out my handes vnto the Lorde/ & ſayde: O Lorde/ I am confounded & aſhamed before thy face/ for oure ſynnes are become many vpon oure heades/ & oure wyckednelles are exalted vnto ỹ heauē: for ſens ỹ tyme of oure fathers we are in greate ſinne vnto this daye. And for the ſynnes of vs and oure fathers/ we w oure brethren & w oure Prieſtes haue bene delyuered vnto ỹ Kynges of the earth/ into ỹ ſwerde/ & in to captiuite/ & became a ſpoyle with confuſion & ſhame vnto this daye. And now O Lorde God/ how greate is the mercy that we haue gottē of ỹ: in ỹ thou haſt left vs a rote & a neme in the place of thy Sanctuary/ to diſcouer oure lyght in the houſe of the Lorde oure God/ & geuē vs meate at all tymes of our miniſtracion. And when we were in captyuyte/ we were not forſakē of the Lorde oure God: but he made the Kynges of Perſia gracious and fauourable vnto vs/ ſo that they gaue vs bitayles & meate/ yee & leaue to buylde vp the tēple of oure Lorde God agayne/ to repayre the waſted places of Sion/ and to dwell in Iewry and Ieruſalem. And now O Lorde/ what ſhall we ſaye/ hauyng all theſe thinges in poſſeſſyon? For we haue broken thy commaundementes/ wbych thou gaueſt vnto vs by the handes of thy ſeruaūtes ỹ prophetes/ ſayinge: The lande that ye go vnto/ & that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in poſſeſſyon/ is defyled with the vncleanes & fylthynes of the Heathen/ & with their abhominacion haue they poluted it all together. Therfore ſhall ye not foyne youre daughters vnto their ſonnes/ ner mary youre ſonnes vnto their daughters: Moreouer/ ye ſhall neuer ſeke to make peace w thē/ ỹ ye maye increaſe & eate ỹ beſt in the lande/ & ỹ ye maye deuyde the inheritaūce of the lande vnto youre chyldrē for euermore. As for the thinge that now happeneth vnto vs/ it commeth all for oure wicked worke & greate ſinnes/ yet haſt thou geuen vs ſoche a rote/ that we are come agayne into our awne lād: & we are ſo wicked ỹ we haue brokē thy ſtatutes & cōmaundemētes agayne/ & mengled oure ſelues w the vnclēnes of ỹ outlādiſh Heathē. O Lorde art thou angrye w vs: wylt thou rote vs cleane out: ỹ oure rote & name remayne nomore? O Lorde God of Iſrael thou art true/ for our rote endureth yet vnto this presente daye. And be-holde/now are we before the in oure synnes/

now can we not stande before the in them.

1.Esdr.8 *And when Esdras with this prayer had knowledged the synne/weping/& lyenge flatt vpon the grounde before the tẽple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a greate multytude of men & wemen/of yonge men & maydẽs/for there was a very great weping & mournynge in the congregacyon. So whẽ Jechonias the sonne of Jehel one of the children of Israel cried/he sayd vnto Esdras: we have synned agaynst the Lorde/because we have maried outlandysh wemen of the Heathen. Now art thou ouer all Israel. We will sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde/that we shall put awaye all oure wyues/which we have takẽ of the Heathẽ/& their childrẽ: like as it is appoynted vnto vs by oure fore elders. Stande vp then/open thou it/and declare it playnely vnto vs/according to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the/& we wyll helpe the/quicte thy selfe mãly. So Esdras arose/and toke an othe of the rulers of the Prestes, & of the Leuites & of Israel/ to do after these thinges: and they sware.

¶After Esdras had reade the lawe/the people put awaye their straunge wyues/and then returneth euery man merely vnto his awne dwellynge.

¶The.ix.Chapter.

1.Esdr.8 Then Esdras stode vp fro the courte of the tẽple without, & went in to the chamber of Jonathas the sonne of Nasabus/& remayned there/& ate no meate/nor dronke drynke/for the multytude of the wyckednes of the people. And there was made a proclamacyõ in all Jewry & at Jerusalẽ/for all soch as were gathered at Jerusalẽ out of captyuyte/& whosoeuer came not to Jerusalẽ within two or.iij.dayes (accordyng to the iudgemẽt of the olde fordes of councell) his goodes shulde be taken from him/& be excluded from the congregacyõ of the captyuyte And in thre dayes were all they of the tribe of Juda & Benjamin gathered together at Jerusalem/the.xx.daye of the.ix. moneth. And the whole multitude sat trẽbling in the courte of the tẽple/for it was winter. So Esdras arose vp/& sayde vnto them: ye have done vnrighteously/in that ye have taken outlandysh wyues to mariage/& so to increase the synnes of Israel. And now knowledge the same/& gene prayse vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers/& perfourme his wyll/ departynge fro the Heathen of the lande/& B from the outlandysh wyues. Then cryed the whole multytude with loude voyce/& sayde: Lyke as thou hast spoken/so wyll we do: but for so moch as the people are many/and the wynter here/we may not stande without the house: agayne, this worcke is not a thynge/ that can be fynyshed in a daye or two/for we be many that have synned in these thinges: Ordene therfore/that the rulers of the multitude & all they that dwell with vs/& as many as have outlandysh wyues/the Prestes also & iudges of euery place may stande in the tyme appoynted tyll they lowse vp the wrath of the Lorde in his busynes.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezeli/& Ozias and Thecam receaued the charge of thys matter/& Bozozamus/& Leius/& Sabatheus helped them therto. After this, all they that stode vp that were come out of captyuyte. And Esdras the Prest chose vnto hym the principall men frõ amonge the fathers accordyng to their names & in the new mone of the tenth C moneth they sate together/to examen thys matter. And so the matter was a determyng (cõcerning the men that had outlandish wyues) vntyll the new mone of the fyrst moneth. And of the Prestes that had mixte them selues with outlandysh wyues, there were founde: Of the sonnes of Jesu the sonne of Josedec and hys brethrẽ/Mazeas, Eleazar/Joribus & Joadeus/which offred them selues to put awaye their wyues/& to offre a rãme for their ignorauce. And of the sonnes of Semmeri/Malchias, & Elles, & Jeelech Jzarias. Of the sonnes of Fosera/Limosias/Hismaen/Nathanea/ Jusito, Jeddus, & Tallas. And of the Leuites Jolabdus Semeis & Colnis Calcias Facteas, Colnas & Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuary/Eliasib/Zacharus. Of the porters Sallumus & Tolbanes. And of Israel/of the childrẽ of Foro/Osi/& Remias/ & Geddias/& Melchias/Michelus/Eleazarus/Jemmebias/and Bannas. And of the childrẽ of Jolaman/Thanias/Zachari/ Jezrelus/Joddius/Ermoth & Elias. And of the sonnes of Jathoim/Elladas/Lasamus & Jochias/Larimoth Sabdis & Tebedias. And of the sonnes of Zebes/Johannes/Amanias/Zabdias/& Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus/Olammus/Maluchus/Jeddus/Jasub/Asabus & Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Addin Naatus, & Mocsias/& Caleus/& Naanas/Maasuas/Mathathias/Besel/Bannus and Manasses.

And of the sonnes of Naue. Nones/Ieras/ Melchias/Sameas/Simon/Benjamin/ Malchus & Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom/Cartaneus/Mathathias/Bannus/ Elphalach/Manasses/Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus. Jeremy/Moodias/Ibzamas Johel Baneas Peliaas Jona Partimoth, Eliasib/Mathaneus/Elialis/Ozias Olelus/Semedius/Zambris & Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus/Idelus/Mathathias Sabadus, Zecheda/Sedmi, Jesseus/& Baneas

neas. All these had taken outlandysh wemē to marriage/ & they put thē awaye with their childrē. The Prestes & Leuytes/ & all they þ were of Israel/ dwelt at Jerusalē & thorow-out all the lande/ in the new moone of the .vij. moneth/ & the childrē of Israel were in their dwellinges. And the whole multitude came together vpō the flooze at þ East syde of the holy porte of the tēple. And they spake vnto Eldras the hye Prest & reader that he wolde bringe the lawe of Moses/ which was geuē of the Lorde God of Israel. So Eldras the hye Prest brought the lawe vnto the whole multitude/ to mā & womā/ & to all Prestes/ þ they might heare þ lawe/ *in þ new moone of þ .vij. moneth. And he red in þ flore þ is before þ holy porte of þ tēple/ frō þ morning early vnto þ euening/ before men & wemē. And they applyed their mynde all vnto þ lawe.

*ii. Esd. iij. a. & v. Esd. v. viij. a.

And Eldras the Prest & reader of the lawe stode vp vpō a scaffolde of wodd, which was made therfore: & vpon his ryght hande there stode by him Mathathias/ Samus/ Anantas/ Izarias/ Uzias/ Ozechias/ & Ballam⁹: Upon his lefte hande stode Faldeus Misael/ Malachias/ Abulchas/ Sabus/ Nabadias & Zachary. Then toke Eldras þ boke before the whole multitude/ for he was the prynci-pall/ & had in mooste honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe/ they stode all straight vpon their fete. So Eldras prayed the Lorde the mooste hye God/ the Almyghty God of Hostes. And all the people answered: Amen: and helde vp their handes/ fell downe flat vpon the earth/ & prayed the Lord. And Jesus/ Beneas/ Sarebias/ Jaddimus/ Accubus/ Sabbatheus/ Calithes/ Izarias/ Jozadus/ Ananias/ & Phelias the Leuites lyft their hādes vpwarde/ & bowed their faces to þ grounde/ & prayed þ Lord: Those were they which taught þ lawe of þ Lord/ & red þ lawe of the Lord in the congregacyō: & euery man set those before þ vnderstode þ lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Eldras the hye Prest & reder/ & to the Leuites þ taught the multytude/ saying: This daye is holy vnto þ Lorde: & all they that had hearde the lawe/ wepte. So Eldras sayde: Departe youre waye then/ & eate the best/ & drynke the swe-test/ & sende gyftes vnto thē þ haue nothing: for this daye is holy vnto the Lorde/ & be not ye sory. Then wente they their waye euery-chone/ ate & droncke/ & were mery/ & sent re-wardes vnto thē that had nothing/ that they also myght eate vō gladnesse: for they were exceedingly reioysed, thorow the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the feast/ accordyng to the couenaūt of the Lorde God of Israel.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

THe seconde boke of the Prophete Eldras (the sonne of Saraias/ þ sonne of Azarias the sonne of Helchia/ þ sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc the sonne of Achi-too þ sonne of Amerias/ the sonne of Iazarias þ sonne of Maraioth/ þ sonne of Sabias, þ sonne of Ezi the sonne of Boccus/ þ sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas/ the sonne of Eleazar/ the sonne of Aaron/ of the tribe of Leui) which was prysoner in the lande of Medes, in þ raygne of Artaxerses Kynge of Persia.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me/ saying: go thy waye, & shew my people their synfull dedes/ & their childrē their wyckednesses/ which they haue done agaynst me/ & they may tell their chylders childrē the same: for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me/ & haue offred vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euē he/ that brought them out of the lande of Egypte frō the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath and despised my coūcels. Pull thou out then the hearre of thy heade/ & cast all euel ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernynge & nour-toure. How longe shall I forbeare thē vnto whom I haue done so moche good? * Many kynges haue I destroyed for their sakes: * Pharao with his seruaūtes & all his power haue I smytten downe & slayne: All the na-cyons haue I destroyed and roted out before thē/ & in the East haue I brought two landes & people to naught/ euen Tyre and Sydon/ and haue slayne all their enemyes. Speake thou therfore vnto thē/ sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * I led you thorow the see/ & haue geuen you sure stretes sence the beginnyng. * I gaue you Moses to be youre captayne & Aaron to be the prest: I gaue you lyght in a pyler of fyre/ and greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me/ sayth the Lorde.

* Num. xxi. d Josu. viij. f. & xii.
* Exo. xiij. g
* Exo. xiij. b Nume. xvij. d Exo. xix. d.

Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: * I gaue you quayles to eate/ & tentes for your succoure: Neuertheles ye murmured and ascri-bed not the victory of youre enemyes vnto my name: yee thys same daye do ye yet mur-moure. Where are þ benefytes, that I haue done done for you? When ye were hongrye in the wyldernes / dyd ye not crye vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs into thys wyldernes / to kyll vs? It had bene better for vs to haue serued the Egyptiãs, then to dye in this wilderneffe. Then had I pytye vpõ youre mournynges, and gaue you Manna to eate. Ye ate angels foode. When ye were thyrstye / dyd not I shewe you hardstone / & caused water to flowe therout? For the heate I couered you with the leaues of ỹ trees. I good pleasaunt fat land gaue I you: I cast out the Cananites / the Pherezytes and Philystines before you. What shall I do more for you / sayeth the Lorde?

Thus sayth the Almyghtye Lorde: When ye were in the wyldernes in the water of the Amorytes / beinge a thyrst / & blasphemynge my name I gaue you not fyre for your blasphemyes but cast a tree into the water and made the ryuer swete. What shall I do vnto the / O Jacob? Thou Juda woldest not obeye me. I wyll turne me to another people / and vnto those wyll I geue my name / that they maye kepe my statutes. Seing ye haue forsaken me, I wyll forsake you also. When ye desyre me to be gracyous vnto you / I shall haue no mercy vpon you.* When ye call vpõ me / I wyll not heare you. For ye haue defyled youre handes with bloude / and youre fete are swyft to cõmyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsakẽ me (in a maner) but youre awne selues, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almyghtye Lorde: haue I not prayed you / as a father his sonnes, as a mother her daughters / & as a norse her põge babes that ye wolde be my people / & I shulde be youre God: that ye wold be my chyldren / and I shulde be youre awne father? * I gathered you together / as an henne gathereth her chekens vnder her wynges. But now what shall I do vnto you? I shall cast you out fro my face? * When ye offre vnto me / I shall turne my face from you: for youre solempne feast dayes youre new moones and youre circumcysiõs haue I forsaken. I sent vnto you my seruaũtes the Prophetes / whõ ye haue taken and slayne / and torne their bodyes in peces / whose bloude I wyll requyre of youre handes sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Almyghty Lorde: youre house must be desolate. I wyll cast you out as the wynde doth the strawe: youre chyldren shall not be frutefull / for they haue despyced my commaundement / and done the thinge that is euell before me. Youre houses wyll I geue vnto a people that shall come / & they that neuer herde me shal beleue in me: & they vnto whom I neuer shewed token / shall do the thinge that I cõmaunde thẽ. They haue sene no Prophetes / yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce / and knowledge them. I reporte me vnto the grace / ỹ I wyll do for ỹ people which is to come / whose chyldren retoyce in gladnes: & though they haue not sene me with bodely eyes / yet in spyrite they beleue the thinge that I saye. And now brother / beholde what greate worshyppe / & se the people that cõmeth from the East, vnto whom I wyll geue the dukedom of Abraham Isaac and Jacob, of Oseas / Amos, & Micheas / of Joel / Abdy / Jonas / Naum / & Abacuc of Sophony / Aggeus, Zachary, & Malachi / which is called also an angell (or messenger) of the Lorde.

¶ The.ij. Chapter.

THus sayth the Lorde: I brought this people out of bõdage / I gaue them my cõmaundementes by my seruauntes the Prophetes / whom thou woldest not heare / but despised my cousels. The mother that bare them / sayeth vnto them: Go youre waye ye chyldren / for I am a wyddowe and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse / but with sorow and heuynes haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the Lorde youre God / and done the thynge that is euell before him. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wyddow and forsaken: go youre waye / O my chyldren / and aske mercy of the Lorde. As for me / O father / I call vpõ the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these chyldren / which wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou bryngest them to confusyon / and their mother to a spoyle / that she beare no more. Let their names be scatred abroade amonge the Heathen / let them be put out of the earth / for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Wo be vnto the Assur / thou that hydest the vnryghtuous bythe. Thou wycked people / remembre what I dyd vnto Sodome & Gomorre / whose lande is turned to pitch and ashes. Euen so also wyll I do vnto all them / that heare me not / sayeth ỹ almyghty Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord vnto Esdras: Tell my people that I wyll geue them the Kingdome of Jerusalem which I wolde haue geuẽ vnto Israel. Their glory also wyll I take vnto me / & geue them the euerlastynge tabernacles / which I had prepared for those.

The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto them a swete smellynge oyntement: they shall nether laboure nor be weery. Go ye youre waye, and ye shall receaue it. Prepare for youre selues a few dayes / ỹ they maye dwell therin. Now is the Kyngdome prepared for you / therfore watche. Take heauen and earth to witnesse /

fo

for I haue broken the euell in peces/ & created the good/ for I liue sayth the Lorde.
Mother embrace thy chyldren/ and bringe them vp wyth gladnesse: make their sete as fast as a pyler/ for I haue chosen the/ sayeth the Lorde.

And those that be deed will I rayse vp agayne from their places/ and bringe them out of the graues / for I haue knowne my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of ỹ chyldren/ for I haue chosen the / sayeth the Lorde. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruauntes Elay and Jeremy / after whose cõcell I haue sanctyfyed & prepared for the xij. trees with dyuerse frutes / and as many welles/ flowynge with mylck and hony / and seuen mountaynes, wherupon there growe roses and lilies / wherin I wyll fyll my chyldren with ioye. Execute iustyce for the wyddowe, be iudge for the fatherlesse: geue to the poore: defende the comfortelesse : clothe the naked: heale the wounded and sycke: laugh not a lame man to scorne: defende ỹ crepell, and let the blynde come into the sight of my clearnes. Kepe the olde & younge within thy walles: whereſoeuer thou fyndest the deed/ take them/ and burye them/ and I shall geue the/ the fyrst place in my resurrectiõ. Holde styll (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quyetnes is come. Feede thy chyldren O thou good nourse / stablysh their sete : As for the seruauntes whom I haue geuen the there shall not one of them perysh for I wyll seke them from thy nombre were not thy selfe.

For when the dare of trouble & heuynes commeth other shall wepe and be sorowfull/ but thou shalt be merry and plenteous. The Heathen shalbe gelous, but they shalbe able to do nothynge agaynst the, sayth the Lorde. My handes shall couer the, so that thy chylderen shall not se the fyre euerlastynge. Be ioyfull O thou mother with thy chyldren, for I wyll delyuer the sayth the Lorde. Remẽbre thy deed chyldren, for I shall bringe thẽ out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them/ for I am mercyfull/ sayth ỹ Lord almighty.

Embrace thy chyldren / vntyll I come/ & shew mercy vnto them/ for my welles runne ouer/ and my grace shall not fayle.

I Esdras receaued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mount Oreb/ that I shulde go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they set me at naught/ and despysed the cõmaundement of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you/ O ye Heathẽ that heare and vnderstande: Loke for youre shepherde / he shall geue you euerlastynge rest: for he is nye at hand that shall come in the ende of ỹ world. Be readye to the rewarde of the kyngdome/ for the euerlastynge lyght shall shyne vpon you for euermore. Flie the shadowe of thys worlde, receaue the ioyfulnes of youre glory. I testyfye my sauyoure openly: O receaue the gyft that is geuen you. & be glad/ geuynge thanckes vnto hym that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Aryse vp, & stande fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lorde, which are departed from the shadow of the worlde/ and haue receaued gloryous garmentes of the Lorde. Take thy nombre O Syon, and shut vp thy puryfyed, which haue fulfylled the lawe of the Lorde. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longedest for is fulfilled: beseche the power of the Lorde that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnynge / may be halowed.

I Esdras sawe vpon the mount Sion a greate people / whom I could not nombre/ and they all praysed the Lorde wyth songes of thanksgeuynge. And in the myddest of them there was a yonge man of an hye stature / more excellent then all they and vpon euery one of their heades he set a crowne, & was euer higher and hygher / whych I marueled at greatly So I asked the angell and sayde: Syr what are these? He answered & sayde vnto me: These be they that haue put of the mortall clothinge and put on the immortall / and haue testyfyed and knowledged the name of God. Now are they crowned / & receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the angell: what yong personne is it / that crowneth them / and geueth them the palmes in their handes? So he answered & sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of God/ whom they haue knowledged in the worlde Then beganne I greatly to cõmende them / that stode so stedfastly for the name of the Lorde. And so the angell sayde vnto me: Go thy waye / and tell my people / what maner of thynges and how greate wonders of the Lorde thy God / thou hast sene.

¶ The wonderous workes which God dyd for the people are recyted. Esdras marueleth that God suffereth the Babylonyans to haue rule ouer his people/ which yet are synners also.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

IN the thyrtye yeare of the fall of the cytye / I was at Babylon / and I laye troubled vpõ my bed, and my thoughtes came vp ouer my hert: for I sawe the desolacyon of Sion / and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelt at Babylon: and my spyrete was sore moued / so ỹ I began to speake fearfull wordes to the most hyest, and sayde: O Lorde Lorde, thou spakest at the begynnynge / when thou plãtedst the earth (and that thy selfe alone) and and gaueſt commaundement vnto the people/ and a body vnto Adam /whych was a creature of thy handes / and haſt brethed in hym the breth of lyfe: and ſo he lyued before the/ & thou leddeſt hym into Paradiſe/ which garden of pleaſure thy ryghthande had plãted/ or euer the earth was made. And vnto hym thou gaueſt commaundement to loue thy waye / which he tranſgreſſed, and immedyatly thou appoyntedeſt death in hym/ and in hys generacyons. Of hym came nacions/ tribes, people and kynredes out of nombre. And euery people walked after their awne wyll / and dyd nyce thynges before the: and as for thy commaundementes / they deſpyſed them.

But in proceſſe of tyme thou broughteſt the water floude, vpon thoſe that dwelt in ỹ worlde, and deſtroyedſt them. And lyke as the death was in Adam / ſo was the water floude alſo in theſe. Neuerthelefſe one of thẽ thou lefteſt: namely Noe with his houſhold/ of whome came all ryghteous men And it happened that when they that dwelt vpon the earth / beganne to multyplye / and had gotten many childrẽ, and were a greate people they beganne to be more vngodly then the fyrſt.

Now when they all lyued ſo wyckedly before the/ thou dydeſt choſe the a man from amonge them whoſe name was Abraham. Hym thou loueddeſt and vnto hym only thou ſhewdeſt thy wyll and madeſt an euerlaſtynge couenaunt wyth hym promyſynge hym / that thou wolddeſt neuer forſake hys ſede. And vnto hym thou gaueſt Iſaac/ vnto Iſaac alſo thou gaueſt Jacob and Eſau. As for Jacob thou dydeſt choſe him/ and put backe Eſau. And ſo Jacob became a greate multytude.

And it happened that when thou leddeſt
¶ This ſede out of Egypte/ thou broughteſt thẽ vp to the mounte Syon / bowynge downe the heauens / ſettynge faſt the earth / mouynge the grounde/ makynge the depthes to ſhake and troublynge the worlde: And thy glory went thorow foure portes of fyre / & earth quakes/ and wyndes/ and colde: that thou myghteſt geue the lawe vnto the ſede of Jacob/ and dylygence vnto the generacyon of Iſrael.

And yet toke ſt thou not awaye from thẽ that wycked hert/ ỹ thy lawe myght bringe forth frute in them. For the fyrſt Adam bare a wycked hert tranſgreſſed, and was ouercome/ & ſo be all they that are borne of hym. Thus remayned weaknes with the lawe in the herte of ỹ people/ wyth ỹ wyckednes of the rote: ſo that the good departed awaye/ and the euell abode ſtyll. So the tymes paſſed awaye / & the yeares were brought to an ende. Then dydeſt thou rayſe ỹ vp a ſeruaũt called Dauid whom thou commaundedſt to buylde a cite vnto thy name/ and to offre vp incenſe and ſacryfyce vnto the therin. Thys was done now many yeares. Then the inhabyters of the cyte forſoke the / & in all thinges dyd euen as Adam and all hys generacyons had done: for they alſo had a wycked herte.

And ſo thou gaueſt thy cyte ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better and more ryghteous then thy people/ that they ſhall therfore haue the dominyon of Syon: For when I came there/ & ſawe their vngodlynes/ and ſo greate wyckednes/ that it couldе not be nombred: yee when my ſoule ſawe ſo many euell doers (in ỹ .xxx. yeare) my herte ſayed me/ for I ſawe/ how thou ſuffreſt them in ſoch vngodlynes/ & ſpareſt the wycked doers: but thyne awne people haſt thou roted out/ & preſtruced thyne enemyes/ and thys haſt thou not ſhewed me.

I can not perceaue how thys happeneth. Do they of Babylon then better/ then they of Syon: Or is there any other people/ that knoweth the/ ſaue nge the people of Iſrael: Or what generacion hath ſo beleued thy couenauntes/ as Jacob: And yet their rewarde appeareth not/ & their labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorow the Heathen, & I ſe that they be rych & wealthy/ & thynke not vpon thy commaundemẽtes. Weye thou therfore oure wyckednes now in the balaunce / & theirs alſo that dwell in the worlde, & ſo ſhall thy name be no where founde but in Iſrael. Or where is there a people vpon earth, ỹ hath not ſynned before the: Or what people hath ſo kepte thy commaundementes: Thou ſhalt fynde / that Iſrael by name hath kepte thy precepts/ but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The Aungell reproueth Eſdras/ becauſe he ſemed to enter into the profounde iugementes of God.

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

Ed the aungell that was ſent vnto me (whoſe name was Uriel) gaue me an anſwere/ & ſayde: Thy herte hath taken to moch vpon it in thys worlde and thou thynckeſt to comprehende the waye of the Hyeſt. Then ſayde I: Yee my Lorde. And he anſwered me / and ſayde: I am ſent to ſhewe the thre wayes/ and to ſet forth thre ſymylytudes / before the: wherof yf thou canſt declare me one/ I wyll ſhewe the alſo the waye / that thou deſyreſt to ſe: and I ſhall ſhewe the from whence the wycked herte commeth. And I ſayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then ſayde he vnto me: Go thy waye / weye me the weyght of the fyre / or meaſure me the blaſt of the wynde, or calle me

agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What man borne is able to do that? Why requyrest thou such of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shulde aske the/ how depe dwellynges are in the see? Or how greate water sprynges are vpō the firmamēt? Or how great water sprynges are in the begynnynge of the depe? Or which are the outgoynges of Paradyse? Peraduēture thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet in to the depe nor hell/ nether dyd I euer clymme vp in to heauen. Neuertheles now haue I asked the but only of fyre and wynde and of the daye/ where thorow thou hast trauayled/ and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geue me no answere of them.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: Thyne awne thynges/ & such as are growne vp with the/ canst thou not knowe: how shulde thy vessell then be able to comprehende the waye of the Hyest/ and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde/ to vnderstande the corrupcyō that is euydēt in my sight? Then sayde I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all/ then that we shulde lyue in wyckednesse/ & to suffre, and not to know wherfore. He answered me/ and sayde: I wente in a wod/ & the trees toke such a deuyce and sayd: Come let vs go/ and fyght agaynst the see/ that it maye departe awaye before vs/ and that we maye make vs yet more woddes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke this deuyce/ and sayde: Come/ let vs go vp/ and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodd/ that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wodd was but vayne and nothynge worth/ for the fyre came and consumed the wodd: The thought of the floudes of the see came lyke wyse to naught also, for the sande stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge now betwyxte these two/ whom woldest thou iustyfye/ or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & sayd: Verely it is a foolysh thought that they both haue deuyced. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wodd/ and the see also hath his place to beare hys floudes. Then answered he me/ & sayde: Thou hast geuen a right iudgement/ why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the wod/ and the see to his floudes: euen so they that dwell vpon earth may vnderstande nothynge but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauēs, may only vnderstāde the thynges/ that are aboue the heauēs. Then answered I/ and sayd: I beseche the/ O Lord/ let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thynges/ but of such as we dayly medle with all/ namely/ wherfore that Israel is blasphemed of the Heathē/ & for what cause the people (whō thou euer hast loued) is geuē ouer/ to be punyshed of vngodly nacyōs: & why the lawe of oure fathers is brought to naught/ & the writtē couenaūtes come to none effecte/ & we passe awaye out of the worlde as the grashoppers/ & oure life is a very feare/ & we are not worthy to optayne mercy. What wyll he do then vnto his name/ which is called vpōouer vs? Of these thinges haue I asked questyō.

Then answered he me, & sayde: The more thou searchest, the more thou shalt marueil/ for the worlde hasteth fast to passe awaye/ & can not comprehende the thynges/ that are promysed for the righteous in tyme to come/ for thys worlde is full of vnrighteousnes and weaknes. ¶

But as concernynge the thynges wherof thou askest me/ I wyll tell the. The euell is sowne/ but the destruccyon therof is not yet come. If the euell now that is sowne, be not turned vpsyde downe/ & yf the place where the euell is sowne/ passe not awaye/ then can not the thynge come that is sowne with good. For the corne of euell sede hath bene sowne in the hert of man from the begynnynge, and how moch vngodlynes hath he brought vp vnto thys tyme? and how moch shall he yet bringe forth, vntyll he come into the barne?

Ponder now by thy selfe/ when the corne of euell sede is cutt downe, how greate a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayde: How and whē shal these thinges come to passe? Wherfore are oure yeares few & euell? And he answered me/ sayinge: Haste not thou to moch vpō the Hyest/ for thy hastynes to be aboue him is but vayne/ thou makest to moch a do. Wyll not the soules also of the ryghtuous aske question of these thynges in their holynes/ sayinge: * How longe shall I hope of this fashyon? When cōmeth the frute of my barne/ and my rewarde? And vpon this Jeremiel the Archangell gaue them answere/ and sayde: Euen when the nombre of the sedes is fylled in you: for he hath wayed the worlde in the balaunce: in measure & nombre hath he measured the tyme/ and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I and sayde: O Lorde Lorde/ now are we all full of synne/ and for oure sake peraduēture it is not/ that the barne of the ryghteous shall not be filled/ because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the earth. * Apoca.vi.b.

So he answered me/ & sayd: Go thy waye to a womā with chylde/ and aske of her, whē she hath fulfylled her .ix. monethes/ yf her childebed maye kepe hyr any longer with in her. Then sayde I: No Lorde/ that can she not.

not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secrete places of soules are lyke the prevy chamber of a woman for lyke as a woman that trauayleth, maketh haste, when the tyme & necessyte of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doth the haste to delyuer it that is cõmytted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the begynnynge. Then answered I & sayde: If I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me then whether there be more to come then is past / or more past then is for to come. What is past / I knowe: but what is for to come / I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the tyght fyde, & I shall expounde the symplytude vnto the. So I stode and beholde / an whote burnyng oué wente ouer before me: & it happened ꝑ when the flãme was gone by / the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloude / & sent downe moch rayne wt a storme: & whẽ the stormy rayne was past the droppes remayned styll. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes / and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke, eué so the measure of the thynges that are past / hath the vpperhande. Then wente the droppes & the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: May I lyue (thynkest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happẽ in those dayes? He answered me and sayde: As for the tokens wherof thou askest me / I maye tell the of them in a parte: but as touchyng *thy lyfe / I may not shewe the / for I am not sent therfore.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

Nuertheles / as concernynge the tokens / marke this: Beholde / the dayes shall come / that they which dwell vpon earth / shalbe take̅ in a greate nombre / and the waye of the trueth shalbe hyd / and the lande shalbe baren from fayth: but iniquyte shall haue the vpperhãd / lyke as thou hast sene now / & as thou hast herde longe agoo. And the lande that thou seist now to haue rule / shalt thou horyble waste. But yf God graunte the to lyue thou shalt se after the thyrd trõpet that the sunne shall sodenly shyne agayne in the nyght, and the moone thre tymes in the daye, and blonde shall droppe out of wodd / & the stone shall geue his voyce / & ꝑ people shalbe vnquyete: & euen be shall rule / whom they hope not ꝑ dwell vpon earth & the foules shall syst and the Sodomyty sh see shall cast out hys fish / and make a noyse in the nyght which many shall not knowe / but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shalbe a confusyõ also in many places / and the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne / and the wylde beastes shall go their waye / and menstruous wemen shall beare monsters / & salt waters shalbe founde in the swete: one frende shall fight agaynst another. then shall all wyt and vnderstandynge be hyd and put aside into their secrete places / and shalbe sought of many / and yet not be founde: then shall vnryghtuousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One lande also shall aske another / and saye: Is ryghteousnes gone thorow the? And it shall saye: No. At the same tyme shall men hope / but nothynge optayne: they shall labour / but their wayes shall not prospere.

To shewe the soche tokens I haue seue / and yf thou wilt praye agayne / and wepe as now / and fast seuen dayes / thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked / and a fearfulnes wente thorow all my body / and my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almost sowned withall. So the aungel that was come to talke with me, helde me / comforted me and set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened / ꝑ Salathiel the Captayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Where hast thou bene? & why is thy coũtenaunce so heuy? Knowest thou not / that Israel is commytted vnto ꝑ / in the lande of their captyuyte? Vp then / & eate and forsake vs not / as the shepherde that leaueth hys flocke in the hãdes of wycked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy waye fro me / and come not nye me: and he harde it and as I sayde, so wẽte he his waye fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes mournynge and wepynge / lyke as Uziel the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that the thoughtes of my herte were very greuous vnto me agayne / and my soule receaued the spryte of vnderstandynge / and I beganne to talke with the moost hyest agayne / and sayde: O Lorde Lorde / of euery wodd of the earth & of all the trees therof / thou hast chosen the one onely vyneyarde: & of all landes of the whole worlde thou hast chosen the one pyt: and of all floures of the grounde thou hast chosen the one lyrye: and of all the depthes of the see thou hast fylled the one ryuer: and of all buylded cytyes thou hast halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: and of all the foules that are created / thou hast named the one doue: & of all the catell that are made thou hast prouyded the one sheepe: and amõge all the multytudes of folckes thou hast gotten the one people / and vnto this people whõ thou loudest / thou gauest a lawe / that is proued of all.

And now / O Lorde / why hast thou geuẽ this one people ouer vnto many? & vpon the one one rote thou hast prepared other/ and why hast thou scatred thy one only people amōge many? which treade them downe/ yee which haue euer withstande thy promyses/ & neuer beleued thy couenauntes? And though thou weredst enemye vnto thy people/ yet shuldest thou punysh them with thyne awne handes. Now when I had spokē these wordes/ ỳ angell ỳ came to me the nyght afore/ was sent vnto me/ & sayde vnto me: Heare me/ & herkē to the thinge ỳ I saye/ & I shall tell ỳ more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou ỳ people better then him ỳ made thē? And I sayde: No Lorde/ but of very grefe & compassyon haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre/ because I wold haue experiēce of the waye of the most hyest/ & to seke out part of his iudgemēt. And he sayde vnto me: ỳ thou mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore Lorde? where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers childebed then my graue? So had I not sene the mysery & trouble of Jacob/ & ỳ trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayd vnto me: Nombre me ỳ thinges that are not yet come: gather me together ỳ droppes/ ỳ are scatred abrode: make me the floures grene agayne/ ỳ are wythered: open me the thinge that is closed: and bringe me forth the wyndes/ that are shut vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce/ & then shall I declare the ỳ thing/ ỳ thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde/ Lorde/ who maye knowe these thinges/ but he that hath not his dwellynge wyth men? As for me/ I am vnwise: how may I then speake of these thinges wherof thou askest me? Then sayde he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of these thinges that I haue spoken of/ euē so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement/ or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde O Lord/ yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they do ỳ haue bene before me/ or we that be now/ or they that shal come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I will lyken my iudgement vnto a ryngе. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of ỳ last/ euē so is there no swyftnesse of the fyrst. So I answered and sayde: couldest thou not make those (ỳ haue bene made/ & that be now/ & that are for to come) in one/ that thou myghtest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me/ and sayde: The creature mayt not haste aboue ỳ maker/ nether maye the worlde holde thē at once/ that shalbe created.

And I sayd: How hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunte/ that thou lyuynge maker hast made the creature lyuyng at once/ & the creature bare it? euen so might it now also beare them that be present/ at once. And he sayde vnto me: Like ỳ childebed of a womā/ & saye vnto her: If thou bryngest forth chyldren, why doest thou it not to gether, but one after another: Praye her therfore/ to bringe forth ten chyldren at once. And I sayde: she can not/ but must doit one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuē a childebed vnto the earth/ for those ỳ be sowen vpō it by procesſe of tyme. For like as a yonge chylde may not bryngе forth the thynges that belonge to the aged/ euen so haue I ordened the worlde which I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seyng thou hast now geuē me a waye/ I will speake before the: for oure mother of whom thou hast tolde me/ is yet yonge/ & now she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me/ & sayde: Aske a woman that beareth chyldrē/ & she shall tell ỳ. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whō thou hast now brought forth) lyke those that were before the/ but lesse of stature? And she shall answere the: They that be borne in the youth of strēgth/ are of one fashyon: and they ỳ are borne in the tyme of age (when the childebed fayleth) are other wyse. Consyder now thy self/ how that ye are lesse of stature/ then those that were before you/ & so are they that come after you/ lesse then ye/ as ỳ creatures which now begynne to be olde/ & haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then sayd I: Lorde I beseche the/ yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght/ shewe thy seruaunt/ by whom doest thou vyset thy creature?

¶ The aungell instructeth Esdras/ and geueth hym answere to his questyons.

¶ The .vj. Chapter.

And he sayd vnto me: In the beginnyng when the ground was made: before the worlde stode/ or euer the wyndes blew, before it thondred & lyghtened/ or euer the foundacyons of Paradyse were layed/ before the fayre floures were sene, or euer ỳ moueable powers were stablysshed, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together/ or euer the hyghnesses of the ayre were lyfted vp afore ỳ measures of the fyrmamēt were named, or euer the chymneys in Sion were hote/ and or the presente yeares were sought out/ & or euer the imaciens of thē that now synne/ were put aside/ before they were sealed that now gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consyder & ponder all these thinges/ & they all were made thorow me/ & thorow none other: by me also they be ended/ & by none other. Then answered I & sayde: which shall be the partynge asunder of the tymes? Or when shalbe the ende of the fyrst/ and the begynnynge of it that folowethe: And he sayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac when Jacob and Esau were borne of hym Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde / and Jacob is the begynnynge of it that folowethe. The hande of mā betwixte the hele and the hand. Other question, Esdras; aske thou not.

I answered then / and sayde: O Lorde Lord yf I haue foūde fauoure in thy sight / I beseche the / shewe thy seruaunt the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewedest me part the last nyght. So he answered and sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpō thy fete and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate mocyon, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes / be not afrayed: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacyon of the earth be vnderstande. And why: the worde therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that when B I had herde it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and herkened: & beholde there was a voyce that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke the sounde of many waters and it sayde. Beholde the dayes come / that I will begynne to drawe nye and to vyset them that dwell vpō earth / and will begynne to make inquysicīō of thē / what they be that haue hurte equyte vnto righteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Syon shalbe fulfylled: and when the world / that shall vanysh awaye shalbe ouersealed / then will I do these tokens.

The bokes shalbe opened before the firmament and they shall se all together, & the chyldrē of a yere olde shall speake with their voyces: the wemen with chylde shall bringe forth vntymely chyldren of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue / & be raysed vp: & sodenly shall the sowne places appeare as the vnsowne, & full store houses shall sodenly be founde emptye, and the trōpet shall geue a sounde which when euery man heareth / they shalbe hastely afrayed. Ye tyme shall frendes fight one agaynst another lyke enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The fyrynges of the welles shall stande styll and in thre houres they shall not renne. Whosoeuer remayneth frō all these thinges that I haue tolde the shall escape and se my saluacyon and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receaued, shall se it / they that haue not tasted death from their byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shalbe chaūged and turned into another meanyng: for euell shalbe put out and dyscreate shalbe quēched. As for layth: it shall florish / corrupcyon shalbe ouercome: and the trueth, which hath bene so longe without frute, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talked with me, that I loked demurely vpon him, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the, the tyme of the nyght for to come.

Yf thou wylt praye yet more, & fast seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thinges / & greater then before: for thy voyce is herde before the Hyest: for why: the Almyghtye hath sene the righteous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastyte / whych thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hath he sent me to shewe ỳ all these thynges / and to saye vnto the: Be of good comforte / and feare not, and haste not wyth the tymes that are past to thynche vayne thynges, and make not haste of the latter tymes. C

And it happened after thys, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner ỳ I myght fulfyll the thre workes, which he tolde me. In the eyght nyght was my hert vered within me agayne, and I beganne to speake before the Hyest: for my spyrite was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in dystresse, and I sayde: O Lorde, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnynge, euē the fyrst daye) and sayde: Let heauen and earth be made / & thy worde was a perfecte worcke. And then was there the spyrite, and the darcknesses were yet on euery syde / & silence: there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Then commaundest thou a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures / that thy worcke myght appeare and be sene.

Upon the seconde daye thou mayedest the spyrite of the firmamēt / and commaundest it to parte asunder / & to make a deuysyon betwixte the waters / ỳ the one parte myght remayne aboue and the other beneth. Upon the thyrde daye thou broughtest to passe / ỳ the waters were gathered in the seuēth part of the earth: Sixe partes hast thou dryed vp / and kepte them, to thyntent that men myght sowe and occuppye husbandrye therin. As soone as thy worde wente forth, the worcke was made. For immedyatly there was great innumerable frute and many dyuerse pleasures and delyces of temptacyon / floures of chaungeable coloure & smell, and this was done the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth daye thou cōmaundedst D that the Sunne shulde geueth hys lyght / & the moone her lyght: the starres dydest thou sett in ordre and gauest them a charge: to do seruyce euē vnto man, ỳ was for to be made. Upon the fyrst daye thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte where the waters were gathered: ỳ they shuld bringe forth dyuerse beastes / foules soules and fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the same water and without soule, brought forth lyuynge beastes, at the commaundement of God, that all people myght prayse thy wōderous workes. Then dyddst thou preserue two soules, ꝑ one thou caledst Enoch and the other Leuiathan, and dydest separate the one frō the other: for the seuēth parte (namely, where the water was gathered together) myght not holde them bothe. Unto Enoch thou gauest one parte, whiche was dryed vp on the thyrde daye, ꝑ he shulde dwell in the same parte, wherin are a thousande hylles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst, & hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wilt, & whan. Upon the sixte daye thou gauest cōmaundement vnto the earth, that before the it shulde bryng forth beastes, catell, & all ꝑ crepe, & besydes this) Adam also, whō thou madest Lorde of all thy creatures: Of hym come we all, and the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde now & spoken before the, that I myght shewe, how that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adam thou hast sayd that they are nothynge, but be lyke a spetle, & hast lykened the abundaūce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rofe of the houfe.

And now, O Lorde, the Heathen whiche haue euer bene reputed as nothynge, haue begonne to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whom thou hast called the fyrst borne, thy onely begotten, & thy feruent louer) are geuē into their handes and power. Yf the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possessyon with the worlde? How longe shal this endure?

¶ Thys Angell declareth Esdras many thynges to come.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

a AND it happened after ꝑ I had spokē out these wordes, there was sente vnto me an angell, which had bene by me also the nyghtes afore, & he sayde vnto me: Up Esdras, & heare ꝑ wordes that I am come to tell ꝑ. And I sayd: speake on Lorde my God. Then sayde he vnto me: The see is set in a wyde place, that it myght be depe & greate: but the entrañce is narow & smal lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go into the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he weute not thorow the narow, how myght he come into the brode?

Item another: A cyte is buylded and set vpon a brode felde, and is full of all goodes: the entraunce is narow and sodane, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onely one strate path betwixte them both, so small that there coulde but one man go there.

Yf thys cyte now were geuen to an heyre, & he neuer wēre thorow the parelous waye, how wold he receaue his enheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lorde. Then sayde he: Euē so is Israel also a portiō. And why? for their sakes haue I made the worlde: & when Adā trangressed my statutes, then was ꝑ thinge iudged that was done. Thē were ꝑ entraūces of the worlde made narow, full of sorow and trauayle: They are but few & euyll, full of perels and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall frute.

If they now whiche are entred into thys worlde, maye not comprehende the straye and vayne thinges, moch lesse maye they cōprehende and vnderstande the secrete thinges? Why disquieteſt thou thy selfe then, seynge thou art but a corruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued in to thyne herte the thynge that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, thou hast B ordened in thy lawe, ꝑ the ryghteous shulde inherete these thynges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodly shulde perysshe. Neuertheles the righteous shal suffre strayte thinges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffered strayte thynges, shall not se the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstandynge aboue the Hyest. For there be many that perysshe, because they despyse the lawe of God that is set before them. For god hath geuen strayte commaundement to sothe as come, that they knowe what they do, & how they shulde lyue: and yf they kepte this they shulde not be punyshed.

Neuer theles they were not obedyēt vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: ymagyned vayne thinges, & purposed to synne, & sayde moreouer that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowne, hys lawe haue they despysed, & denyed his promyses: in his statutes & ordynaunces haue they not bene faythfull & stedfast, and haue not perfourmed his workes.

And therfore Esdras vnto the full, plenty and to the empeye, empyneſſe. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shall appeare: & ꝑ earth that now paſseth away, shalbe shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered from the forsayde euyls, shall se my wōders For my sonne Jesus shalbe opēly declared, with those that be with hym: & they that remayne, shalbe mery in foure hūdred yeares.

After these fauē yeares shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue lyfe, & the worlde shalbe turned vnto the oldelyfe. vn dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgmētes, so that no mā shall remayne. And after seuē dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shalbe rapsed vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earth shal restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in silence. & the secrete places shall delyuer those that be cōmitted vnto them. And the most hyest shal be openly declared vpō the seate of iudgmēt, & all mysery shal vanish awaye, & longesuffryng shalbe gathered together. But the iudgment shall cōtynue, the treuth shall remayne, & fayth shall ware stroge, & worcke shall folowe. & the rewarde shall be shewed, the ryghteousnesses shall watch, and the vnryghteousnesses shall beare no rule.

Then sayde I: Abraham prayed syrst for the Sodomites, & Moses for the fathers & synned in the wyldernes, & he & came after him for Israell, in the tyme of Achas & Samuel: & Dauid for the destruction, and Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, and Helias for those that receaued rayne, and for the deed, that he myght lyue: & Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: & dyuerse other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many.

Euē so nowsoeuer & corrupte is growne vp, and wyckednes increased, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfor shall it not be so now also?

He answered me, and sayde: This presente worlde is not & ende, there remayneth moch honoure in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme, and the begynnyng of the immortalite for to come, wherin all corruption vanished, all voluptuousnes is lowed all mysbeleue taken awaye, ryghteousnes growne, and the verytesprynge vp. Then shall noman be able to saue hym that is destroyed, ner to oppresse him & hath gotē the victory. I answered thē, & sayde: This is my fyrst & last sayinge: & it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els when it was geuē him, to kepe hym that he shulde not synne. For what profyt is it for mē now in this present time to lyue in heuynes, & after death to loke for punyshment? O thou Adā, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou art not fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profyt is it vnto vs, yf there be prompsed vs an immortal tyme, where as we medle with deadly worcks? & & there is prompsed vs an euerlastynge hope, where as we oure selues are euell & vayne? & & there are layed vp for vs dwelliges of health & fredome, where as we haue lyued euell? and that the worshippe of the Hyest is kepte to defende them, which haue led a pacyent lyfe, where as we haue walked in & most wicked wayes of all? And that there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose frute endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medicyne, where as we shall not go in? for we haue walcked in vnpleasaūt places? And that the faces of them whiche haue abstayned, shall shyne aboue the starres, where as oure faces shalbe black and darcke? For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryghteously, we consydered not, that we shuld suffre therfore after death?

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consyderacyon & thought of the battayll, which man hath vpon earth: & yf he be ouercome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But yf he gett the victory, he shall receaue the thynge that I saye. For this is the lyfe, wher of Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, sayng: Chose the lyfe, & thou mayest lyue. Neuertheles they beleued hym not, neyther the Propheres after hym. Noner me which haue spoken vnto them that heuynes shulde not reach vnto them to their destruccyon lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those, that haue suffered them selues to be enfourmed in saluacion.

I answered then & sayde: I knowe Lorde, that the Hyest is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walcke in his lawe: and that he is pacyēt and longe suffryng towarde those that haue synned in their worcks: and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requyreth: and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplieth his louynge kyndnesses towarde those that are present, & that are past, and to them which are for to come. For yf he multiplye not his mercies, & worlde shall not be made lyuynge, wyth those that dwell therin: He gueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse, that they whiche haue done euell, myght be eased, the ten thousand parte of men shulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the iudge forgaue not those that be healed wit his worde, and yf he wolde destroye the multytude that dyeth, there shulde be very few left in an innumerable multytude.

¶ Esdras prayeth God earnestly to take vpon hī alone mysery for the synnes of the people.

¶ The.viii. Chapter.

A ND he answered me saringe: The most Hyest made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to come for few. I wyll tell the a symylitude, Esdras: As when thou askest ꝑ earth, it shall saye vnto the, that it geueth moch moulde, where of archen vessels are made, but lytle of it that golde cõmeth of. Euen so is with the worcke of thys worlde. There be many created, but few shalbe preserued. Then answered I & sayde: Then swalowe vp ꝑ wit (thou soule) and deuoure the vnderstanding, for thou art agreed to herke & to geue eare, and wyllynge to prophecye: for thou hast no longer space geuen the, but onely to lyue. O Lorde, wylt thou not geue thy seruaũt leue, that we maye praye before the, and that thou mayste geue sede vnto oure herte, & buylde oure vnderstandynge, that there maye come fruite of it: and that euery one which is corrupte, and beareth the state & place of a mã, maye lyue:

For thou art alone, & we all are one worck manshype of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayde, and lyke as the body is fashioned now in the chyldesbed, and thou geuest the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyre & water: s. ix. monethes doth thy worcke suffre thy creature, whiche is fashioned in her: but the thynge that preserueth and it that is preserued, shall both bekepte together: & when tyme is, the chyldesbed delyuereth the thing, that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded the brestes to geue mylcke vnto the frute, that the thynge which is created & fashioned, maye be norished for a tyme: and then thou dyspolest & ordrest it with thy mercy, bringest it vp with thy righteousnes, nurturest it in thy law, & reformest it with thy vnderstandyng, mortyfiest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuynge as thy worcke. Seynge then ꝑ thou destroyest him, which with so great labours is created and fashyoned thorowe thy commaundement, thou coudest lyghtly ordene, also, that the thynge whych is made, myght be preserued.

And this I speake now of all men in generall, as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am sory: and of thy inheritaunce: for whose cause I mourne: and of Israell, for whom I am wofull: and for Jacob, for whose sake I am greued: therfore begynne I to praye before the, for my selfe and for them, for I se the fall of vs, euen of vs, that dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the swyftnes of ꝑ iudge, which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and vnderstande my wordes, and I shall speake before the.

This is the begynnyng of the wordes of Esdras, before he was receaued: O lorde, thou ꝑ dwellest in euerlastyngnesse, whose eyes are lyft vp in the ayre, whose stole is exceadyng hye, whose glory & maiesty maye not be comprehended, before whõ the hostes of heauen stande wyth tremblynge, whose keppynge is turned in wynde and fyre, whose worde is true, whose talckynge is stedfast, whose commaundement is stronge, whose ordinaunce is fearfull, whose loke dryeth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mõtaynes to melte away, and whose trueth beareth wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and marck with thyne eares the peticion of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll speake, and so longe as I haue vnderstandynge, I will answere. O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, which serue in the trueth. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studies of the Heathen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonyes with sorowe. Thincke not vpõ those that haue walked raynedly before the, but vpon them, which wil haue knowne thy feare.

Lett it not be thy wyll to destroye them, which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vpõ them that haue clearly caught thy lawe (Take thou no indignacyon at them, whiche are worse then beastes: but loue them, that alwaye put their trust in thy righteousnes and glory: for we and oure fathers haue all the same syckues and dysease, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercyfull.

For yt ꝑ hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of righteousnes: for ꝑ righteous which haue layed vp many good workes together, shall out of their dedes receaue reward. For what is man, that thou shuldest take displeasure at him? Or what is the corrupteble mortall generacion, that thou shuldest be so roughe towarde him?

For of a trueth there is no man amonge them that be borne, but he hath dealt wyckedly: and amonge the faythfull there is none, which hath not done amysse. For in thys (O Lorde) thy righteousnes and thy goodnes shalbe prayed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, whych are not rych in good workes.

Then answered he me and sayde: Some thinges hast thou spoken a right, and accordyng vnto thy wordes it shall be. For I wyll not verely cõsyder the worckes of thẽ, which haue synned before death, before the iudgement, before destruction, but I wyll remoyse ouer the worcke & thoughe of the righteous. I wyll remẽbre also the pylgremage, ꝑ holy makynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the housbande man soweth mooch sede vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees and yet alwaye the thynge that is sowne or plãted is not all kepte safe, neyther doth it all take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowne in the worlde, they shal not all be preserued,

I answered then & sayde: If I haue founde grace then let me speake. Lyke as the housbande mans sede perisheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to mooch rayne vpon it: Euen so perysheth man also, which is created with thy hãdes, and is lyke vnto thyne awne ymage and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all thynges, and lykened hym vnto ẏ housbande mans sede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lorde, but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thyne awne inheritaũce: O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

D Then answered he me & sayde: Thynges present are for the present, & thynges to come for soch as be to come. For thou wanteste yet mooch, seynge thou mayest loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft times drawne nye vnto the, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this also thou art meruelous before the Hyest, in ẏ thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becõmeth the, and hast not regarded thyne awne selfe, ẏ thou art had in soch honoure amõge ẏ righteous. Therfore shall great wrechidnes and mysery come vpon them, that in the latter tyme shall dwell in ẏ worlde, for they haue walcked in great pryde.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, & seke out glory for soch as be like the: for vnto you is paradyse opened, the tre of lyfe is plãted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnes made ready: a cyte is buylded for you, and a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The rote of euyll is stopped frõ you, the weaknes and moth is hyd frõ you, & in to hell flyeth corrupciõ in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyshed awaye, & in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalyte. And therfore aske thou nomore questiõs, cõcernynge the multitude of them that perysshe. For they haue taken lyberte, despysed the Hyest, thought scorne of his lawe, & forsake his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys righteous, & sayde in their herte, that there is no God, yee and that wytyngly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euẽ so is thirst & payne prepared for them. For it was not his wyl that mã shulde come to naught: but they which be created haue defyled ẏ name of him that made them, and are vnthãkfull vnto him, which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgmẽt now at hand. These thyngs haue I not shewed vnto all mẽ, but vnto few: namely vnto the, and to soch as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde O Lorde, now hast thou shewed me the multytude of the tokens, which thou wilt begynne to do at the last but at what tyme and when thou hast not shewed me.

¶ Of this hath he before shewed vnto hym.

¶ The.xv. Chapter.

HE answered me then & sayde: Measure thou the tyme dyligently in thy selfe, whẽ thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, which I haue tolde the before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherin the Hyest wyll begynne to vysyt the worlde, which he made. And when there shalbe sene earthquake and vproare of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou well vnderstande, ẏ the moũ Hyest spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen frõ the begynnynge. I

For lyke as all that is made in ẏ world, hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Euen so the tymes also of ẏ Hyest haue playne begynnynges in wounders and sygnes, and the ende in worckyng and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shall be able to escape by hys worckes and by fayth, wherin ye haue beleued, shall be preserued from the fayde parels, and shall se my sauyour in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me frõ the world. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche now haue abused my wayes: and they ẏ haue cast them oute despytefully, shall dwell in parnes.

For soch as in their lyfe haue receaued benefytes, and haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and whẽ they had yet open rowme of amendemẽt and conuersyon, and vnderstode not, but despysed it: ẏ same must knowe it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shalbe punished, & how the righteous shalbe saued, and whose the worlde is, & for whõ the world, and whẽ it is. Then answered I and sayde: I haue talcked before and now I speake, and wyll speake also hereafter, that there be many moo of them whiche perysh, then shalbe saued, lyke as ẏ floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: Lyke as the felde is, so is also the seed: as the floures be, so are the colours also: soch as the worckmã is, soch is also ẏ worcke: and as ẏ housband man is

man is him selfe/so is his housbande ye also/ for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for thē ỳ are now/ or ever the worlde was made/ where in they shulde dwell/then was there no mā that withstode me. Now when every one was/ and the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared/& the moneth that ceaseth not/ and the lawe which is unsearcheable/their maners were corrupte. So I consydered the worlde/ and beholde/there was pareil/ because of ỳ thoughtes ỳ were come in to it. And I saw/ and spared them greatly/and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes/and a plante frō amonge many generacyons. Let the multitude perysh then/ whych are growne up in bayne/ and lett my grape and wynebery be kepte:euē my plante:for with greate laboure haue I made it up.

Neuertheles yf thou wilt take upō the yet seuē dayes mo(but thou shalt not fast in thē) goo thy waye then in to the felde of floures/ where no house is buylded/ and eate onely of the floures of ỳ feld/taste not flesh/drincke no wyne/ but eate floures onely. Praye ¶ unto the Hyest contynually/so will I come/ and talke with the.

So I went my waye and came in to the felde which is called Ardath)like as he commaunded me)& there I sat amōge ỳ floures/ and ate of the herbes of the felde/ & ỳ meate of the same satisfyed me. After seuen dayes I sat upon the grasse/ & my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore: and I opened my mouth/& begāne to talke before the Hyest/ and sayde: O Lord/thou ỳ shewest thy selfe unto us/ thou hast declared and opened thy selfe unto oure fathers in the wyldernes/ in a place where no man dwelleth/ in a baren place, when they came out of Egypt & thou spakest/sayinge: Heare me O Israel/ and marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Beholde/ I sawe my lawe in you/ and it shall bringe frute in you, & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers which receaued ỳ lawe/kepte it not/and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes/and the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not/ for why? it was thine. For they that receaued it/ perished/because they kepte not the thynge that was sowne in them.

It is a custome when the grounde receaueth sede/ or ỳ see a shipp/or a vessell meate and drincke/ that whē it perysheth or is broken wherin a thyng is sowne/or wherin eny thinge is put: the thinges also perishe & are broken, which are sowne or put therin. But ¶ unto us it hath not happened so: for we that haue receaued the lawe/perish in synne/and oure herte which also receaued the lawe: not withstandynge the lawe perysheth not/ but remayneth in his laboure.

And when I consydered these thynges in my herte after this maner/ I loked aboute me with myne eyes/ and upon the ryght syde I sawe a woman/which mourned sore/made greate lamentacion/ and wepte with loude voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, and she had ashes upon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go/ ỳ I was in/ & turned me unto her/& sayde: wherfore wepest thou: why art thou so sory & discomforted: And she sayde unto me: Syr/lett me bewayle my selfe & take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my mynde/ & brought very lowe. And I sayde unto her: what ayleth the? Or who hath done eny thinge to the: tell me. She sayde: I haue bene unfrutefull and baren/and haue had an housband thirtie yeare. And these xxx yeares I do nothinge els daye & nyght and all houres/but make my prayer to the Hyest. After thirtie yeares God herde me thy handmayden/ loked upō my mysery/ consydered my trouble/and gaue me a sonne/ and I was glad of him/so was my housband also & all my neyghbours/& we gaue greate honoure unto the Mightie. And I norysshed him with great trauayle. So whē he grewe up/and came to the tyme/that he shuld haue a wyfe/I made a feast.

¶ Eldras & the woman that appeareth unto him cōmen together.

¶ The.x. Chapter.

Odit happened ỳ when my sonne wente in to hys chamber/ he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthrewe all the lightes/& all my neyghbours rose up to comforte me. Then toke I my rest unto the seconde daye at nyght: and when they had all rested/that they myght cōforte me/I rested also, and rose up by night/ and fled/and am come hither in to this felde/ as thou seest: & am purposed not to come in the cytie/but to remayne here/ and neither to eate ner drynke/ but contynually to mourne and to fast/untyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacyons & thoughtes fall/ that I was in/ and spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolysh woman/ seyst thou not oure heuynes and mournyng/ and what happeneth unto us: how Sion oure mother is all wofull and sory/ and how she is cleane brought downe and in mysery: seynge we be all now in heuynes/ and make oure mone (for we be all soroufull.) As for the heuines that thou takest/ it is but for one sonne. Wemaunde the earth/ and she shall tell the/ ỳ it is she which ought(by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe upon her.

For

For from the begynnynge all men are borne of yer/ & other shall come: and beholde / they walke almost all in to destruccion/ & many of them shalbe rooted out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournynge/then she/ that hath lost so great multytude? and not thou / whych art sory but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mournyng of the earth/for I haue lost the frute of my body/ which I bare with heuynes: but ỹ earth is accordynge to ỹ maner of the earth/ & the present multytude goeth agayne into her / as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne wyth trauayle & sorowe/ cũ so the earth also frõ the begynnynge geueth her frute vnto man/ for him that made her. And therfore withholde thy sorowe and heuynes by thy selfe / and loke what happeneth vnto the/ be are it strongly. For yf thou iudgest the marck & ende of God to be ryghtuous and good/and receauest his counsell in tyme /thou shalt be commended therin. Go thy waye then in to the cytye to thy housbande.

And she sayde vnto me: that will I not do/ B I will not go in to the cytie/ but heare will I dye. So I commened more with her / and sayde: Do not so/ but be counceled/ & folowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seyst that our Sanctuary is layed waste / oure aulter broken/ oure temple destroyed / oure playenge of instrumentes & syngynge layed downe / the thankesgeuynge put to sylence/ our myrth is banished awaye/ the lyght of oure candelstyck is quenched / the arcke of the couenaunt is taken from vs/ all oure holy thynges are defyled/ and the name that is called vpon ouer vs/ is dishonoured: oure chyldren are put to shame/ oure prestes are brent/ oure Leuites are caried awaye in to captyuyte / oure virgins are defyled/ and oure wyues rauyshed/ oure ryghtuous men spoyled/ and oure chyldren destroyed / oure yonge men are brought in bondage/ and oure stronge worthies are become weake: and Sion (whych seale is the greatest of all) is lowsed vp from her worshippe: for she is deliuered in to ỹ hãdes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy great heuynes/ and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: ỹ the Wyghte maye be mercyfull vnto the/ and that the Hyest maye geue the rest from thy labour and trauayle. And it happened/ that when I was talkyng with her/ her face dyd shyne and glyster/ so that I was afrayed of her/ and mused what it myght be. And immediatly she cast oute a greate voyce / very fearfull/ so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked / and beholde/ the womã appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a cytie buylded / & a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacion.

Then was I afrayed / & cryed wyth loude voyce/ and sayde: where is Uriel the angell/ which came to me at the fyrst? For he hath caused me to come in many cõsyderacyons & hye thoughtes / and myne ende is turned to corrupcion/ and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes / he came vnto me/ & loked vpon me/ and I laye as one that had bene deed/ and myne vnderstanding was altered/ & he toke me by the ryght hãde/ and comforted me/ & set me vp vpon my fete/ and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thyne vnderstãdyng vexed? & the vnderstãdinge of thy herte/ & wherfore art thou sory? And I sayd: Because thou hast forsaken me: and I haue done accordyng vnto thy wordes/ I wente in to the felde/ and there haue I sene thyngs/ ỹ I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp and be manly / and I shall geue the exortacyon.

Then sayd I: Speake on to me my Lord/ forsake me not / lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not / & herde that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstandynge be disceaued/ and my mynde? But now I beseche the that thou wylt shewe thy seruaunt of this wõder He answered me then & sayde: heare me/ and I shall enfourme the/ & tell the wherfore thou art afrayed / for ỹ Hyest hath opened many secrete thynges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy waye is ryght / and that thou takest sorowe contynually for thy people/ and makest greate lamentacyon for Sion: and therfore vnderstande the vysyon which thou sawest a lytle whyle agoo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mournynge/ and thou hast comforted her: Neuertheles now seyst thou the lykenes of the woman no more/ but thou thoughtest there was a cytie buylded: and lyke as she tolde the of ỹ fall of her sonne, so is this the answere: The woman whõ thou sawest, is Sion: & where as she tolde the / that she hath bene thyrtye yeares vnfrutefull and baren / those are the xxx. yeares / wherin there was no offerynge made in her.

But after xxx. yeares Salomõ buylded her/ & offred, and then bare the barẽ a sonne. And where as she tolde the/ that she norysshed him with labour/ that was the dwellyng of Jerusalem. But where as the sonne dyed in her chamber/ ỹ is the fall of Jerusalẽ. And thou sawest her lyckenesse/ how she mourned for her sonne: & what els happened vnto her/ I haue shewed the. And now God seyth, that thou art thou art sory in thy mynde/ & sufferest frō thy herte for her / and so hath he shewed the her clearnesse/and the fayrnes of her bewtye.

And therfore I bad the remayne in ỹ feld/ where no house is buylded. For I knew that the Hyest wolde shew this vnto the/ therfore I commaunded the to goo in to the felde/ where no foundacyon ner buylynge is. For in the place where the Hyest wyll shewe hys cite/there shall be no mans buylyng. And therfore feare not/and let not thyne herte be afrayed/but go thy waye in / and se the glorious and fayre buylynge / and how greate it is/and how greate thou thynckest it after the measure of thyne eyes/ & then shalt thou heare as moch as thine eares maye comprehēde. For thou art blessed aboue many other/ and art called with the Hyest/as ỹ few. But tomorow at nyght thou shalt remayne here/ & so shall the Hyest shewe the visyons of hye thynges/ whych he wyll do vnto them / that dwell vpon earth in ỹ last dayes. So I slepte the same night lyke as he cōmaunded me.

¶ In this Chapter and in the .ij. next ensuynge/ he entreateth of certen vysyons and of the interpretacyons therof.

¶ The .xj. Chapter.

Then sawe I a dreame: and beholde/ there cam vp frō the see an Aegle/ which had .xij. wyngs & thre heads: And I sawe and beholde, he spred hys wynges ouer all the earth / and all the windes of the ayre blew in them/and so they were put together agayne. And I beheldē/ & out of his fethers there grew other lytle contrary fethers: the heades rested/ the head in ỹ myddest was greater then the other / yet rested it with the residue.

Moreouer I sawe / that the Aegle flew wt his wynges/and raygned vpō earth / & ouer all thē that dwell vpon the earth: and I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto him/ & no mā spake agaynst him/ no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon hys clawes / & gaue a sounde with his fethers / and a voyce sayinge after thys maner: watch not all together. slepe euery man in his awne place/ & watch for a tyme / but let the heades be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe/ that the voyce wente not oute of hys heades / but from ỹ myddest of his body. And I nombred hys contrary fethers/ & beholde / there were eight of them. And I loked / & beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fether / & raigned ouer all the earth. And it happened/ that when it raigned/ the ende of it came/ and the 25 place therof appeared no more. So ỹ nexte folowyng stode vp & raygned & had a greate tyme: and it happened, that when it raigned/ the ende of it came also/lyke as the fyrst / so that it appeared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it/ & sayde: Heare thou ỹ hast kepte in the earth so lōge/ this I saye vnto the/before thou begynnest to appeare nomore: There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the third/ & raigned as ỹ other afore/ & appeared nomore also. So went it wt all ỹ residue one after another/ so ỹ euery one raigned/ & then appeared nomore. Then I loked/ & beholde/ in proces of tyme ỹ fethers ỹ folowed were set vp vpō the ryght syde / ỹ they myght rule also: & some of thē ruled / but within a whyle they appeared nomore: for some of thē were set vp/but ruled not. After this I loked/ and beholde ỹ .xij. fethers appeared nomore/ & ỹ two wynges: & there was nomore vpon the Aegles body/but two heades ỹ rested/ & fyre fethers. Then sawe I also/ ỹ the fyre fethers were parted in two/ & remayned vnder ỹ head/ ỹ was vpō the right syde/ for ỹ foure continued in their place. So I loked/ & beholde/ they ỹ were vnder ỹ wynges/ thought to set vp thē selues/ & to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp/ but shortly it appeared nomore/ & the seconde was sooner awaye then ỹ first. And I beheldē/ & lo/ the two thought also by them selues to raigne: & when they so thought/ beholde, there waked one of ỹ heads ỹ were at rest/ namely/it that was in ỹ myddest/ for ỹ was the greater of the two heads. And then I sawe/ that the two heades were holden with him & the head was turned with them that were by him / and ate vp the two vnder wynges / that wolde haue raigned.

But this head put ỹ whole earth in feare/ & bare rule in it/ ouer all those ỹ dwelt vpō earth wt moch labour / & yet had the gouernaunce of the worlde / ouer all the foules ỹ haue bene. After this I loked/ & beholde/ the head that was in the middest/ sodenly appeared nomore/lyke as ỹ wynges: then came ỹ two heades / which ruled vpō earth / & ouer those dwelt therin. And I beheldē / & lo/ the head vpon the ryght syde / deuoured it that was vpō the left syde. And I herde a voyce/ which sayde vnto me: loke before the/ & consyder the thyng that thou seist. Then I sawe/ & beholde / as it were a lyon ỹ roareth / rennynge hastely out of the wod / & he sent out a mās voyce vnto the Aegle/ & sayde: Heare thou / I wyll talke with the. & ỹ Hyest shall saye vnto the: Is it not thou ỹ hast the victory of the foure beastes/ whō I made to raigne vpon earth and in my worlde / & that the ende of their tymes might come thorow thē? And the fourth came/ and ouercame all the beastes that were past / and had power ouer the worlde with greate fearfulnes/ and ouer ouer the whole cõpasse of the earth with the most wicked labour/& so longe tyme dwelt he vpon the earth with vnceate / & the earth hast thou iudged not with trueth. For thou hast troubled the meke / thou hast hurte the peaceable & quyete / thou hast loued lyers/ and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forth frute/and hast cast downe the walles of soch as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeous dealyng and blasphemye come vp vnto the Hyest/and thy pryde vnto the Myghty. The Hyest also hath loked vpõ the proude tymes/ and beholde/ they are ended/and their abhominacyons are fulfilled. And therfore appeare no more thou Aegle/ and thy horrible wynges/and thy wycked fethers/and thy vngracyous heades / and thy synfull clawes/and all thy vayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed/ & come agayne to her self/whan she is delyuered frõ thy violence/ and that she maye hope for the iudgement and mercy of hym that made her.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

And it happened when ỳ I spake these wordꝭ vnto ỳ Aegle I sawe/ & beholde, the head that afore had the vpperhand appeared nomore: nether dyd the foure wynges appeare any more/ ỳ came to him/ & were set vp to raigne: and their kyngdome was small & full of vproure. And I saw/& beholde/ they appeared no more/and the whole body of the Aegle was brent/& the earth was in greate feare. Then awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde/& from greate feare/& sayde vnto my spirite: Lo/this hast thou geuen me/ in that thou searchest out the wayes of ỳ Hyest: lo/ yet am I weery in my mynde/& very weake in my spirite/& lytle strength is there in me/ for the greate feare ỳ I receaued this night. Therfore will I now beseche the Hyest/that he wyll comforte me vnto the ende: & I sayd/ Lorde Lorde/ yf I haue founde grace before thy sight/ & yf I am iustified with the before many other/& yf my prayer be come vp before thy face/comforte me then/& shewe me thy seruaunt the interpretacyõ & playne difference of this horrible sight ỳ thou mayest perfectly cõforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy, to shew me ỳ last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretacyon of this sight. The Aegle whome thou sawest come vp frõ the see/ is the kyngdome which was sene in the vysyon of thy brother Daniel/ but it was not expounded vnto him/
B for now I declare it vnto the. Behold/ the dayes come/that there shall rise vp a kyngdome vpon earth/& it shalbe feared aboue al the kyngdomes that were before it. In the same kyngdome shall. xij. kynges raygne/ one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to raygne/ and shall haue more tyme then the other/& this do the .xij. wynges signifye, which thou sawest. As for the voyce ỳ spake/& ỳ thou sawest go out frõ the heades but not frõ the body, it betokeneth that after the tyme of that kyngdome there shall aryse greate stryuynges / & it shall stande in parell of fallyng: neuertheles it shall not yet fall, but shalbe set in to his beginninge. And the eight vnderwynges whych thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of him betokẽ/that in hym there shall aryse eyght kyngꝭ whose tyme shalbe but small, & their yeares swyft/ & two of thẽ shall beare. But when the myddest tyme commeth/there shalbe foure kepte in ỳ tyme/when his tyme begynneth to come that it maye be ended/ but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heades re- ¶ stynge this is the interpretacyõ: In his last shall the Hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes/ & call many agayne into thẽ/ & they shall haue the domynyon of the earth/and of those that dwell therin/vnd moch labour aboue all those ỳ were before thẽ. Therfore are they called ỳ heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall brynge forth hys wyckednes agayne / and that shall perfourme & fynysh hys last. And where as thou sawest / that the greate head appeared nomore/it sygnyfyeth, that one of them shal dye vpõ his bed/& yet with payne/ for the two that remayne/ shalbe slayne with the swerde. For the swerde of ỳ one shall deuoure the other / but at the last shall he fall thorow the swerde hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwynges vpõ the head that is on the ryght syde/ it sygnyfyeth that it is they / whome the Hyest hath kepte vnto their ende: thys is a small kingdome/& full of trouble. The Lyon whõ thou sawest rysinge vp out of the wodd/and roarynge/& speakynge vnto the Aegle / and rebukynge hym for his vnryghteousnesse is the wynde / whych the Hyest hath kepte for them & for their wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them/& rente them asunder before them. For he shall set them lyuynge before the iudgement / & shall rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall he delyuer wt trouble/those ỳ be preserued ouer myne ends: and he shall make them ioyfull vntyll the commyng of the daye of iudgemẽt/ whet of I haue spokẽ vnto the frõ the begynnyng. This is the dreame that thou sawest/& thys is the interpretacyon. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the Hyest.

Therfore write all these thinges that thou hast sene in a boke and hyde them/and teach thẽ the wyse m ỳ people, whose hertes thou knowest knowest maye cõprehende and kepe theise se-D cretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo/ that it maye be shewed the/whatsoeuer it pleaseth the Hyest to declare vnto the/ and with that he went his waye.

And whē all the people perceaued/ ꝙ the seuen dayes were past/ & I not come agayne in to ꝙ cytie/ they gathered them altogether frō the least vnto the most/ & came vnto me/and sayde: what haue we offended the? and what euell haue we done against the/ ꝙ thou forsakest vs/ & sittest here in this place? For of all people thou only art left vs/ as a grape of the vyne/ and as a candell in a darcke place/ and as an hauē & shyppe preserued from ꝙ tēpest. Haue we not els aduersite ynough/but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs/ that we had bene brēt with Sion?
For we are no better/ then they ꝙ dyed there:
and they wepte wyth loude voyce. Then answered I thē & sayde: Be of good cōforte O Israel/ & be not heuy thou house of Jacob:
for the Hyest hath you in remēbraūce/ & the Myghtie hath not forgotten you in tempta-cion. As for me, I haue not forsakē you/ nether am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to praye/ because of the my-sery of Israel, that I myght seke mercy for ꝙ lowe estate of youre Sanctuary. And now go youre waye home euery mā/ & after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the cytie lyke as I cō-maunded them: but I remayned styll in the felde seuen dayes as the Angell bad me: and I ate onely of the floures of the felde/ & had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The .xiij. Chapter.

And it happened after ꝙ seuē dayes/
A that I dreamed a dreame by night.
And beholde/ there arose a wynde from the see/ that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked/ and beholde/ the mā was strōge & increased with the cloudes of heauē: & when he turned his coūtenaunce to consyder all the thinges trembled ꝙ were sene vnder him: and when the voyce went out of his mouth, all they brent that herde hym/
lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe/ & beholde/ there was gathered together a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure windes of the heauē/to fyghte agaynst the man/ that came oute from the see. And I loked/ and beholde/ he graued him selfe a greate mountayne/ and flew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place/ wherout the hyll was grauen/ and I coude not.

I sawe after these/ ꝙ all they which came to fyght agaynst hym/ were sore afrayed/ & yet durst they fyght. Neuertheles when he sawe the fearcnesse & vyolence of the people/he nether lyft vp his hande ner helde swerde/ner eny weapē: but onely (As I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blast of fy-re, and out of his lyppes the wynde of ꝙ flāme: and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and stormes/ and they were all myxte together: the blast of fyre the wynde of ꝙ flāmes/and the greate storme, and fell wyth a rushe vpon ꝙ people which was prepared to fight and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothinge sene, but onely dust and smoke. When I saw this, I was afrayed.

B Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callyng vnto him another peaceable people: and there came moch people vnto him: some were glad some were sory/ some of them were bounde/
so that they were caried & brought forth.

Then was I sycke thorow greate feare/ &
I awaked/ and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt all thy wōders frō the begynnyng/& hast counted me worthy/ ꝙ thou myghtest receaue my prayer: shewe me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I cōsyder in my vnderstandyng: Wo vnto them ꝙ shall be left in those dayes: & moch more, wo vnto thē that are not left behynde: for they ꝙ were not left, were in heuynes.

Now vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes/ which shall happen vnto them/ and to those that are not left behynde. Therfore are they come in to great parelles, and many necessities/ lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easier, ꝙ he which suffreth hurte come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of the worlde/ and now to se the thynges ꝙ shall happē in the last.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretacyon of the syght shall I shewe the/and I wyll open vnto the, the thynge ꝙ thou hast requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are left behynde, and thys is the interpretacyon. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyme, hath kepte him selfe. They that be fallen in to harme, are soch as haue wor-kes & sayth vnto the Most mightie. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behynde/ are more blessed/ then they that be dead.
This is the meanynge of the vysyon. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from the depe of the see, the same is he whom God the Hyest hath kepte a greate season, which by his awne selfe shall delyuer his creature/& he shall order thē that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest/ ꝙ oute of hys mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre & storme & how

how that he lyft vp nether swerde nor weapen, but ꝑ the rushynge in of hym destroyed ꝑ whole multitude, ꝑ came to fyght agaynst him at Sigmyketh, that the dayes come, whan God wyll delyuer thē that are vpon earth, & in a traūce of mynde shall he come vpō thē, ꝑ dwell in ꝑ earth. And one shall vndertake to fyght agaynst another, one cite agaynst another, one place agaynst another, one people agaynst another, & one realme agaynst another. When this commeth to passe, then shall the tokens come, that I shewed the before: & then shall my sonne be declared, whō thou sawest clymme vp as a man. And when all ꝑ people heare his voyce euery man shall in their awne lande leaue the battayll ꝑ they haue one against another, & an innumerable multytude shalbe gathered together, as they that be wyllinge to come & to ouercome him by fyghtinge. But he shall stande vpon the toppe of the mount Sion. Neuertheles Sion shall come, & shalbe shewed, beinge prepared & buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hill grauē forth without any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people ꝑ are come for their wyckednes, with the tempest, and for their euell ymagynacyons: and their paynes wherwith they shalbe punyshed, are lyckened vnto the flamme: and without any labour, shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, which is cōpared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto hi: those are the ten tribes, which were caried awaye prysoners out of their awne lande, in ꝑ tyme of Oseas the Kynge, whom Salmanasar the Kynge of Assiria toke prysoner, & caryed them ouer the water, and so came they vnto another lande.

But they gaue them this councell, ꝑ they shulde leaue the multitude of the Heathen, & to go forth into a farther countre, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe their statutes, which they neuer kepte in their awne lande. And so they entred in at the narow passages of the water of Euphrates and God shewed tokēs for them, & helde styll the floude tyll they were passed ouer: for thorow ꝑ countre there was a greate waye, namely of a yeare and a halfe yourney, for ꝑ same regyon is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: & when they come forth agayne, the Hyest shall holde styl the sprynges of the streame agayne, ꝑ they may go thorow, therfore sawest thou ꝑ multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my border. Now when he destroyeth the multytude that is gathered together, he shall defende hys people that remayne, and then shall he shewe them greate wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me this: wherfore haue I sene the man comming vp frō the depe of the see? And he sayde vnto me: Like as thou canst nether seke out nor knowe these thinges that are in the depe of ꝑ see, euē so mayest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the daye. Thys is the interpretacyon of the dreame which thou sawest, therfore thou only art here lyghtened: for thou hast forsaken thyne awne lawe, & applyed thy diligēce vnto myne, & sought it. Thy lyfe hast thou ordred in wisdome, & hast called vnderstanding thy mother, & therfore haue I shewed ꝑ the treasure of the Hyest. After thre dayes I will shewe the more, & talke wt the at more large, pereheup and wonderous thinges wyll I declare vnto the.

Then went I forth into the felde, geuyng prayse & thankes greatly vnto God, because of his wonders which he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and loche as is in tyme, and there I satt thre dayes.

¶ God appeareth vnto Esdras in the bush, & sheweth hym what he shall do.

¶ The.xiij.Chapter.

Vpon the thyrd daye I sat vnder an oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, & sayde: Esdras, Esdras. And I sayde: here am I Lorde, & stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: In the bush dyd I appeare vnto Moses, and talked with him, when my people serued in Egypte, & I sent hym, & led my people out of Egypt, & brought him vpō the mount Sion, where I helde him by me a longe season, & tolde hym my wonderous worckes, and shewed him the secretes of the tymes & the ende, & cōmaunded him, saying: These wordes shalt thou declare, & not hyde thē. And now I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thyne herte the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacyons which I haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned & remayne with my coūcell, & with soch as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost hys youth, and the tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuyded into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of the tenth parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after ꝑ half of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare & ordre thy house, and refourme thy people: comforte soch of them as be in trouble: and tell now of the destrucyon: let go from the mortall thoughtes: cast awaye the burthēs of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places ꝑ thoughtes that are most heuy vnto the, and haste the to flye ſyt frō theſe tymes: for ſoch euell & wyckednesse as thou haſt now ſene happē, ſhal they do yet moch worſe. For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, the more ſhall ſynne & wickednesse increase, in thē that dwell vpō earth. For the trueth is fled farre awaye / & leſynge is hard at hande. For now haſteth ſ̄ biſyon to come, that thou haſt ſene.

Then anſwered I & ſayde: Beholde Lord, I will go as thou haſt commaunded me, and reboume the people which are preſent. But they ſ̄ ſhall be borne afterwarde / who wyll exhorte or rebuke them? Thus the worlde is ſet in darckenes, & they that dwell therin, are without lyght: for thy lawe is kyndled / becauſe no man knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or ſ̄ ſhalbe done. If I haue foūde grace before the, ſende ſ̄ holy gooſt in to me, and I ſhall wryte all that hath bene done in the worlde ſens the begynnynge, which was wrytten in thy lawe / that men maye fynde ſ̄ path and that they which wyll lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he anſwered me, ſayig: Go thy waye, gather thy people together, & ſaye vnto thē / that they ſe he the not for .xl. dayes / but loke thou gather the many bare trees / & take vnto the Sarea, Dathria, Selemia / Echanus & Aſtali, theſe fyue, which are ready to wryte ſwyftly / and come hither / and I ſhall lyght a candle of vnderſtādīg in thine hert which ſhall not be put out, tyll the thynges be performed which thou ſhalt begynne to wryte. And then ſhalt thou declare ſome thynges openly vnto the perfecte, & ſome thing ſ̄ ſhalt thou ſhew ſecretly vnto ſ̄ wyſe. Tomorow this houre ſhalt thou begynne to wryte.

Then wente I forth (as he cōmaūded me) and gathered all the people together, & ſayd: Heare theſe wordes O Iſrael: Oure fathers from the begynnynge were ſtraūgers in Egypte, from whence they were delyuered / & receaued the lawe of lyfe / whych they kepte not, which ye alſo haue trāſgreſſed after thē. Then was this lande and the ſande of Sion parted amonge you by lott to poſſeſſe. But your fathers & ye your ſelues alſo haue done vnrygh tuouſnes, & haue not kepte ſ̄ wayes which the Hyeſt cōmaunded you. And for ſo moch as he is a righteous iudge, he toke frō you in tyme the thynge ſ̄ he had geuen you. And now are ye here & youre brethrē amōge you. Therfore yf ſo be ſ̄ ye wyll ſubdue your awne vnderſtandynge / and reboume youre herte, ye ſhall be kepte alyue, & after death ſhall ye optayne mercy. For after death ſhall ſ̄ iudgmēt come whē we ſhall lyue agayne: and then ſhall all the names of the righteous be manifeſt / and ſ̄ names of the vngodly with their workes ſhall be declared. Let no man therfore come now vnto me / nether aſke eny queſtion at me theſe .xl. dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he cōmaunded me) and we wente in to the fylde / and remayned there. The next daye a voyce called me ſaying: Eldras, open thy mouth, & drynke ſ̄ I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, & behold, he reached me a full cuppe / which was full a water / but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it & dranke. And when I had dronkē it, my hert had vnderſtādyng, & wyſdome grewe in my breſt: for my ſpyrete was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened & ſhut nomore. The Hyeſt gaue vnderſtandyng vnto the fyue men / that they wrote the hye thynges of the nyght / whych they vnderſtode not. But in ſ̄ nyght they ate bred: as for me, I ſpake in the daye / & helde not my tonge by nyght. In .xl. dayes / they wrote two hundred and foure bokes.

And it happened when the .xl. dayes were fulfylled, that the Hyeſt ſpake, ſaying: The firſt that thou haſt wrytte, ſpeake openly, ſ̄ the worthy and vnworthy maye rede it. But kepe the .lxx. laſt, ſ̄ thou maye ſt shew it onely to ſoch as be wyſe amonge thy people. For in them is the ſpryng of vnderſtandyng, the fountayne of wyſdome / and the ſtreame of knowledge. And I dyd ſo.

¶ The pourpoſment that euell people ſhal haue, which God commaundeth Eldras to ſhew vnto them.

¶ The .xv. Chapter.

Beholde / ſpeake thou in the eares of my people ſ̄ wordes of prophecie, which I will put in thy mouth, ſayeth the Lorde: and cauſe thē to be wrytte in a letter, for it is the trueth. Feare not the ymaginacions agaynſt the / lett not the vnfaythfulnes of them trouble the / that ſpeake agaynſt the. For all the vnfaythfull ſhall dye in their vnfaythfulnes. Beholde ſayeth the Lorde, I wyll bryng plages vpō the worlde / the ſwerde honger / death & deſtruccyon, for wyckednes hath the vpper hād in all the earth / and their ſhamefull workes are fulfylled.

Therfore ſayeth the Lorde: I wyll holde my tonge nomore vnto their wyckednesſe / which they do ſo vngodly: nether wyll I ſuffre thē in the thynges / that they deale wyth all ſo wickedly. Beholde, the innocent blond of the troubled cryeth vnto me, and ſ̄ ſoules of the righteous complayne cōtynually: & therfore (ſayeth ſ̄ Lord) I will ſurely auēge / and receaue vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

Beholde / my people / is led as a flock of ſhepe to be ſlayne / I wyll not ſuffre thē now to dwell in Egypte / but wyll bryng thē out with a mighty hand & a ſtretched out arme / and smyte it with plages as a fore / and wyll destroye all ꝑ land of it. Egypt shall mourne / & the foundacions of it shalbe smytten with the plage and punyshment / that God shall bryng vpon it.

They ꝑ tyll the grounde / shall mourne: for their sedes shall be destroyed thorow the blastyng and hayle / & an horryble starre vpo worth the worlde & them that dwell therin / for the swerde & their destruccyon drawethnye / & one people shall stande vp to fyght agaynst another / & swerdes in their hãdȝ. For men shall be vnstedfast / & some shall do vyolence vnto other: they shall not regarde their kyng & prynces / the wayes of their doynges & handelynges in their power. A man shall desyre to go in to ꝑ cyte / & shall not be able. For because of their pryde the cyties shalbe brought in feare / the houses shal shake / and men shalbe afrayed. A man shall haue no pytie vpõ his neyghbour / but one shall prouoke another vnto battayll to spoyle their goodes because of the hõger of bred / and because of the greate trouble.

Beholde / I gather & call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the vprysyng / from the South / frõ the East & Lybanus to turne vnto thẽ / & restore the thynges that they haue geuen them. Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen so will I do also / & recompense thẽ in there bosome. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: My ryght hand shall not spare the synners & my swerde shall not ceasse ouer them / that shed the innocẽt bloud vpon earth. The feare is gone out from hys wrath / and hath consumed the foundacyons of the earth / and the synners lyke the strawe that is kyndled. Wo worth them that synne / & kepe not my cõmaundementes / sayeth the Lorde. I wyll not spare thẽ. Go youre waye ye childzen frõ violence / defyle not my Sanctuary: for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne agaynst him / & therfore delyuereth he them vnto death & destruccyon: For now are the plages come vpon the worlde / & ye shall remayne in them. For God shall not delyuer you / because ye haue synned agaynst him.

¶ Beholde / an horryble vysyon cõmeth frõ the East / where generacyõs of Dragõs shal come out / and the people of ꝑ Arabes wyth many charettes / and the multytude of them shalbe as the wynde vpõ earth / that all they which heare them ragynge in their wrath / maye feare and be afrayed: and as the wylde bores oute of the wod / so shall they go out / & with greate power shall they come / & stande fryghtynge with them and shall waste ꝑ porcyon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembrynge their byrth / & shall turne aboute swearynge together in greate power / to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed / & kepe sylence at their power / & shall flee: & one out of the lande, of the Assyrians shal besege thẽ / & consume one of them / & in their hoost shall be feare & drede / and stryfe amonge their kynges.

Beholde cloudes from the East / and from the North vnto the South / & they are very horryble to loke vpõ / full of wrath & stormе. They shall smyte one vpõ another / and they shall smyte at the greate starre vpon earth & their starre / and the bloude shalbe from the swerde vnto the bely / and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shalbe great fearfulnes and tremblyng vpõ earth / & they that se the wrath / shal be afrayed / and a tremblynge shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate raynes from the South & from the North / & parte from the West / and from the stormy wynde from the East and shall shut thẽ vp agayne / and the cloude which he rayled vp in wrath / and the starre to cause feare towarde ꝑ East & West wynde / shalbe destroyed: & the great cloudes shalbe lyft vp / & the myghtie cloudȝ full of wrath / and the starre / that they maye make all the earth afrayed & thẽ that dwell therin / and that they maye poure oute ouer all places an horrybie starre / fyre & hayle & flyenge swerdes / and many waters: that all fedes maye be full / and all ryuers / and they shall breake downe ꝑ cities & walles / mountaynes and hylles / all trees / wod / & the grasse of ꝑ medowes / and all their frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babilon / & make her afrayed / they shall come to her & besege her: the starre and all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

Then shall the dust and smoke go vp vnto the heauen / and all they that be aboute her / shall bewayle her: and they that remayne vnder her / shall do seruyce vnto thẽ that haue put her in feare. And thou Alia ꝑ comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babilon / and art a worshippe of her personne: Wo be vnto the thou wretch / because thou hast made thy selfe lyke vnto her / & hast decked thy daughters in whordome, that they might triumphe and please thy louers / which haue allwaye desyred to cõmitte whordome with the: thou hast folowed ꝑ abhominable cytie in all her worckes and inuencions.

Therfore sayeth God: I wyll sende plages vpõ the / wyddowhode / pouerte / hõger / warres / and pestilence / to waste thy houses with destruccyon and death / and the glorye of thy power shall be dryed vp as a floure / when ꝑ heate aryseth ꝑ is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be seen as a poore wyfe ꝑ is plaged & beaten of wemen:

of wemen: so that the myghtye & louer shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I so hate the sayeth the Lorde: If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen/exaltynge the stroke of thy handes/& sayde ouer their death/ whē thou wast droncken: sett forth the bewtye of thy countenaunce.

The rewarde of thy whordome shalbe recompensed the in thy bosome, therfore shalt thou receaue* rewarde.

* Some reade: as rewarde.

¶ Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth the Lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the/and shall deliuer the in to the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of honger / and thou shalt fall thorow & swerde. Thy cyties shalbe broken downe/and all thyne shall perish with & swerde in the feld. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of honger/ & eate their awne flesh, and dryncke their awne blond for very hōger of bred and thyrst of water. Thou vnhappye shalt come thorow the see/& receaue plages agayne.

In the passage they shall cast downe the slayne cytie/& shall rote out one parte of thy lande/& consume the porcyon of thy glorye. They shall treade ydowne like stubble/and they shall be thy fyre and shall consume the: thy cytyes and thy lande/thy wod & thy frutefull trees shall they burne vp with & fyre. Thy chyldrē shall they cary awaye captyue/ & loke what thou hast/ they shall spoyle it/& marre the bewtye of thy face.

¶ The heathen shall be punyshed.

¶ The.xvj.Chapter.

WO be vnto the Babilon & Asia, wo be vnto the Egypt & Syria: gyrde your selues w clothes of sack & hearre/& mourne for youre chyldren/be sory, for your destruccion is at hand. A swerde is sent vpō you/& who will turne it back? A fyre is kyndled amōge you/ and who will quench it? Plages are sent vnto you/& what is he that will dryue thē awaye? Maye eny man dryue awaye an hōgrie lyō in the wod? Or maye eny man quench & fyre in the stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arowe, that is shot of a stronge archer; The mightie Lorde sendeth the plages / & what is he that will dryue thē awaye? The fyre is kyndled & gone forth in his wrath, & what is he that will quench it? He shall cast lightenynges / & who shall not feare? He shall thonder/and who shall not be afrayed; The Lorde shall threaten and who shall not vtterly be beaten to pouder at his presence? The earth quaketh/& the foundacions therof: the see aryseth vp with waues frō the depe/& the floudes of it are vnquyete and the fyshes therof also before the Lorde/ and before the glory of his power. For strōge is his right hande that holdeth the bowe/ his arowes that he shuteth / are sharpe/ and shall not mysse / when they begynne to be shot in to the endes of the worlde.

Beholde/the plages are sent / & shall not turne agayne/tyll they come vpō earth. The fyre is kyndled/ & shall not be put oute/ tyll it cōsume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arowe which is shot of a myghtye archer/returneth not backwarde: euen so the plages that shall be sent vpon earth / shall not turne agayne. Wo is me/wo is me/who wyll deliuer me in those dayes? The begynnynge of sorowes & greate mournynge: the begynnynge of darth & greate death: the begynnynge of warres / and the powers shall stande in feare: the begynnynge of euels / & they shall tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thynges, when the plages come? Beholde/honger/and plage/trouble & anguysh are sent/as scourges for amendemēt. But for all these thyngs they shall not turne from their wyckednesses / nether be allwaye myndefull of the scourges.

Beholde/vytayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth & they shall thynke them selues to be in good case: & euē then shall myschefe growe vpon earth / warres darth and great disquyetnes. For many of thē that dwell vpō earth shall perish of honger/& the other that escape the honger, shall the swerde destroye: & the dead shalbe cast oute as donge/& there shalbe no man to cōforte them. For & earth shalbe wasted / and the cytyes shalbe cast downe: there shalbe no man left to tyll the earth & to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute/& who shall plucke thē of & gather them? The grape shall be rype/ & who shall treade them? For all places shalbe desolate of men/ so & one man shall desyre to se another/or to heare his voyce. For of one whole cytie there shalbe ten left/& two in & felde/which shall hyde thē selues in the thycke bushes/ and in the clyfes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tre/or as whē a vineyarde is gathered/there are left some grapes / of them that diligently sought thorow the vyneyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shalbe thre or foure left, for thē that search their houses with the swerde. And the earth shalbe left waste/& the feldes therof shall ware olde: & her wayes & all her pathes shall growe full of thornes / because no man shall trauayle there thorow. The daughters shall mourne/ hauing no bridegromes: & w emē shall make lamentacyon, hauynge no housbādes. Their daughters shall mourne/ hauynge no helpe of their bridegrome. In & warres shall they be destroyed/& their housbandes shal perish of hyonger. ¶ Ye seruauntes of the Lorde/ heare these thynges/ & marck thē. Beholde/ the worde of ỳ Lorde ¶ receaue it: beholde/ the plages drawnye and are not slack in tarienge. Lyke as a trauaylyng womā, which after the .ix. moneth bryngeth forth a sonne/ when the houre of ỳ byrth is come an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpō her body/ & when the chylde cōmeth to the byrth/ they tary not the twynckelynge of an eye: Euen so shall not the plages be slack to come vpon earth, & the worlde shall mourne/ & sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde.

¶ O my people heare my worde, make you redy to the battayll: & in all euell be euen as pylgrems vpon earth ¶ He ỳ selleth, lett him be as he that flyeth hys waye: & he ỳ byeth/ as one that will lese. ¶ Who occupieth marchaundies, as he that wynneth not: & he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therin: he that soweth/ as one that shall not reape: he ỳ treadeth the vyneyarde, as he that shall not gather the grapes: they that marry/ as they that shall get no chyldren: and they that mary not as the wyddowes: & therfore they ỳ laboure, labour in vayne. For straungers shal reape their frutes & spoyle their goodes/ ouerthrowe their houses/ & take their chyldren captyue, for in captiuite & honger shall they get childrē And they that occupie their marchaundyses wt robbery how longe decke they their eyres their houses, their possessyons & persones: the more will I punysh them for their synnes sayeth the Lord. Lyke as an whore entyseth an honest woman/ so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquyte when she decketh her selfe, and shall accuse her to her face when he cōmeth that defendeth whych shall make inquisycyon for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye like thereunto/ ner to the worckes therof: for or euer it be longe iniquite shalbe taken awaye out of ỳ earth, & righteousnes shall raygne amonge you.

Let not the synner saye/ that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpon his head, which sayeth before the Lord God and his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde/ the Lorde knoweth all ỳ worckes of men their ymaginacyōs, their thoughtes & their hertes. For he spake but the worde: lett the earth be made, & it was made: lett the heauē be made/ & it was made. In his worde were ỳ starres made, & he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe/ & the treasures therof: he hath measured ỳ see, & what it conteyneth He hath shut the see in ỳ myddest of the waters & with his worde hath he hanged the earth vpon ỳ waters. He spreadeth out the heauen lyke a vawte, vpon ỳ waters hath he founded it. In the deserte a dyre wyldernes hath he made sprynges of water, and poles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes/ ỳ the floudes might poure downe frō the stony rockes to water the earth. He made mā, and put his herte in the myddest of the body, and gaue hym breth lyfe and vnderstandyng yre and the spyrete of the Almyghtie God/ whych made all thynges, and hath searched ỳ groūd of all the secretes of the earth.

¶ He knoweth youre ymaginacyons & inuencions, & what ye thynke when ye synne/ & wolde hyde youre synnes. Therfore hath ỳ Lord searched & sought out all your worckes/ and he shall bewraye you all And whē your synnes are brought forth/ ye shalbe ashamed before men/ and youre awne synnes shalbe youre accusers in that daye. What will ye do: Or how will ye hyde your synnes before God & his Aungels: Beholde, God hym selfe is the iudge, feare hym, leaue of from youre synnes, & forget youre vnryghteousnesses/ and medle nomore wyth them: so shall God leade you forth & deliuer you frō all trouble For beholde, the heate of a greate multitude is kyndled ouer you & they shall take awaye certayne of you/ & fede the pote wyth Idols: and they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derysyon, laughed to scorne, and trodē vnder fote.

¶ For vnto the places there shalbe a place/ and in the nexte cyties a greate insurrecyon vpon those that feare the Lorde. They shall be lyke madmen they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle & waste soch as feare the Lorde/ their goodes shall they take from them/ and shutte them out of their houses. Then shall it be knowne who are my chosen, & they shalbe tryed as the golde in the fyre Heare ¶ ye my beloued sayeth the Lorde: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I will deliuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dyspayre not for God is youre captayne.

Who so kepeth my cōmaundementes and preceptes sayeth the Lord God) let not your synnes weye you downe, and lett not youre vnryghteousnesses be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto their synnes and tangled in their wyckednesses: lyke as a feld is hedged in wyth bushes & the path therof couered with thornes that no mā maye trauayle thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre/ and brent.

¶ The ende of the .iiij. boke of Esdras.

¶ The boke of Tobiah.

¶ Tobiah beynge taken prysoner / forsaketh not the lawe of trueth. The mercy and charitye of Tobiah / and the maners of him in his youthe. He taketh Hannah to wyfe by whome he hath a sonne named Tobiah. He succoureth Gabell for moneye he and his are fayne to flye / but after the deeth of Sennaherib they returne agayne.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

TObiah was of the trybe and cytie of Nephtali / whych lyeth in the hye countrees of Galile aboue Naalon ẏ waye to warde the West, hauynge the cytie of Sephet vpon the left syde.

Though he was taken prysonner in the dayes of Salmanasar kyng of the Assirias / neuertheles beynge in captiuite / he forsoke not the waye of trueth: In so moch ẏ whatsoeuer he myght get / he parted it dayly with his felowprysoners & brethren / that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger then all in the trybe of Nephtali / yet dyd not he behaue him selfe childeshlym in his worckes. And when all the other wente to the golden calues which Jeroboam the kyng of Israel had made, he him selfe alone fled all their cõpanies & gat him to Jerusalem vnto ẏ tẽple of the Lorde / & there worshypped the Lorde God of Israel, faythfully offeryng of all his fyrst frutes and tythes / so that in the thyrde yeare he mynystred all the tythes vnto the straungers & comuertes. These and soch lyke thynges dyd he accordyng to ẏ lawe of God / when he was yet but yonge.

B But when he was a man he toke oute of his awne trybe a wyfe called Anna / & of her he begat a sonne / whome he called after hys awne name / and taught him from his youth vp, to feare God. & to refrayne frõ all synne.

Now when he with his wyfe hys sonne & with all his kynred was come in captiuite vnto Ninue, what tyme as they all ate of ẏ meates of the Heathen he kepte his soule & was neuer defyled in their meates. And for so moch as he was myndefull of the Lorde in all his hert / God gaue him fauoure in ẏ presence of Salmanasar ẏ kyng / whych gaue him power to go where he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do what him lyst.

C So wente Tobiah vnto all them ẏ were in prison and comforted them, & gaue them wholsome exortacyons. And when he came to Rages a cytie of the Medes hauyng *ten talentes of syluer (of the thynges wherwith the kynge had honoured him) & lawe amõge a greate company of people of hys kynred / one Gabelus (which was of his awne trybe) beynge in necessyte / he gaue hym the sayde weight of syluer vnder an handwrytynge.

* Some reade ten talentes of golde.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deed / and Sennaherib hys sonne reigned in his steade / whych hated the childrẽ of Israel. Tobiah wẽt dayly thorow out all his kynred and comforted them / and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them / as moch as he might. he fed the hongrie / clothed the naked and buried the deed and slayne / & that diligently.
